VOL. 55. NO. 269. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 17, 1903. PRICE, FIVE CENTS

THAT COLD LITTLE MAN, JOHN HAY, WHO HAS OUTGENERALED EUROPEAN DIPLOMATS

"The Golden Rule and the Monroe Doctrine Are the Basis of Our Conduct in International Affairs," Says the Secretary of State.

BY JAMES CREELMAN

The singular adroitness by which Secretary Hay has managed, in a letter of apology to Russia, to make the Russian ambassador's verbal assurance regarding the "open door" in Manchuria a matter of official record—followed by a sudden menace in our attitude toward Russia—again calls general attention to the remarkable man who has directed the foreign policy of the nation since it first entered upon the career of a world power—the reticent, precise post-diplomat, who has served successively as assistant to Abraham Lincoln, Horace Greeley, William McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt.

"The golden rule and the Monroe doctrine are the basis of our conduct in international affairs," said Mr. Hay to a visitor once. "If we do not drive hard bargains with other nations they will not desire to wriggle out of their agreements. If we are open and truthful in our dealings we will not have to wriggle out of anything ourselves."

Mr. Hay is small, erect and prim. He has a fastidious rather than a magisterial manner. In spite of his 64 years he has the slim, straight figure and light step of youth. He has a good square head, a wide face and a short pointed beard, frosted by age. The large dark-brown eyes shine deeply under heavy eyebrows. The forehead is broad and high, the nose retrousse but firm, the mouth hardset under a large, stiff, iron-gray mustache. The ears are large and stand out from the head.

There is something about the countenance—the high cheek bones, the great width just below the eyes, the suggestion of melancholy—that remonds one of the Slavonic type. The deep lines at the juncture of the nose and brow give Mr. Hay a cross look. The shoulders are wide and the chest ample. The hands are strong and fine.

Dresses With Greatest Care.

Mr. Hay dresses with greatest exactness. His whole personality is eloquent of a scrupulous, formal nature. He can be genial and humorously anecdotal when he will, but his ordinary official manner is governed by measured politeness.

It is hard to recognize the creator of "Jim Bludsoe" and "Little Breeches," the adoring young secretary to whom Lincoln used to read newspaper jokes at midnight; the jaunty major of the civil war, in the cold, grave secretary of state, who has successfully matched his skill and knowledge against the great chancellors of Europe.

Mr. Hay is Scotch; that may explain his caution, precision and reticence. It may also explain the gradual ascendency of intellect over an austere statesman and successful business man. The rhymster has become a millionaire, who manages his properties as well as his diplomacy.

Today he is building in Washington an apartment house that will cost more than $500,000, and already real estate experts are commenting on the shrewdness of his enterprise. He owns a piece of ground that the government desires as part of a site for a hall of records, but the government will have to pay a good price—Mr. Hay knows how to separate business from sentiment.

The Russian ambassador, who has just been pinned to the official record by Mr. Hay's clever note of apology, is not the first man to discover that the American secretary of state has a way of his own in dealing with evasive diplomacy. But the Manchurian incident is characteristic.

Russia Planned Encroachments.

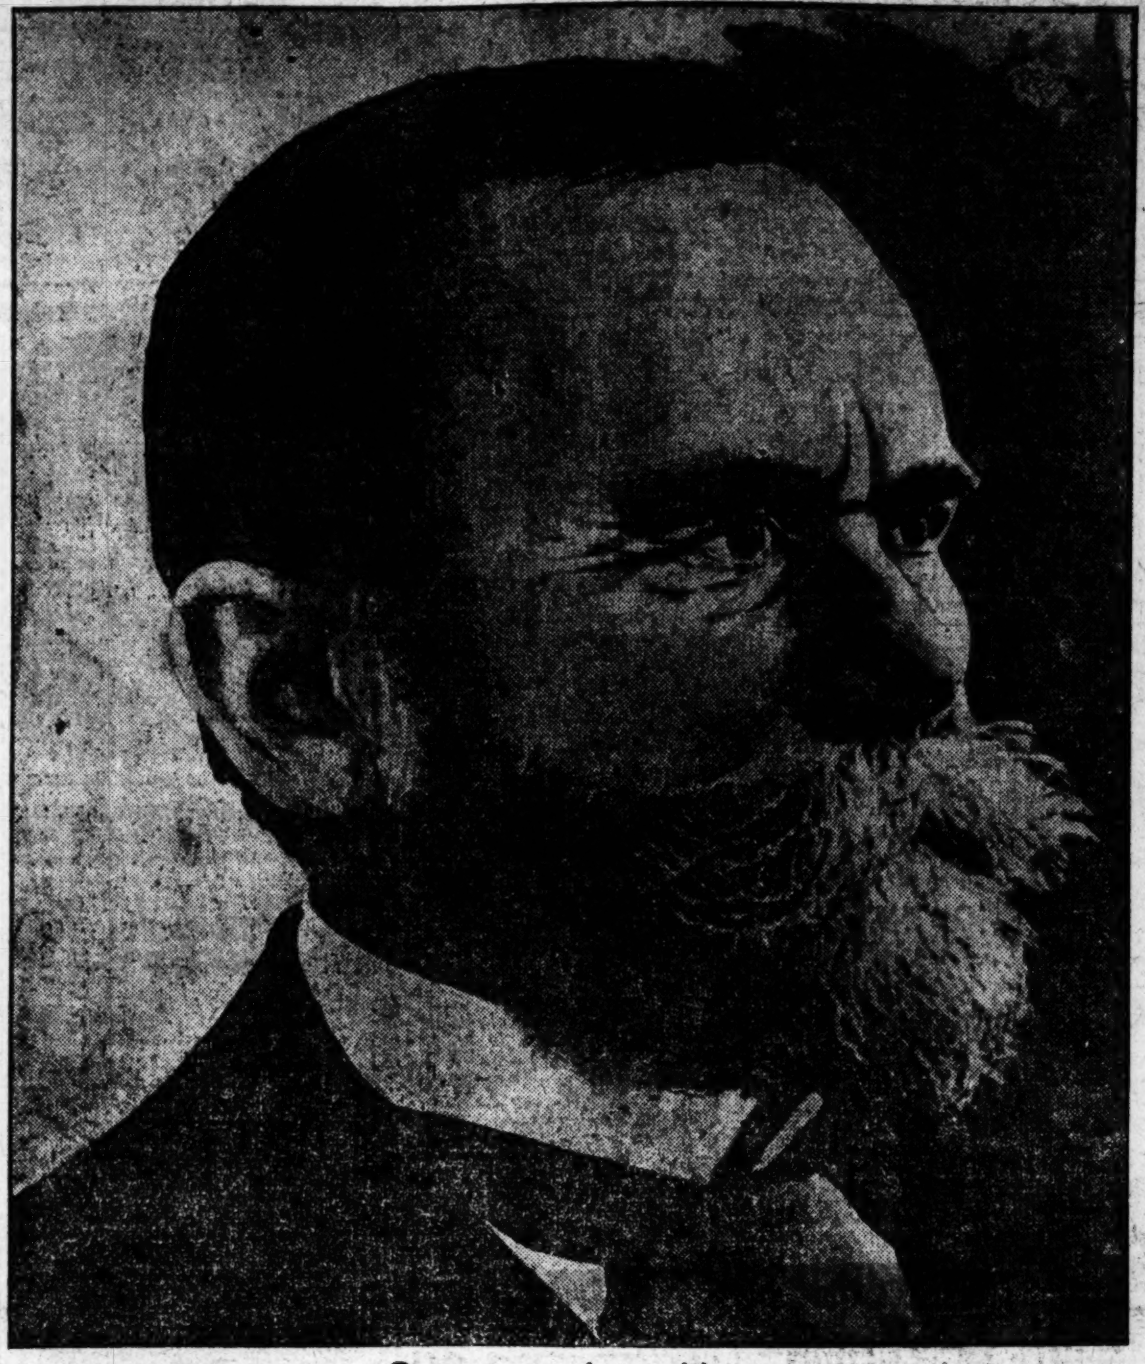
Through various official channels the department of state has been informed that the demands made by Russia upon China as conditions precedent to the withdrawal of Russian troops from Manchuria were of such a nature as to violate Russia's previous guarantee of an "open door" policy in China and imperil America's important and growing interests in the threatened province.

The United States promptly protested. Thereupon Count Cassini, the Russian ambassador, went to Secretary Hay and categorically denied the statements of Russia's demands upon China, which were the basis of the American protest.

The ambassador's private declarations, made in the nome of his government, were oral. There was no record. Mr. Hay wrote a graceful note to Count Cassini, expressing regret that the United States should have misunderstood the policy of Russia in Manchuria, and so managed, without violating the official proprieties, to put the ambassador on record publicly.

This is regarded in Washington as one of the most deft and delicate strokes of modern diplomacy, for the secret assurances thus revealed do not harmonize with reliable reports which have come from the far East.

John Hay was born in Salem, Ind., on October 8, 1838. His father was a physician. His Scotch ancestor, Adam Hay, was a soldier in the war for independence and a personal friend of Washington. Young Hay was graduated at Brown university, and then began the study of law in the office of his uncle, Milton Hay, of Springfield, Ill. Abraham Lincoln's law office was near by. Mr. Lincoln used to drop in on his neighbor and discuss politics. In that way the youth came to know the future President.



Secretary John Hay

James Creelman Writes of the Man Who Has Placed Cunning Russia on Record, Despite Her Efforts to Circumvent the United States.

After Mr. Lincoln's election he invited Mr. Hay to live in the White House and assist his private secretary, Mr. Nicolay. The President became strongly attached to his young helper. There were sleepless nights when he would go through the corridors of the White House to Hay's room, sit on the side of his bed and read to him for hours. Later on the served in the civil war with the rank of major.

After Mr. Lincoln's assassination he was appointed secretary of legation at Paris, being in charge several times. In 1867-68 he was secretary of legation and charge d'affaires at Vienna. In 1869 he was apopinted secretary of legation to Spain. While in Spain he wrote his charming book, "Castilian Davis."

Returning to America in 1870, Mr. Hay became an editorial writer for the New York Tribune. Horace Greeley regarded him as one of the most brilliant men on the Tribune staff. During that time he wrote "Little Breeches" and his other famous verses. So deep was the impression he made during his five years of journalism that, in a later time, he was in complete control of the Tribune for seven months during Whitelaw Reid's absence in Europe. The history of Lincoln which he wrote in collaboration with Mr. Nicolay greatly enlarged his literary reputation.

Did Not Ask a Favor of England.

It is a fact, which the record will bear out, that Mr. Hay did not once ask for a favor at the hands of the British government in connection with our war with Spain.

"Why don't you ask Lord Salisbury to prevent Spain from securing coal for her navy in Wales?" said an enthusiastic American.

"It is beneath the dignity of a great nation to ask for favors," said Mr. Hay, "and besides, it would be unwise to establish an unnecessary precedent."

At that very time Mr. Hay was quietly exerting every influence at his command to turn the tide of British sympathy more strongly toward the United States, but not once did he put his country in the position of a suppliant.

Although Mr. Hay secured the abrogation of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, brought about by the reference of the most far-reaching question in the recent Venezuelan dispute—priority in payment for a belligerent claimant—to the international court of The Hague, and arranged for the peaceable adjustment of the Alaskan boundary question, he is known throughout the world principally for the breadth and foresight of his policy in Asia.

Began Open-Door Movement in China.

When it became plain that Germany, Russia and other great powers were pursuing a provocative policy, aimed at the destruction and division of the Chinese empire, Mr. Hay inaugurated his now historic movement for the "open door" in China by asking France, Russia, Germany, England, Italy and Japan to give formal assurances that each nation would agree to the following policy regarding China:

"First—Will in no way interfere with any treaty port or any vested interest within any so-called 'sphere of interest' or leased territory it may have in China.

"Second—That the Chinese treaty tariff of the time being shall apply to all merchandise landed or shipped to all such ports as are within said 'sphere of interest' (unless they be 'free ports'), no matter to what nationality it may belong, and that duties so leviable shall be collected by the Chinese government.

"Third—That it will levy no higher harbor dues on vessels of another nationality frequenting any port in such 'sphere' than shall be levied on vessels of its own nationality and no higher railroad charges over lines built, controlled, or operated within its 'sphere' on merchandise belonging to citizens or subjects of other nationalities transported through such 'sphere' than shall be levied on similar merchandise belonging to its own nationals transported over equal distances."

This is the renowned "open door" promise, to which these powers agreed and which Russia is now said to be about to violate in Manchuria. Mr. Hay asked for no special consideration for the United States.

"This government does not believe in a policy of joint action with any nation," he said recently. "It may be sometimes advisable to have concurrent action; but joint action—never! We shall always preserve our independence in what we do."

ST. LOUIS' "DEATH VALLEY" WHERE CRIME HAS RUN RIOT, AND BAFFLED THE POLICE FOR YEARS

Startling List of Tragedies That Have Taken Place in the Wicked Zone and Have Gone Unpunished.

Death Valley! A few blocks in the heart of the City of St. Louis where crime stalks in its might.

Death Valley! An almost infinitesimal portion of the municipality that in its lawlessness defies the endeavors of an earnest police.

Death Valley! Where more human lives have been sacrificed in the last eight or ten years than in the so-called "Bloody Fourth" or the "Patch" or in the Second and Valentine districts.

Twelve murders reported to the police in the last eight years is but a part of the record of this nest of crime.

Chief Kiely asks: "How many not reported?" The patrolmen and the men in plain clothes admit that one-third of the crime is not exposed to the view of either the police or the public.

Crime Hidden From the Police.

It is only when a man is killed publicly or in a house where the inmates are willing to talk that the police glean any information. It is unwritten law to misguide the police as far as possible, and not to give information except under the severest duress.

Says Assistant Chief of Detectives Keeley: "We believe we have a record of the outright murders in Death Valley, but there is no doubt that many have been so wounded that they died later in some private institution unknown to the police. It is almost impossible to make arrests unless the officer is near the scene of the shooting at the time.

"It is equally impossible to detect the smaller crimes—giving knock-out drops, pocket-picking and murderous assaults. Both assailant and victim are carefully screened from the police, and when the latter finally gets to the Four Courts his description is usually so vague that it would fit a thousand men. Of course, the street knows nothing of the offense when a police inquiry is made."

Death Valley is bounded by Washington avenue on the north, Market street on the south, Nineteenth street on the east and Twenty-third street on the west.

The frequency of murders within that territory in the last five years caused the name "Death Valley" to be universally accepted even throughout the police department.

Latest Mystery Baffles Police.

The last murder was that on May 7 of Thomas Fogerty of East St. Louis. He was shot through the head by Occie Woods, keeper of a house in Chestnut street. The woman was arrested.

The mystery that Chief Desmond is bending every energy to unravel is the murder of Barney Barnett on May 4. The man conducted a lunch stand at the northwest corner of Twenty-first and Chestnut streets.

According to police information, between 3 and 4 o'clock on the morning of May 4 four strangers entered and a general order was given for ham and eggs. These were eaten without any intimation of trouble, the party laughing and matching to see who paid the bill. The man "stuck" asked Barnett what the cost was. He was told 75 cents. This angered him, and throwing down 50 cents, as he deemed was sufficient, the party walked out.

Barnett was a man of considerable spirit and a wordy war followed. It is said from the corner the man who paid the 50 cents called out that he would fix him, meaning Barnett.

Half an hour later Barnett was shot through a closed window in the back, dying almost instantly. When his assistants ran out the streets on all sides were deserted.

Detective John Shevlin has been detailed to unravel the mystery. Barnett may have had other enemies, residents of that section usually number them by the score, but it is the police theory that the lunchman was murdered by the stranger.

"The party are believed to have been from Texas," said Shevlin; "anyhow they were from out of town, and our descriptions are of the vaguest sort. As yet there is absolutely no clew to the murderer."

How One Crime Was Unraveled.

This is the same Shevlin that unraveled the most noted mystery of the many in Death Valley—the Brant case in 1898. Charles A. Brant, a stenographer in an electrical manufacturing house, was killed at Twenty-third and Locust streets on the night of July 25. He had been divorced from Minnie Harding, daughter of Col. James Harding, a retired St. Louis capitalist. The young people had met and married in Califronia, where young Brant was a hotel clerk. There were violent objections to the union on the part of Col. Harding and the young couple finally separated. The divorce followed and Col. Harding kept his daughter constantly with him. At the time of the shooting the Hardings were at Asbury Park, N. J. Letters in the man's trunk showed that the young people still loved each other and were actually planning a reunion.

Despite efforts to connect this circumstance with the crime at Twenty-third and Locust streets, the police department steadfastly stuck to the theory of highway robbery. Shevlin, then a newcomer in the detective department, was assigned by Chief Desmond on the case. He learned from a negress a year later that two men concerned in the murder were serving terms for burglary at Jefferson City. He secured confessions from and arrested the third man in Cincinnati. The men all swore they did not know Brant and had merely tried to hold him up, and when he showed fight they shot him.

A mystery that has never been solved is the murder of Mamie Reed at the southeast corner of Twenty-second street and Washington avenue, eight years ago. The woman was strikingly handsome. She had a host of admirers among the sporty male element and played no favorites, despite the violent jealousies of many. The richly gowned body was found by a patrolman in the early morning. Not a jewel or a penny had been touched. The police theory is today that she quarreled with some admirer and he, in his jealousy, slew her.

In the same year "Diamond Flossie" shot and killed a Texas rancher at the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Olive streets. What the quarrel was about the woman never divulged. There were no witnesses. She pleaded self-defense. The diamonds are gone and the woman is the shadow of her former self.

Many Slain but Few Convicted.

A quarrel and a "gun-play" in his saloon at Twenty-third and Pine streets in 1896 caused the death of James J. Amison. The customer also had a "cannon" and shot first. There was no conviction.

The killing of old Ignats Goldmann at Twenty-third and Olive streets in 1896 still remains a mystery. The man kept a restaurant and half an hour before his lifeless body was found was seen quarreling with a young man whose female companion had been often in Goldman's company. The witnesses to this quarrel could not identify the young couple and there were no arrests.

Later in that year a body was found at Twenty-third and Olive streets. The man had been shot through the head and his pockets rifled. From numerous tracts and printed matter left behind by the robber it was surmised that the victim had been a school teacher.

Early in 1897 a stranger was shot and killed at Twenty-third and Chestnut streets. There were no arrests.

"Pretty" Prettybore shot and killed a man in a fight at Twenty-third and Locust streets in 1897. Prettybore established self-defense.

In 1898 James Anderson was killed in a saloon brawl at Twenty-third and Pine streets. No convictions.

A man was found dead a few weeks later in a house on Chestnut street, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. An examination of his stomach showed a quantity of beer and arsenic. The crime was not definitely fixed.

For two years there was comparative peace in Death Valley. Then "Curley" Keyes, a notorious police character and "bad man," was shot and killed by Billy Condon in a Chestnut street house. Condon was the partner of "Bad Jack" Williams in a saloon at Nineteenth and Chestnut streets. The quarrel was over a woman. Condon never suffered for his crime.

Near the same spot in the same year, Dute Killian killed his man in a crap game. No convictions.

Chris Tomlinson was killed in 1900 in "Baldy" (John J.) Ryan's saloon at Twentieth and Chestnut streets in a brawl.

Bad Man Killed by Plucky Officer.

During that summer John Thomas Brady shot and killed James Sprule, a colored porter in a saloon at the corner of Twenty-first and Chestnut streets. The quarrel in the saloon was continued to the sidewalk, where Brady shot the negro. He was not convicted.

Then came the killing of James Smith by Nora Williams on Twenty-third street, just sout hof Chestnut, the deul between two negro porters in "Bad Jack" Williams' saloon, in which one was killed, and the picking up of a dead stranger in front of Williams' place. There were no convictions in any case.

The most notable death of the year was that of "Billy" Condon, Williams' partner. Condon had beaten a woman and made a "rough house" generally in [illegible] resort on Chestnut street, west of [illegible]ty-second. [illegible]ive George W[illegible] by the screams of the women and enter[illegible] the house. He attempted to arrest Co[illegible]don. Williams is the smallest detective [illegible] the West. Condon was big and powerf[illegible]. The saloon man was not going to stand for an arrest from a man that size and ran to the back yard. In a pistol duel there Condon was killed. Williams escaped unhurt.

In 1902 a letter carrier was shot and killed by Lottie Williams at the mouth of the alley on Twenty-third street, south of Chestnut.

William Murphy was killed by his wi[illegible] in self-defense at their home on Oli[illegible] street, near Twenty-third. The husba[illegible] had previously thrown a lighted lam[illegible] the woman and w[illegible] advancing on h[illegible] a knife whe[illegible] killed.

WHITE GIRL PROTECTED BY U.S. FROM HER INDIAN WOOER

Mary Truegiver Is Now a Ward of the Department of Justice.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

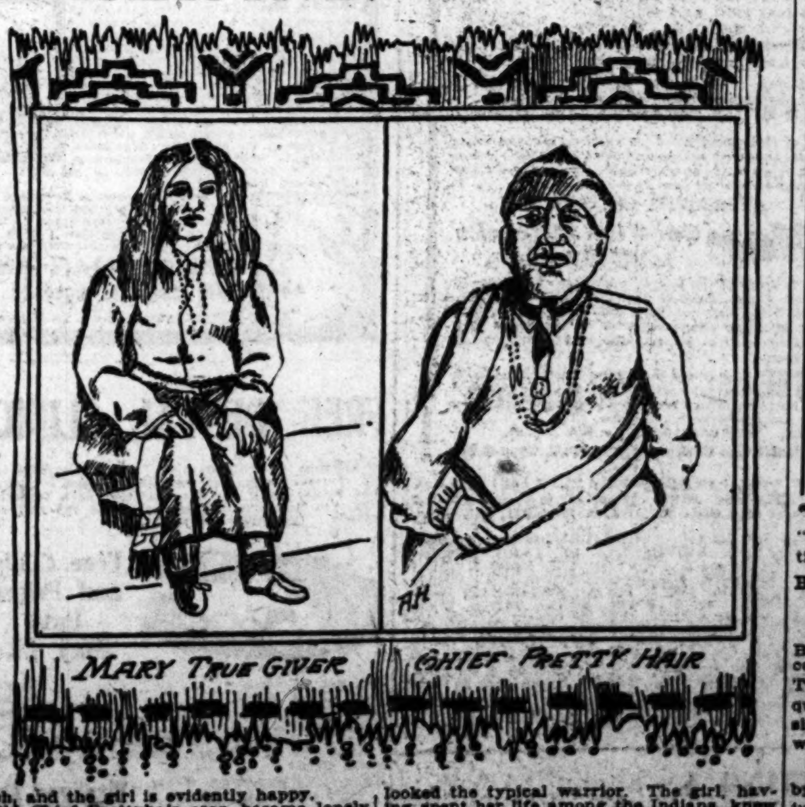
GUTHRIE, O. T., May 16.—The United States has been forced to step in and protect Mary Truegiver, a white girl of 17, from Chief Prettyhair, an Osage Indian warrior, who has been persistently and threateningly attempting to marry her.

Mary Truegiver is thought to be an orphan, at least there is no clew to her parents. The Osage Indians remember that fully 17 years ago a white man, with his wife, came to the reservation, lived there a considerable time and then suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, leaving in the log hut a pretty 8-months-old baby daughter. Near the hut of the white people lived old "Aunt" Phebe Truegiver, a squaw of the Osage tribe, in whose bosom the true instinct of motherhood rested. Not seeing anything living about the hut for several days she went to investigate and found the baby girl, more dead than alive, gave it sustenance, adopted it and gave it the best home that was possible in the Indian country.

Mary Truegiver grew up a pretty girl, always wearing the Indian moccasins, blanket and feathered headdress and was more of a daughter to the old squaw than even her Indian children. Numerous times the white girl has refused to leave her Indian foster mother to go to people of her own color. She was educated in the government schools built for the Indians, and thus her English education became fairly good.

After adopting the white girl "Aunt Phoebe" lost her husband and later married old Chief Prettyhair, a full blood warrior, now nearly 70 years old.

After the death of "Aunt Phoebe" the white girl decided to adopt the ways of her own people, and, accordingly, made application to Mrs. Julia Dell Orler, residing near Pawhuska, the capital of the Osage Nation, and was given an excellent home. Around her were thrown all the comforts her new white mother could furnish, and the girl is evidently happy.



Old Chief Prettyhair soon became lonely in his wigwam and decided to secure another wife. His first thoughts were of the white girl, now grown to young womanhood. He determined to marry her.

Donning all his war paraphernalia Prettyhair started out to see Miss Truegiver. In the Indian home the husband's wish is law; the chief's least desire is granted and in this instance the chief looked for no opposition to his plans. He camped near the new home of Mary Truegiver and immediately commenced his suit, threatening the girl with death unle[illegible] she listened and returned home with hi[illegible]. With his full equipment of war p[illegible] and knives he looked the typical warrior. The girl, having spent her life among the Indians, knew that Prettyhair meant business. The result was that she did return to his home, but refused always to be his wife.

The persistence of the girl in refusing to marry him so angered the old chief that he began a system of cruel treatment, attempting in this way to coerce her to marry him. Still did she refuse, and the cruelties were continued until telephone communications notified United States Attorney Horace Speed, in this city, of the facts. Immediately he ordered Deputy United [illegible] A. B. Hutchinson and Beni[illegible] of [illegible] rescue the girl fr[illegible]

BRYAN'S CAMPAIGN TO WIN BACK IOWA

Making a Fight There to Oust the Reorganization Element From Control.

FOLLOWERS AT HIS ORDER CONDUCT QUIET CANVASS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, Neb., May 16.—William Jennings Bryan will make Iowa the battleground for the purpose of testing the strength of the "reorganization" element of the Democratic party. Through his instrumentally the Kansas City platform adherents in Iowa are preparing to wage a fight for control of the party lost during the last campaign.

The reorganization element has been resting in fancied security and the Bryanites have already been able to do much missionary work in a quiet way since the banquet in Des Moines when Bryan issued his order commanding all of the faithful to fall into line. These forces have been at work and the results of their efforts are already to be seen. Organizations have been perfected in a number of counties and are now in control of Bryanites. One important factor in the fight which resulted in the reorganization element securing control of the convention last year appears to have dropped from sight. This factor is the active participation of ex-Gov. Boies, to whose work alone is credited the overthrow of Bryan. Why Boies is refraining from taking an active part at the present time is said to be due to his advanced age.

The convention date has been set for June 24, and between the present and then the Bryanites will force the issue of the Kansas City platform all along the line.

If the Bryanites succeed, the platform will be remarkable for its practically complete abandonment, except through the general terms of reaffirmation of the two issues which made the campaigns of 1896 and 1900 memorable. The free coinage of silver and imperialism will be relegated to the oblivion of "we hereby reaffim the declaration of principles adopted at Kansas City in 1900," and the revision of the tariff will be made the foremost, immediate and solitary casus belli against the Republicans.

As to candidates it is fully understood that none need apply for the gubernatorial nomination except a strictly steadfast Kansas City platform adherent. In consequence, but one man has been mentioned by the Byanites for this position. This man is Judge Van Wegenen of Sioux City.

The Bryanites will not make their hottest contest on the governorship. They will rather turn their attention toward securing the county offices with the accompanying political machinery, which will be in effect the laying of a wire toward controlling the state in the presidential election next year.

ERECTED IN 1712; DESTROYED IN 1903

Passing of One of the Oldest Buildings in America.

BOSTON, May 16.—A wave of materialism is sweeping away the historic landmarks of Boston. First came the East Boston tunnel, which burrowed under the old state house and made it necessary to knock out the lower end of the historic structure to provide an entrance to an underground waiting room.

Agitated Boston had hardly recovered her breath and adjusted her spectacles before contractors began demolishing the Hancock Tavern, for a time the home of the man whose bold signature appears on the declaration of independence. Next came the news that the Boston Museum was to be razed in June. And now it is the Old Corner Book Store, the oldest building in Boston and one of the oldest in America, that is to be swept away.

A protest is heard from the members of the Bostonian Society. Curtis Guild, the president, father of Lieutenant-Governor Guild, calls it "the work of vandals," and is striving to arouse public opinion to preserve the relics. His protests are falling upon deaf ears.

The Hancock Tavern stood upon valuable ground where an addition to a skyscraper is to be built. The Boston Museum is to give place to a big business block. The Old Corner Book Store, standing at the corner of Washington and School streets, is on very valuable land, and a new building will bring higher rents than the interesting but antiquated and inconvenient relic.

This building was erected in 1712, 30 years before the original Faneuil Hall, by Dr. Thomas Crease. He kept a small apothecary shop in one room on the ground floor. The building was used for different purposes until 1828, when Carter & Hendee started a small book store there.

Hawthorne's Old Desk Still There.

In 1833 William C. Ticknor, the famous bookseller and publisher, came into the firm, and from that time on the fame of the old store grew apace. James T. Fields entered the firm in 1845, the firm becoming Ticknor & Fields.

From the very first the store was the rendezvous of the ministers, authors and readers of the city. There was a sunny backyard where the clergy of the city used to meet every week, and where Emerson, Hawthorne, Holmes and Longfellow used to meet frequently. The shy and eccentric Thoreau was often seen here.

Hawthorne corrected the proofs of "The Scarlet Letter" at an old desk still in the store. Thackeray, Dickens, Matthew Arnold, Paul Bourget and many other European celebrities loitered among its books. Lucy Larcom, Louise May Alcott, Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, Mrs. Mary Livermore and other clever women shed the light of their presence among its dusty book shelves.

The "Old Corner Book Store" corpora[illegible]n, which now runs the book store, will [illegible]ove on July 1 as its lease expires on [illegible]t date. Bostonians have observed with [illegible] that the centennial celebration of [illegible]ph Waldo Emerson's birthday will oc[illegible] just at the time when this historic book store, where he spent so many hours, cease to be the meeting place of the scribes and bookworms.

TRANSIT SUITS $50,000 IN A DAY

Nine Persons Ask Heavy Damages as Results of Car Accidents.

Nine suits, asking in the aggregate for more that $50,000 damages, were filed against the St. Louis Transit company Saturday.

Half of this ammount is demanded by one plaintiff alone. She is Lulu F. Barr, formerly a stenographer in the employ of the company, who sues for $25,000. She alleges that on December 20 1901, she was about to get off a car at Vanderventer and Park avenues, when she was thrown to the ground and sustained severe injuries.

Lora M. Scherb asks for $10,000 in compensation for injuries alleged to have been sustained on April 18, 1903.

The plaintiffs in the other suits and the amounts sued by each other are as follows: Goerge Rossman, $4500; Willie Brown, $2000; Fred Schule, $1000; Joseph Broderick, $5058; R. L. Clayett, $4000; Seneca N. and S. C. Taylor, $502; Sigmund Rosenthal, $300.

BUILDING PLANS LET.

Palace Furnishes Models for German Structure.

The contracts for the official German building for the World's Fair, which is copied after the emperor's palace in Charlottenburg, and which will be built on the hill lying east of the cascades, together with the restaurant in connection with this building and the buildings for the exhibition of the German commissioner, Dr. Lewald, to Mr. Hermann Knauer, who is the architect for the German Tyrolean Alps. Work on these buildings will be commenced immediately.

KEPT FIANCEE'S MONEY.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, O., May 16.—William Burdette was placed in jail today upon a charge of embezzlement, made by his fiancee, Miss Elizabeth Criswell, who alleges that her sweetheart was intrusted with $4000 with which to purchase a farm. She claims he bought a piece of land for $2000, keeping the remaining $2000, and in addition mortgaged the property for $1000, also pocketing that amount. The couple had been engaged to marry this summer.

LOVE WON OVER GRIM WARRIORS

Much of the Romantic in Oklahoma Girl's Hasty Marriage.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GUTHRIE, O. T., May 16.—Much of the romantic entered into the wedding of Miss Ruby Butcher, the pretty daughter of a big Oklahoma cattleman, and Attorney T. W. Jones, the nephew of Major-General Shafter, U. S. A.

The ceremony took place in the center of a big pasture, near Weatherford, O. T., underneath the spreading branches of a cottonwood tree, ample enough to shield safely the entire wedding party, consisting of the bride and groom, several couples of their young friends and the minister.

Neither of the contracting parties had the consent of their respective parents, and there was something of anxiety in the faces of both, when their minds reverted possibly to angry fathers and mothers, especially as rumor states her parents had forbidden the wedding. This was the cause of the elopement and of the ceremony being undertaken in such a romantic manner.

The young couple went immediately to the home of her parents, and, like in all good love stories, the parental blessing followed. He must wait several weeks to gain the consent, or rather the blessing, of his father, who is Col. Jones, U. S. A., at present in the Philippines.

MR. SPRAGUE SAYS

Mr. Brown's Version.

DANVILLE, Ill., May 13.—This saying "I'm from Missouri, you will have to show me," originated in Gib Billings' saloon, 50 Pine street, southeast corner, when Wilson first started the opera house next door, built by Three-fingered Joe Wall fully 35 years ago. A stranger came in the saloon and wanted a certain mixed drink and Gib replied: "I'm from M'ssouri, you will have to show me," meaning the proper concoction of the beverage.

BRAVE WOMAN KILLS RUFFIAN

Mrs. Alex Lawton of Kentucky Shoots Man Who Attempted an Assault.

OWENSBORO, Ky., May 16.—Mrs. Alex Lawton shot and instantly killed Ross Richards at Sacramento, a village in McLean County, three miles from here.

Mr. Lawton was away from home and about 11 o'clock Richards went to the house and demanded admittance. He was told to go away and the frightened woman called loudly for help, but as everybody had retired and there was no one near no one came to her rescue.

Richards finally broke down the door, and, going in, sent one of the children to the kitchen to get him something to eat. When the child had gone out he fastened the door, and after making improper proposals attempted to seize Mrs. Lawton. She jumped from the bed and ran to another room, where her husband kept a loaded shotgun. This she seized, and as Richards passed through the door she fired on him, the entire charge taking effect in his right breast. He fell forward with a groan and was dead in an instant.

Mrs. Lawton then went to the kitchen and released the little girl who had been imprisoned by Richards, and, remembering that the Masonic Lodge was in session, sent the child there for help.

The men came quickly and removed the body from the house and notified a magistrate, who held an inquest. Mrs. Lawton told the story of the killing and the jury returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Mrs. Lawton is 33 years old and belongs to an excellent McLean County family. She has three small children, the oldest being 9 years old.

CHILDREN TORMENTED HER.

Mrs. Glaser Says Husband Did Not Stop Them.

Mrs. Katherine Glaser, who was married in May, 1900, yesterday brought suit for divorce. She alleges that she has been subjected to general indignities. Her husband, Jacob Glaser, has three children by a former marriage, and Mrs. Glaser says that these children were in the habit of annoying her and calling her names, and that her husband would not stop them.

The couple have been living apart since May, 1903.

Lost Power Restored

To Men of All Ages If Decline is From Unnatural Cause.

There is not a man in existence who is suffering from impotency that we can not rebuild and strengthen so as to accomplish the greatest desire and experience the keenest satisfaction, and after we have cured a case of this kind there will never again be a sign of weakness, except brought on by imprudence.

OUR GUARANTEE IS NOT A DOLLAR NEED BE PAID
UNTIL CURED.

OUR SPRING OFFER.

In view of there being so many afflicted with private and chronic pelvic diseases, who are treating with quack specialists and inexperienced physicians without receiving any benefit, we have decided to make a special offer to charge only one-half of our regular fee for curing those who are now undergoing treatment elsewhere and are dissatisfied, provided they come to us before June 1, 1903. For instance, if you are affected with either Piles, Rupture, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Stricture or Nervous Decline, our charge for curing either of which, without any complication, is $25.00, we will cure you for $12.50, and accept the money in any way you may wish to pay. We will also cure Contagious Blood Poison for $25.00, which is just half our regular fee. This liberal offer is made to enable those to be cured who have spent their money in doctoring without relief, and to show the many who have treated with dozens of physicians without benefit that we have the only methods that produce a lifelong cure.

About three-fourths of the male population from 20 to 60 years of age are troubled with an abnormally weak condition of the organs of procreation, and during this period, by all means and at all times, this function should afford pleasure of the highest degree, with no impediment whatever to the satisfaction of the disposition. The only obstacle to the enjoyment of Nature's most treasured gift to man is disease which is invariably brought on by the youth in his teens or the many excesses to which man is apt to be addicted. Varicocele, emissions, drains, premature discharge, small organs, weak back, all are symptoms of rapid decline.

OUR CURE is a thorough and scientific course of treatment, which acts at once upon the nerve forces, stopping the drain and replacing the worn out and run down tissues. It increases the weight in sound, healthy flesh and muscles that give strength and fills the brain and nerves with fresh vitality, building up the entire system and transforming the sufferer into a type of perfect manhood.

CONSULTATION FREE AND INVITED. Full information and treatment will be given by mail in case you cannot visit our office. Every man can take our treatment, because our charges are moderate, and never any more than anyone can conveniently pay. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated our methods and terms. Office hours: 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; 7 p. m. to 8 p. m.; Sundays, 9 to 1. Address or call on

BIG BALLOON SHAPED JUST LIKE A BIRD

Hugh Bastin Has for St. Louis Airship Contest a Machine With Wings, Beak and Tail.

LEBAUDY'S SUCCESS SUITS SANTOS-DUMONT

"Anything to Advance the Cause of Ballooning," He Tells the Post-Dispatch.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, May 16.—T. T. Hugh Bastin of Brixton has invented a mechanical bird balloon to compete at the St. Louis Exposition for the airship prize. The wings can be controlled separately, and one man by working one lever, it is asserted, can regulate every requisite movement of soaring, steering, flying, hovering and descending. The motive power is supplied by a pretroleum engine and propulsion is achieved by air resistance to the beating of the wings.

This "bird" is cylindrical and has a pointed nose and tail. All the weight is below the wings, thus maintaining its equilibrium. When the wings are set beating the model needs needs two men to hold it back. Mr. Bastin expects to attain a speed of 150 miles an hour with a full-sized bird.

M. SANTOS-DUMONT TALKS AIRSHIP

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, May 16.—The Post-Dispatch correspondent sat an hour last evening with Santos-Dumont on the balcony of his handsome entresol at 114 Champs Elysees, at a time when the avenue was swarmed with the finest array of equipage in the world returning from the Bois de Boulogne. Santos was just back from an afternoon's outing in his three-and-a-half-horse power runabout airship, known as No. 9, and the conversation was about the Lebaudy balloon trial and the possibilities of the future.

No petty jealousy of rivals is harbored Santos-Dumont.

"I was delighted with the outcome of the Lebaudy trial," he said. "Anything to advance the cause of ballooning is heartily welcomed by me. I only wish that overhead there was a parade of steerable balloons like this procession of carriages rolling by below and I believe the time will come when there will be.

"I am going to try my No. 7 soon, making upward of 40 miles an hour. The advocates of flying machines without balloon attachments assert that any such speed will shatter a balloon. I will show them the contrary.

While I believe air navigation possible without balloons it will always be limited to two or three persons in a car, whereas my confidence in No. 10—which can take up 12 people besides the engineer—is unlimited.

"The success of the Lebaudy trial bears out my optimistic predictions.

"I saw the big Deutsch balloon inflated at Saint Cloud today for the first time, and shall await the experiments with it interestedly.

"The reason I think flying machines possible is because we have a motor which can generate one horsepower for every six pounds in weight, which is even more than the wonderful American Eagle can do, not to mention the turkey, which can't fly at all—and both weigh much more than six pounds. Yet I believe the conquest of air will be achieved by steerable balloons capable of carrying many persons."

Emmanuel Aime, formerly Santos-Dumont's factoctum and secretary, says that in his opinion both Lebaudy and Santos are on the wrong tack. He thinks balloons will never control the air, even with motors capable of making headway against strong currants, for much resistance would shatter balloons. Such attempts he deems interesting as experiments, but practically useless. He is working himself incessantly at Nanterre on a flying machine without a balloon. He believes it will raise his 9-year-old son and maintain its equilibrium at a height of several yards and that when this is accomplished all will be possible.

M. Calletet, a member of the institute and of its Comte on areostatics, agrees with Mr. Aime that the conquest of air can be achieved only by a machine heavier than the air and that the future flying machine will no more resemble a bird than the Deutschland resembles a whale.

The Lebaudy airship is 170 feet long, 30 in breadth and has a capacity of 2,558,000 cubic feet.

POPE LIKES AMERICANS FOR BRIDES

APPROVES OF MIXING WITH WESTERN SPIRIT

Best Dowry Is a Share of the Qualities Which Make United States Great.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

ROME, May 16.—An audience of more than common interest to Americans took place in the Pope's private apartments on Sunday, when he received Prince Cammailio Rospigliosi, the commander of the noble guard, who was accompanied by his son, Don Giovanni Rospigliosi, and the latter's fiancee, Ethel Bronson, an American girl.

The Pope welcomed the visitors cordially, and bestowed a special blessing upon the couple, intimating an intention of presenting to the bride a wedding gift.

"The richest dowry your American bride could possibly bring you," Leo remarked to the young prince, "would be some of that activity and determination to which her country owe its greatness and prosperity."

The Pope is strongly in favor of the sons of the Roman nobility marrying American or English girls, not only on account of the financial advantages, but because he is convinced that the somewhat torpid nature of the Roman aristocracy must derive great benefit from a strain of more energetic blood.

Miss Bronson had the misfortune to lose her mother last year in Rome, and since then she has been living in the Palazzio Borghese, where she occupies a magnificent apartment with her chaperon, Miss Wingate.

Prince Giovanni is a nephew of Prince Guiseppe Rospigliosi, whose marriage to the divorced Mrs. Parkhurst excited so much interest. Hitherto he has been regarded as a confirmed bachelor and his uncle's heir presumptive, but Prince Giuseppe's marriage subsequent to the birth of a child put an end to his hopes, so he came to the conclusion that the best thing to do was to marry an American heiress himself.

The wedding will take place June 6.

SCORNS THE SMART SET

Carnegie Tells Some Things About "Raw Pork, Jr.," That Shows His Ire.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

Andrew Carnegie left for Skibo Friday. He filled from three to four public engagements every day of his thirteen days' stay in London, and, frail as he looks, seemingly was none the worse for the exertion.

Nothing seems to have roused him while here so much as the suggestion that he belonged to the "smart set" in America.

"Do you think we belong to the 'smart set'?" he asks. "Do you think I belo[illegible] it? No man of real influence in Americ takes these people seriously. All that Ra Pork, Jr., and its 'smart set' achieve to make themselves ridiculous by playin at caste and by aping the European ari tocracy. We merely laugh at them. Th count absolutely for nothing in the life our nation.

"In America more than anywhere els is 'three generations from shirt sleeves shirt sleeves.' There is no single heredit fortune in America which is not being s up. Aristocracy cannot exist without primogeniture and entail, and our laws know neither."

GIRLS CAUSE BAD MIX-UP

Disappearance of a Spanish Maiden Finally Brings Consternation to All.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

MADRID, May 16.—Nine years ago Maria Guadalupe mysteriously disappeared from her home in Plasencia. She was the daughter of a well-to-do farmer, and neither money nor effort was spared to find her. At last the girl was given up for dead.

Two years ago a girl appeared in the village streets hawking ribbons, and passers-by noted a striking resemblance to the missing Maria, but the girl insisted that they were mistaken; that she was Felipa Ruiz and that she never had heard of the missing Maria. But she was finally persuaded to lay claim to the heritage left by Maria's father.

Later she married a prosperous young tradesman, and nothing more was thought of the affair, until a few days ago, when a woman made her appearance and claimed she was the real Maria Guadalupe.

The citizens took sides. Some said she was an imposter and others claimed Felipa was a fraud. Finally Felipa, who had been enjoying the other's wealth, came out with a straightforward statement and insisted that she was not the heiress.

She has been arrested and her marriage has been annulled by the courts. Yet the people believe the mystery is not yet settled. And the amusing part of it all is that Felipa's husband, according to the laws of Spain, finds that he is married to the re[illegible] whom he never saw [illegible]

PHOTOGRAPHS AT 200 MILES

Marconi's Radiograph Has Already Done Wonders and Will Do Greater.

LONDON, May 16.—Henniker Heaton, M. P., England's leading postal reformer, has just returned from Rome, whither he accompanied his intimate friend Marconi. He told the Post-Dispatch correspondent today of the latest scientific wonder, which he saw there, the taking of photographs at the distance of from 20 to 25 miles.

"I visited one Marconi radiograph station, three miles outside of Rome, in the Campagna," he said, "and was shown there perfect photographs of a large size taken by electricians and scientists from that station of views in the mountains 25 miles away. How this marvel was accomplished is their secret. Whether it was done by some new way or an entirely new discovery, I am unable to say.

"The photographs were clear, bringing out in sharp definition the outline of houses and the figures of men and women as though taken only 10 or 20 yards off. They appear able to extend or narrow the field at will.

"One of the operators told me that in a short time they hope to be able to take photographs of objects and places 200 miles distant and enable you to see the person you are telegraphing to at that range.

"No one is permitted to enter the radiograph station, and, so far, the secret has been admirably kept."

LONDON, May 16.—The wedding of Lieut. Marshall C. Roberts and Miss Irene Murray has been fixed for May 22, and will be in the guards' chapel. It is remarkable that the bridegroom, a former New Yorker, who never has been naturalized as a British subject, should have been granted a commission in the Scots Guards.

BERLIN, May 16.—Non-commissioned Officer Kisch, who has been sent to prison for a year and a half for maltreating soldiers, said he inflicted torments on the recruits because he had been compelled to suffer when he himself was a recruit.

He boxed the ears of almost all the recruits daily, prodded them in the back, struck them in the face, used his whip liberally and amused himself between times by chasing the men under beds, making them scramble under five beds as often as fifty times in succession. During gymnastic exercise he made them pick up filth from the ground with their mouth, like dogs. He also compelled recruits to rub down each other's bodies with a scrubbing brush and sand. At other times the men had to flog each other.

PARIS, May 15.—"Monieur Charley," the manager of the Mercedes automobile concern in Paris, said yesterday to the Post-Dispatch correspondent:

"I have two orders from Charles M. Schwab and have just received a cable dispatch directing that the 60-horsepower automobile ordered be ready June 6. I have also another order for one 90-horsepower machine similar to that made for the King of the Belgians. The report that a 120-horsepower machine has been ordered is untrue. None such exists.

"The Mercedes company is arranging to build a mammoth hotel on Rue de Presbourg, between avenues Kleber and Victor Hugo, to compete with the Elysee Palace Hotel."

There Will Be a 100-Horse Power Defender in International Race.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, May 15.—S. F. Edge, the present holder of the Gordon Bennett international automobile trophy, is having a motor car built for the coming contest which, he asserts, will attain a speed of 100 miles an hour by means of its 100-horsepower engine. He says:

"By means of a new contrivance I can start the car at top speed or stop it, without resort to intermediate speed levers.

"On a course like that for the Gordon Bennett race, where one must make from thirty to forty stops in 360 miles, the ability to jump off into full speed will be a great advantage, as I hope to demonstrate.

"The body of the car will be just under a ton, and the wheel base will be rather longer than usual—8 feet 6 inches by 4 feet 8 inches—to prevent skidding when traveling at top speed.

Mr. Edge expects to have his "defender" out for a trial spin within a fortnight.

PARIS, May 16.—"The Girl From Maxim's" is dead.

She was not the first "Girl from Maxim's" to die, and will not be the last.

This one, though fair to look upon, was strangled. She was known as Berthe de Brienne, lived on Rue Chalgrin in luxury and had many jewels.

She met a man named Martin, who has just been arrested at Glasgow, as her murderer. He had sold $6000 worth of stolen jewels for $600.

He was known as Bras de Fer, a circus strong man, and had a fascination for women of a certain kind, though his pictures show him to look like a butcher in his Sunday clothes.

The other "Maxim" girls are terrorized, each believing that she is exposed to the same danger. The girl was killed in Rue du Boulet.

A wife said to her husband: "My love for you is dead. I am going to leave you for a man who loves me. Louis R."

"Why do that?" asked the husband. "Why not have him come and live with us?"

That arrangement was made and lasted eight months, when the husband changed his attitude, telling Louis to get out.

Louis protested and appealed to the wife, who gave him no consolation, saying she had learned to love her husband. Overcome, Louis shot himself.

Then the wife, remorse-stricken, reproached her husband and left him, saying he had been rude and harsh to Louis.

GOLD BRICK MEN WERE FOOLISH

Attempt to Swindle an Indiana Farmer With an Old Game.

FARMER HAD READ THE DAILY PAPERS

Notified the Police of the Actions of the Two Men and They Were Placed Behind the Bars.

VINCENNES, Ind., May 16.—C. Roberts and C. L. Jerome are under arrest here charged with trying to sell two gold bricks to William H. Brevoort.

Mr. Brevoort is one of the wealthiest farmers in the State, and owns several thousand acres of land below Vincennes and an elegant home in Vincennes. Sunday a stranger, giving the name of C. Roberts and claiming to be a miner from California, called on Mr. Brevoort and told him a pretty story about having had a rich gold mine pointed out to him by an old Mexican woman whom he had befriended years ago.

He and a man named William Brevoort had secured the claim though they had little faith in the old woman's story. Both not realizing the value of their claim, had wandered away. Recently, Roberts said, he received notice that the claim was fabulously rich, and that the owners must prove their claim. He had lost the address of Brevoort, but claimed to have heard of a man here by that name, and had come here thinking it was his former partner, but he was not the man.

He then offered to give Mr. Brevoort a third interest in the mine for his assistance. Mr. Roberts produced two immense bars of yellow metal, which he said he had taken out of his gold mine in Mexico. Mr. Brevoort's suspicions were aroused, but he kept quiet, waiting to get some evidence to convict the man.

Finally Roberts suggested that Mr. Brevoort get some one to test the "gold," but he declined. Then Roberts started out to hunt some one to assay the metal. He soon returned and stated that he had chanced to meet Charles L. Jerome, a government assayist of Philadelphia.

Mr. Jerome at first declined to do the work, as it was Sunday, but finally bored a hole in the metal and pronounced it pure gold. He placed the value of the two bars at $27,200, and wanted to buy it, but Roberts refused to sell. Finally he bought the borings and paid $9 to Mr. Roberts, which the later divided with Mr. Brevoort, who was to get a third interest in the mines.

Brevoort notified the police after making an engagement to meet Mr. Roberts this morning. When Roberts called he was confronted by Chief Dunn and Capt. Kruse, who arrested him. Jerome was arrested a moment later in a buggy where he was waiting for Roberts. Jerome had the keys to the trunks in which Roberts carried the gold bricks.

REVIVE RANK OF VICE-ADMIRAL.

Officers of That Rank, It Is Said, Needed in Handling of Large Fleets.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Rear Admiral Taylor, chief of the bureau of navigation, is making plans to revive the grade of vice-admiral in the United States navy. Secretary Moody will take the matter under consideration when he returns to Washington and will probably insert a recommendation in his annual report. Mr. Long, when secretary of the navy, earnestly favored the revival of the grade, especially for the purpose of settling the Sampson-Schley controversy.

On the Asiatic station there are three officers of the rank of rear admiral—Evans, Cooper and Stirling. On the North Atlantic station there are four rear admirals—Barker, Coghlan, Sands and Wise. In the interest of simplicity it is advisable that one vice-admiral should be in command of each fleet.

ARMY SENTENCES MAY BE REVERSED

Important Point to Be Decided by Judge Thayer of Federal Court.

DECISION IS ANXIOUSLY AWAITED BY SOLDIERS

If Law is Revised it Would Set About 300 Prisoners Now in Military Prisons Free.

FORT LEAVENWORTH, Kan., May 16.—Edward M. Brodie and James Coffey, two military convicts serving a life sentence in the federal prison, have raised a question as to the legality of their sentence and applied to Judge Thayer of the federal circuit court of appeals for a writ of habeas corpus.

The case was heard at St. Paul May 5, and decision may be expected any day. The point involved is whether an army court-martial has the power to delegate any of its functions, exclusively vested by law in a trial court, to the reviewing authority, and permit it to award a part of the punishment.

The terms of the sentence awarded in each of these cases reads: "To be confined at hard labor, at such place as the reviewing authority may direct, for the term of his natural life."

The contention of the prisoners is that such a sentence is wholly void for the reason that the military law expressly requires the court-martial, or trial court, to determine whether the place of punishment shall be a penitentiary or post prison; and that such a court cannot delegate that power to its court of appeals, the reviewing authority, but must itself exercise that power, and not having done so, its sentence in these cases is void.

This is the most important army law question raised for many years, far more important than that involved which led to the discharge by the supreme court of Capt. Deming, a volunteer officer, on the ground that he was tried by a court-martial illegally composed of regular army officers, contrary to the plain direction of the law.

Should the court hold the point raised by the petitioners to be valid it will bring about the discharge from confinement of something like 300 military prisoners within the United States and the Philippines.

Behind these two cases is a story that fully proves the fear entertained by the war department that an examination of the law involved will secure a favorable decision for the prisoners and utterly demolish the notion long entertained by the judge advocate's corps that decisions, or opinions, emanating from its personnel have the force of law.

Thomas Gaffney, a military convict serving a 15-year sentence, appealed to Judge Thayer for a hearing of his case, on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus on the grounds above set forth. The prisoner wrote a most pathetic letter to the court and his appeal was heard. May 4 was fixed as the date when the briefs to be submitted would be taken up and the necessity of having the prisoner there in person was dispensed with.

The expense of printing the brief in Gaffney's case was borne by Brodie and Coffey. Their purpose was to let the case be decided on the brief prepared for Gaffney, as their case was identical, and Gaffney's discharge would mean their discharge. After all these preparations had been made the war department ordered Gaffney's discharge by telegram, thus preventing a hearing of the merits of the points involved.

The slender means of Brodie and Coffey having been depleted in the printing of Gaffney's brief, they were joined by two other prisoners, having been given a sentence under like conditions. They promptly applied to Judge Thayer for permission to have their cases heard on the same brief prepared for Gaffney, and this the court did. The result is of immense importance, not only to the prisoners concerned but to the army at large.

THE BOY GOT A CAKE

Engine Crashed Into Baker Shop and Boy Who Escaped Caught "Goody" and Ran Away.

NEW YORK, May 16.—When the children of the district were flocking to school today engine No. 105, with a roar and rattle and whistle suddenly appeared in Atlantic avenue, Brooklyn, bound for a fire at No. 354 Hicks street.

In front of a baker shop, at No. 66 Atlantic avenue, a boy about 6 years old, with an armful of books, stepped off the curb into the street in front of the engine and stood statue-like, with an expression of admiration directed toward the onrushing engine.

The whistle shrieked in vain.

"Look out," a score of voices called, and several men on the sidewalk rushed to pull back the boy. They couldn't reach him in time.

The driver of the engine, when the breath of the horses was almost brushing the boy's face, suddenly pulled them to the right.

In a flash the team and engine were on the sidewalk, crashing into the windows of a baker shop. Pound cake, pies, ginger snaps, angel cake mingled with shattered glass rained down on the head of the boy.

"Oh," he exclaimed, as he stooped and picked up a sugar-coated ginger cake. Before the firemen had recovered from the shock the little fellow's fat legs had carried him away. The front of the baker shop was wrecked and the horses seriously injured. The driver escaped unhurt.

"I authorize you to emphatically deny as a mere newspaper invention the rumor that the United States is the Mafia's haven of refuge. That society knows its interests too well to quarrel with its own security. Nevertheless the police here are keeping a strict watch upon the Mafia.

PRESIDENT COMMERCIAL CLUB, OF LOUISIANA, SAYS:
"THERE IS NO FINER MEDICINE THAN PE-RU-NA."

Suffered With Kidney and Liver Trouble for Twelve Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Him—Feels Better Than for Twenty Years.

Hon. William Watson Washburn, President of the Louisiana Commercial Club and a very well-known man of New Orleans, La., writes from 637 Canal street:

"I am satisfied that there is not a finer medicine placed before the public today than Peruna. I have been troubled for nearly twelve years with kidney and liver trouble, and at times I have been a pretty sick man, unable to attend to my duties. I had about made up my mind that no medicine could help me, when one of your booklets was brought to my office which I read in a leisure hour. I then decided to give Peruna a trial and found that I had at last secured the right medicine for me. For two months I used it faithfully and then felt so well—I was like a young man once more. This was over a year ago and I have not had any trouble since. Although I am in the seventies I feel better and more active than I did thirty years ago."—W. W. WASHBURN.

Tried Other Remedies in Vain.

Mr. E. F. Post, 138 Bleecker street, New York City, writes:

"Catarrh has troubled me for some years past. I read of the cures effected by Peruna in the newspapers and after having tried other remedies in vain got complete relief from your remedy. I have no hesitation in recommending Peruna to those who suffer from catarrh."—E. F. Post.

Mr. Post was for three years, 1896, 1897 and 1898, a member of the New York Assembly. He is now giving his whole time to the insurance business and holds a responsible position under the John Hancock Insurance Co. of Boston. His office is at 138 Bleecker street, and his residence at 128 W. Thirty-sixth street.

Pe-ru-na of Value in Kidney Trouble.

Mr. H. M. Rice, 801 Elliott Square, Buffalo, N. Y., is Secretary of the Pan-American College Students' Association.

"I indorse Peruna because I have found it of value for stomach or kidney troubles. I was cured in fourteen days of a severe case of catarrh of the stomach which had left me weak and nervous.

"I am now as well and strong as any man could wish to be, and enjoy good health, thanks to its daily use.

"Several young men of my acquaintance who have suffered with stomach trouble, liver and kidney disorders, have been cured by Peruna, so I feel convinced of its merits."—H. M. Rice.

Liver Complaint Resulting From a Cold.

Miss Jessie F. Podmore, Saranac Lake, N. Y., is President of the Saranac Woman's Athletic Club. She writes:

"Three years ago I had a severe attack of liver complaint which originated from a neglected cold. My system was clogged up, and finally my liver became affected. I had severe headaches, backaches and lack of vitality soon told on my nervous system.

"Peruna proved my true friend, and five bottles completely restored my health and former vigor. I was very much surprised and am now a firm friend and strong believer in your medicine.

"Several of my friends who have suffered with stomach derangements and catarrh have also been speedily cured."—Jessie Podmore.

From time immemorial cathartics and diuretics have been used as the proper remedies for liver and kidney diseases. If a man has anything the matter with his liver give him a cathartic (cholagogue), so the doctors say, and so the people say. If the kidneys do not act properly give a diuretic; so the doctors say, so most people say. Thus it is the liver and kidneys are prodded and whipped into greater activity every time their functions flag.

Such people do not seem to understand that there is any such disease as catarrh of the liver, and catarrh of the kidneys. Cathartics and diuretics only aggravate catarrh of the liver and kidneys. Peruna is neither a cathartic nor diuretic. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. This explains why it is that Peruna cures a great number of liver and kidney diseases in which the usual remedies fail.

It is worse than useless to prescribe cathartics for catarrh of the liver. It is worse than useless to prescribe diuretics for catarrh of the kidneys. Such remedies only irritate and make matters worse. Peruna cures such cases promptly and permanently. Peruna cures catarrh wherever it lurks in the system, whether of the head, nose, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys, liver or pelvic organs.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

To Prove What Swamp-Root, the World-Famous Kidney, Liver and Bladder Remedy, Will do for YOU, Every Reader of the Post-Dispatch May Have a Sample Bottle Sent Free by Mail.

HUGO HUTT.

AST. CHIEF. HENDERSON.

CAPT. FRASER.

I wrote to Dr. Kilmer & Co., at Binghamton, N. Y., for a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, and its effect upon me was so noticeable that I bought a supply, and after taking a few bottles of Swamp-Root I had entirely recovered, and in six months I became the man you see me now. I had kidney trouble, aggravated by bladder trouble. Was obliged to pass water often day and night, had back ache, and was run down generally. A few bottles of this remedy did more for me than a dozen physicians could.

Hugo Hutt
2223 Vine St.
Philadelphia (Pa.) Fire Dep't.

I am a firm believer in that wonderful remedy, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. It's a great medicine when a man is not feeling well; after exposure or loss of sleep and irregular meals. It is also a great medicine to tone up and regulate a man. There is such a pleasant taste to it and it seems to go right to the spot. I use it and recommend it. There is more Swamp-Root used by Kansas City firemen than any other medicine twice over.

Yours truly,
Alex. Henderson
Assistant Chief,
Kansas City (Kansas) Fire Dep't.

I cheerfully give my endorsement to Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, which I sincerely believe, from my own experience, stands at the head of all known curatives for kidney, liver and bladder troubles

My own cure and also my personal observation during years of service in the Toledo Fire Department, have convinced me that Swamp-Root is a medicine of wonderful merit. I have seen many who had been pronounced incurable, speedily restored to health by Swamp-Root.

Yours Respectfully,
G. W. Fraser
No. 1 Engine House,
Toledo (Ohio) Fire Department.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, because as soon as your kidneys are well they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for many kinds of diseases, and if permitted to continue much suffering with fatal results are sure to follow. Kidney trouble irritates the nerves, makes you dizzy, restless, sleepless and irritable. Makes you pass water often during the day and obliges you to get up many times during the night. Unhealthy kidneys cause rheumatism, gravel, catarrh of the bladder, pain or dull ache in the back, joints and muscles; makes your head ache and back ache, causes indigestion, stomach and liver trouble; you get a sallow, yellow complexion, makes you feel as though you had heart trouble; you may have plenty of ambition, but no strength; get weak and waste away.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is used in the leading hospitals, recommended by physicians in their private practice, and is taken by doctors themselves, because they recognize in it the greatest and most successful remedy that science has ever been able to compound.

SPECIAL NOTICE — Swamp-Root, the great Kidney, Liver and Bladder remedy, is so remarkably successful that a special arrangement has been made by which all of our readers who have not already tried it may have a sample bottle sent absolutely free by mail. Also a book telling all about kidney and bladder troubles and containing many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women cured by Swamp-Root. In writing, be sure and mention reading this generous offer in the St. Louis Sunday Post-Dispatch, when sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y.

SEVERAL LARGE DEALS IN CENTRAL BUSINESS PROPERTY

CITY HOSPITAL PROPERTY SOLD

WESTERN UNION CO. WILL FIND HOME ON BROADWAY

Quiet Work in Realty Circles Is Believed Not to Indicate Commencement of Summer Dullness.

There is always a calm before a storm. This trite saying is apropos as regards the local realty situation. The business for the past two weeks has been remarkably quiet as compared with the strenuous times which previously characterized it and the pessimists of the craft had become fearful lest the mid-summer dullness had prematurely set in. Fortune has, however, evidently not so decreed. A number of important deals, which have been in negotiation for some time past, have been brought to a successful consummation, and the outlook for continued activity is at once reassuring.

The Mercantile Trust Co., acting for the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., yesterday sold the Convent of the Good Shepherd block, the present temporary City Hospital, bounded by Seventeenth, Eighteenth, Pine and Chestnut streets, to Isaac H. Lionberger, the millionaire attorney, for $250,000.

The sale, in point of consideration, relegates all other sales of the year of virtually vacant property, to the back ground, being in fact the largest purchase in this class since the Park View Realty and Improvement Co. paid a million dollars for the celebrated Catlin tract. The grantors were the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., which is composed of a coterie of well-known St. Louis business men and capitalists.

Mr. C. M. McMillian stated last night that this was not literally speaking an outright sale, but was in effect the same thing, Mr. Lionberger acquiring over nine-tenths interest in the property, or over 90 per cent of the capital stock of the corporation.

Improvement Plans Are Not Fully Made.

As a matter of convenience Mr. Lionberger bought the stock from the various members of the company, obviating the necessity of the transfer by deed.

The property is at present occupied by the city of St. Louis as a temporary hospital at a rental of $12,000 per annum.

Mr. Lionberger has no definite plans for the improvement of the property.

The site, which is only a block from Union Station, has a total frontage of 1104 feet on the four streets, and forms one of the choicest pieces of vacant property in the business district.

Real estate men believe that now that it has passed to more enterprising hands it will only be a matter of a short time when the old rookeries which now occupy the site will give place to improvements in keeping with the high possibilities of the property.

Mr. Lionberger is regarded as one of the ablest and most successful operators, and has extensive holdings in the central business district.

He is also a director in the Hotel Realty Co., being one of the largest subscribers to the popular hotel fund.

Old Church Property Sold.

Another large sale by the Mercantile Trust Co. during the week was the half block known as the "Immaculate Conception property," fronting on Locust street, and extending from Twenty-third street to Jefferson avenue. The property was sold for Rt. Rev. J. J. Kain, archbishop of the City of St. Louis, for $107,500, to Samuel H. Leathe, who has made a series of substantial investments in the downtown districts, including the Washington University group through Cornet & Zeibig during the past three months. The property is practically vacant at the present time, and Mr. Leathe has no immediate plans for its improvement, but the ground occupies such a prominent site, and is available for so many purposes, that it is more than likely in a short time that Mr. Leathe will place it on a satisfactory investment basis.

Western Union to Build.

The Western Union Telegraph Co., which has for some time past sought a site for a big home building, has practically closed negotiations for a long term lease of the property of John P. Keiser at the northeast corner of Broadway and Pine streets. Mr. Keiser admitted yesterday that a deal for property was pending and that it would in all probability be consummated the forthcoming week. The corner has a frontage of 46 feet 6 inches on Broadway by a depth of 127 feet 6 inches on Pine street to an alley. The Western Union company will, it is understood, acquire the inside 44 feet held by the W. L. Ewing estate, having plans, according to the information, for an office building to cover the property as far north as the Post-Dispatch building. The local offices of the L. & N. R. R., which occupy a portion of the Ewing property, will be provided with quarters in the proposed building. Malcolm Macbeth, agent for the heirs, stated that the Western Union had made no proposition as yet for the holdings of the Ewing estate, but admitted his knowledge of the telegraph company's plans for the corner. The new building is to be of the skyscraper type and will be equal in character to the Pontiac and Frisco buildings.

Tacoma Company Plans Building.

The Tacoma Realty Co. has plans drawn for an office building for the southwest corner of Sixth and Olive streets, which include a theater with an entrance on the Olive street corner. The site will probably embrace the De Mund holdings, which abut on Sixth street on the south and for which the Tacoma is negotiating. The tenants' leases of the Tacoma holdings, it is understood, have been satisfactorily adjusted, the success of the deal being contingent now upon acquisition of the De Mund holdings, which with those of the Tacoma will give a frontage 273 feet on Sixth street by 127 feet on Olive street, with an alley line of 127 feeet on the west. The deal is being promoted by Walter J. Holbrook, president of the Tacoma company.

The Buckingham Hotel, planned for the northeast corner of King's highway and West Pine boulevard, may be built after all. W. A. Miltenberger, now in New York, has wired his confrers here that he has concluded a deal whereby the International Bank and Trust Co. of New York is to guarantee the $1,000,000 of bonds to be issued by the Saxony Realty Co. for the erection of the hostelry. The Corporation Trust Co. of New York is to act as trustee. The Fullerton Construction Co., it is stated, has agreed to take $800,000 of the second mortgage bonds. This, according to Mr. Joseph A. Duffy, treasurer of the Saxony company, practically assures the erection of the hotel. The new hotel will be 10 stories in height, of fireproof construction, costing $1,000,000. It will be rushed to completion before the Fair.

Northwest St. Louis Lots at Auction.

An auction sale to be held next Saturday by the Mercantile Trust Co. is attracting considerable interest, as this will be the first large auction sale that has been held in that portion of St. Louis for some time. The lots to be sold front on College avenue, Warne avenue and Linton avenue, between Florissant and Penrose avenues. The location is west of Grand avenue on the hill above the Water Tower. The lots are to be sold for the account of a large corporation, and the trust company states that its instructions are imperative to sell the lots to the highest bidder regardless of price. The property is all desirably situated and well drained. The improvements include sewers and city water, sidewalks and street improvements.

The terms are remarkable, being only one-tenth, balance $10 per month. The sale is to be next Saturday on the premises and will be held regardless of the weather. The property is reached directly by the Bellefontaine cars, or by Grand avenue, transferring to Florissant avenue.

Real Estate Firm Dissolved.

Announcement was made Thursday of the dissolution of the real estate firm of Moffett & Franciscus, whose office is at 703 Chestnut street. Leslie A. Moffett will retire from the firm, and James M. Franciscus, the junior partner, will continue to conduct the business under the style of James M. Franciscus & Co.

The firm was one of the oldest and stanchest in the city, representing some of the richest estates in the city.

Mr. Franciscus is at present city treasurer.

CHURCHILL FAILED TO PASS ONE BILL

Noted Author Worked Strenuously But Ineffectually for World's Fair.

CORNISH, N. H., May 16.—Up in New Hampshire it is said by those who know Winston Churchill, author of "The Crisis" and other works, that he is a very much disappointed man. It will be remembered that Mr. Churchill was elected a member of the state House of Representatives by the citizens of Cornish, among whom he has lived during the past five years.

Immediately upon the convening of the legislature, Mr. Churchill moved to Concord, the state capital, and laying aside literary work, turned his attention to his official duties.

All went well for a time. He introduced a number of bills embodying his ideas of state policy, and worked unceasingly for their passage. Among those in which he was especially interested was one providing a state exhibit at the St. Louis Exposition, and carrying an appropriation of $45,000. Out of courtesy to their distinguished associate the members of the House passed the bill with only a little opposition, but in the closing days of the session the Senate killed it.

About the same time Gov. Bachelder vetoed another of Mr. Churchill's bills, and at the close of the session he had not placed a single act upon the statute books.

It is said that this result will have a much greater consequence than would seem from a casual glance at the circumstances, since it will have a dampening effect upon any boom for further political preferment that Mr. Churchill may desire to launch.

NEED NOT PAY PREACHER.

Member of Church Is Not Liable for Pastor's Salary.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16.—The Western Missouri Court of Appeals has decided that a member of the church congregation is not liable in law for the payment of the pastor's salary and that a minister of the gospel must depend upon the good consciences of the members of his flock for his pay and has no legal hold upon them for it.

This decision was made in the suit brought by Rev. J. H. Riffe against the congregation of the First Baptist Church of Monroe City. Rev. Mr. Riffe was engaged at a salary of $800 a year, but was not paiad that much, so he sued for the balance. The clergyman won his case in the trial court, but the court of appeals reversed that judgment.

MISSOURI FRUIT BADLY INJURED

Preliminary Report Indicates That the Frost Has Done a Lot of Damage.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 16.—Secretary George B. Ellis of the Missouri state board of agriculture has given the following special report on fruit conditions:

"A special inquiry on fruit conditions has just been made to ascertain the probable extent of the damage on account of recent frosts. The heaviest damage, according to our reports, has been sustained in the southwest section of the state, where the frost was most severe. Considerable damage was done to apples in most all sections. Two correspondents report all Ben Davis killed. A few correspondents report no damage to apples.

"The average condition compared with a full average crop is estimated at 55, which will yet insure a great many apples unless the damage is greater than is now apparent. Pears promise only 10 per cent of an average crop, cherries 25 per cent and grapes 20 per cent. In many places all the young foliage on the grapes was entirely killed by the frost.

"Blackberries and raspberries, being later than the other fruits, have been damaged very little and show a condition of 75 per cent. Strawberries were damaged considerably, but not as much as has been reported. The blooms that were out at time of frost were damaged greatly, but as this fruit continues to bloom for about 30 days, the buds that were not out have damaged very little. The strawberry growers of Sarcoxie announce officially that they will have half a crop and that more help is needed for pickers. Condition of strawberries is placed at from 25 to 30 per cent, or an average, for all reporting, of 54 per cent."

A Kansas City Preacher Says They Will Be Good at His Funeral.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16.—The Rev. C. P. Smith of the North Side Christian Church will deliver his lecture, "Our Kansas Women, and What Shall We Do With Them?" next Wednesday evening at the Tabernacle, Seventh street and Garfield avenue. The proceeds will be used to defray the cost of new church hymnals. The novelty of the subject and the ability and style of the lecturer gives promise of an entertaining and instructive lecture. A note on the ticket reads as follows: "This ticket is good for 99 years. Should the lecturer be assassinated by the men or Hobsonized by the women, it will admit the bearer to a seat at his funeral, which will, no doubt, be enjoyed quite as much as the lecture."

A Million Dollar Tax Suit.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 16.—Suit for $1,000,000 taxes against the Southern Pacific Railroad Co. has been filed in the Jefferson County Court here by W. L. Weller, Jr., revenue agent for the state of Kentucky. The petition alleges that the corporation has not paid its legal tax in five years and that $1,000,000 is now due the state.

After the Manner of Royalty.

Tiffany's corner at 4 o'clock was thronged with women, as Tiffany's corner always is on a fine afternoon that has a touch of springtime in its mild breeze and warm sunshine. A smart brougham drew up to the curb as the watchful footman caught a glimpse of a tall blonde coming out from behind the glass storm door. Some unseen attendants rolled an invisible carpet—it was a strip made of frank admiration and equally frank curiosity—from the storm door to the carriage, the door of which the footman was holding open. On either side of this magic carpet a line of women and men stood to allow the tall blonde to pass between their admiring glances. The scene had the effect as of a royal personage taking the air. The woman stepped into the brougham, the footman closed the door, the magic carpet was whipped away by the same unseen hands, and then the line was broken and the corner resumed its normal appearance of activity. The tall blonde was Lillian Russell.—New York Sun.

CABINET MEMBERS STATE ORNAMENTS

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1645 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Cabinet members think they have big jobs, and they do.

There are no greater business organizations in the world, for instance, than the treasury department and the postoffice department.

The state department, of late years, mixes in about every foreign entanglement, and the department of justice slashes trusts that have hundreds of millions of capital.

The agricultural department looks out for the wants of the farmers of the United States, who feed half the universes, and the interior department has under its control tracts of land greater in extent than kingdoms that are famous in history.

Still, when all the cabinet members are out of the city, the machine of the government goes pounding along and nobody misses them.

It was an old and famous correspondent who said to a ne wcabinet member at a dinner:

"We are all glad to see you, but you must excuse us if we are not perceptibly impressed. You see, we are here for good, and you fellows come along for a little time and then drop out and, really, we meet so many of you that it is quite impossible to get excited."

And it was an old and famous army officer who said, perhaps, at a dinner, too: "The secretary of war lasts four years or less, we are in the army for forty."

A cabinet member is a useful person ot some extent. He has dignity and is in a position to advise the President. To be sure, the President does as he likes after hearing the advice, but that is expected. The point is that the advice is given.

Then they are the responsible heads of their departments. They sign the most important letters. They are all able men who have made successes in business and in the law.

There is a general disposition to call John Hay a statesman. The designation fits him closer than it does any of the rest of the recent cabinet, but, if a President has a cabinet made up of good business men, with a lawyer or two, or three, he can get along very comfortably without statesmanship in his official family, for it goes without saying that he is a statesman himself.

At the best, the members of the cabinet, who are the heads of the various branches of the government, furnish the fireworks for an administration. They do an immense amount of work of one kind or another, but most of that work is predigested. That is, it is done before they get a chance to do it.

Every department has its two or three, or dozen, men who have been in their subordinate positions for years. They are the mainstays of the government. They know everything. When there is a knotty point these men decide it. They are the right hands of the secretaries. They stay through all administrations.

So, when it is necessary for a cabinet member to go on a vacation or to spend the heated term in the mountains or at the seashore, the bureau chiefs and the superintendents to division go plugging along.

The bulk of the work of the government is detail. The rules are hard and fast. Everything is done by regulation. Many cabinet members have tried to cut the red tape and failed. Things go by route. Every paper must have the requisite number of indorsements. Every letter must have the proper initials. Every order for payment must be accompanied by a voucher.

Everything must be clear to the auditors. It is as relentless as death. These systems cannot be broken down. It grinds on day after day, as if there were no such things in existence as cabinet members. The money is counted. The books are balanced. The letters are written and copied. The recommendations are forwarded. The purchases are made. The money is spent. The business goes over the desks of the clerks and then to the chiefs and the superintendents in an endless stream.

A cabinet member is a law unto himself. If he wants to go fishing, he goes, and that is all there is to it. He knows the business of the government is safe. All he has to do is to designate an "acting secretary," and it won't matter if he doesn't come back for a month or two. The "acting" secretary, who is always an assistant cabinet minister, signs the routine letters and keps the machine in motion. He is not expected to formulate policies or to work out theories. He is there for business, and is supposed to let the extraordinary matters alone. If something out of the routine comes up, the cabinet member for whom he is acting is notified and, if it is tremendous, the President is told.

All the departments are kept open during the summer vacation season. The government is liberal with vacations, too. It gives every clerk 30 days' leave each years, and allows 30 days for sick leave without loss of pay. The clerks go on their vacations in relays.

The buruea chiefs sandwich in their leaves. Always, too, if a bureau or a division chief is off, there is a chief clerk or an assistant chief left on duty who knows his business, and he acts while his chief is away.

There is no shortage of employes. Each department has enough competent men to take charge in almost any emergency. The government is a liberal employer. It does not expect too much of its men and women and it sees to it that there are always enough persons capable of assuming authority in every line.

Every man's duties are fixed by law. He is required to do every certain thing in a certain way. There is no initiative.

Nobody can jump in and be brilliant. If that should be tried there is always a cold-blooded auditor or division chief up above who will ask, "Where is your authority?" If the authority is not forthcoming, the brilliant person gets to be very uncomfortable.

"Authority" keeps the government straight.

The necessity for it is drilled into the head of every government employe.

The necessity for it is driled into the head of every government employe. The wisdom of the last century and a quarter has provided for about every contingency. Consequently there is no bogging down when the cabinet ministers leave the city.

The wheels continue to revolve. They would continue to revolve if the cabinet stayed away for three months.

The rules and regulations for procedure never take a vacation.

HE DIDN'T WANT MUCH.

Only Bank Account, Fine Horses, New Clothes or He'd Burn Shawnee.

SHAWNEE, O. T., May 16.—John Archer, a laborer, who lives in a tent at the edge of town, threatened today to burn down the town if he was not provided with a bank account, a fine team of horses and a nobby suit of new clothes.

He addressed a letter to a neighbor, and told him to warn the citizens of his intentions if the luxuries were not provided post haste. The letter was delivered to the chief of police, and the officer immediately took the laborer into custody. He will probably be tried for insanity before the probate judge.

Archer is a married man, about 30 years old, and has two little children. He is a common laborer, and is a member of the Federation of Labor. He attended the meeting of the union last night, and it was seen there that he was mentally unbalanced.

WEDDED BLISS IS SHORT

Chicago Old Man Says Five Weeks of It Was Enough for Him.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Five weeks of domesticity with the woman who promised to care for him in his old age was sufficient to end the wedded bliss of John C. Lorin, a septugenarian westsider. The old man, who is nearly a helpless cripple, after reciting the various cruelties which his wife, Martha, practiced on him, was granted a divorce by Judge Gibbons this morning.

"I am 72 years old," said Mr. Lorin on the witness stand, "and when I married Martha, who says she is 55, a year ago in April, she promised to take care of me, but she has been very cruel."

"What did she do?" asked the judge.

"Well, we were happy for about five weeks, your honor. Then one day she took me downtown and lost me in a department store. When I got home she had moved all our things from her house, where we had been living, to a flat which I own at 29 and 31 North Elizabeth street. When I tried to get in she swore at me and drove me away. I had to sleep in the cellar for two nights."

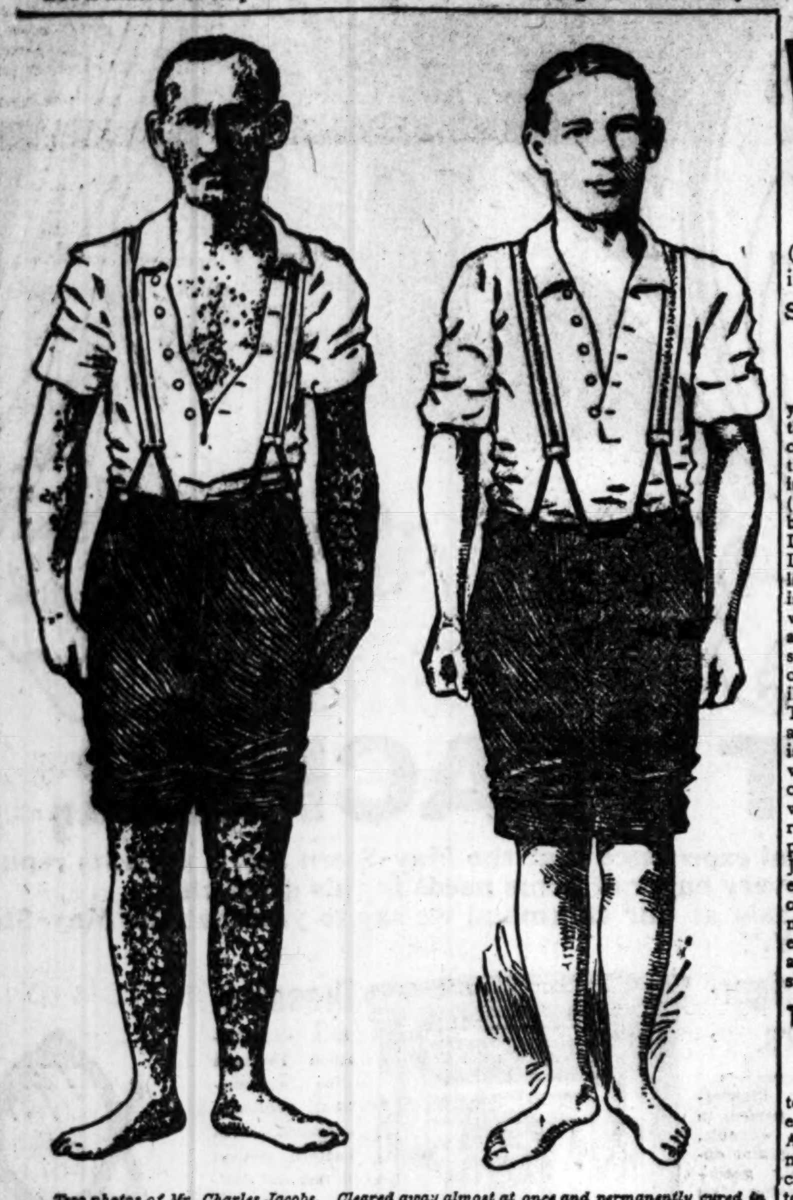
ASTOUNDING GOOD NEWS

to thousands of wretched people. It will bring happiness to thousands who are miserable—imagining they have a bad blood poisoning—when in nine cases out of ten it is purely a local parasitic manifestation on the skin which can be cleared away in a hurry.

Such misery now cleared away as surely as the sun shines above. Not merely attempted—not a matter of improvement only—but a clearing of it all away absolutely—and quickly, too.



Two photos of Mr. Charles Jacobs. Cleared away almost at once and permanently cured in 45 days. Before treatment his hair was worn clipped owing to the scalp being scaly, and a moustache was worn to help hide sores on the lips. Note difference in appearance after cured. See changed expression. Nothing has ever brought more happiness to humanity than this discovery.

WE VOUCH FOR THIS

Note what is known (having been fully proven to us) to a leader in the medical affairs of St. Louis.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.

It has been proven to us beyond the possibility of a doubt that a new medicine quickly clears up the worst skin affections. Its work seems astonishing, amazing, almost miraculous. (It is a specific formula which, because of its discovery by Dr. Decatur Dennis, is known as "D. D. D.") Its actual record sounds like a story of magic. But there is no room for doubt about it whatever; full proofs, indisputable in every respect, have been submitted regarding hundreds of cases—among them the two cases illustrated in this announcement. The one case shown here of the adult (Mr. Charles Jacobs, psoriasis of many years' standing) was cured in 45 days. The other case of the boy (Sammy Minkey) was cured in three weeks. The results are not only complete, but permanent; in the case of Mr. Jacobs, which was one of the earliest cured after the discovery of this medicament, it is now nearly three years since the disease was cleared out of the skin, and no taint of it has appeared since.

This is not merely a commercial matter, it is a matter of humanity to tell everybody with a skin disease about this medicament. Among the many cases proven to me of astonishingly quick and complete cures, all of which seem to have been permanent, many were photographed in such a condition that a reproduction in a newspaper would be perhaps too shocking for print. These cases given here, in the cause of humanity, this paper consented to print just as the patients appeared before and after treatment, though another newspaper refused to do so. Not a newspaper in Christendom but should publish every word of this information, pictures and all, if duty and not dollars were the governing rule.

A SMALL BLOTCH ON THE SKIN.

How skin diseases start in most cases.

In the two cases illustrated here the following are the facts: In the case of Mr. Jacobs (Psoriasis, a species of Eczema) the trouble started in three small spots and did not spread beyond this for eight years. Then it suddenly spread all over. It raged more or less all over in this way for ten years.

In the case of the boy shown below (pure Eczema) the trouble started in a small spot forward of the left ear. We understand it was quiet for two or three years before spreading. Photographs of the case show the boy literally covered, the same as shown on the face in the photo below, when treatment with D. D. D. was started.

Any blotch in the skin which sticks stubbornly at all should be attended to. However trifling it may seem, if it lingers long ten chances to one it is a parasitic start, and at any time it may cover your face or body, or both.

Filth is not the cause. The most hygienic and cleanly people are frequently afflicted with skin diseases. Attendants in bathhouses and barbers are examples that soap and water are no protection. Whenever the skin becomes weakened or impaired, then these parasites are likely at any time to attack, and if conditions are just wrong they will thrive and some form of skin disease will result. Almost all forms of it will spread by contact.

Many varieties, all similar. Acne, Barber's Itch, Carbuncles, Acne Rosacea, Dermatitis, Eczema in all its forms: Eczema in Infants and Young Children, Erythema, Ecthyma, Impetigo Contagiosa, Lupus, Lichen Planus, Herpes, Erysipelas, Ichthyosis, Pityriasis, Itching Piles, Lichen Ruber, Psoriasis in all its forms: Scrofula, Seborrhoea, Sycosis, Scabies, Tinea Favosa, Tinea Circinata, Tinea Trichophytina Barbae, Lupus Serpiginosus, Elephantiasi. Each one of these skin affections is parasitic in nature, and all of them have yielded to "D. D. D." The preparation is being used by most of the skin specialists. It is compounded for druggists solely by the D. D. D. Company, 70 Dearborn Street, Chicago.

It is utilized by every general family physician who has taken the trouble to investigate the work it is accomplishing.

It is used in the Cook County Hospital, Chicago.

It will clear off any parasitic break in the skin in from 3 to 60 days time.

It will bring happiness quickly into the lives of thousands of people of this city who are miserable in imagining they have a bad blood poisoning, when in nine cases out of ten it is purely a local parasitic manifestation which can be cleared away in a hurry by this preparation.

Visit the above agent and see proofs that will make you a happier human.

REUNITED AFTER HALF A CENTURY

FOR TEN DAYS THEY WORKED SIDE BY SIDE

Then a Chance Remark Set the Men Thinking and Mutual Recognition Followed.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 16.—Separated through poverty in early childhood and kept apart for nearly half a century through the changing of a name, Henry and Charles Lierman, brothers, have been reunited at the soldiers' home through an idle remark of Chief Cook William Bradt.

The Lierman family lived in Wiasmar, Germany. There were many children and little money for their support, so when a relative in Columbus, Wis., offered to care for little Henry the proffer was accepted, not eagerly, because it was hard to part with the little fellow, but with gratitude, because of the lightening of the family burden.

Charles was a lad of 6 years of age when Henry sailed away and, though he had searched the country over for the lost brother, spending hundreds of dollars in the quest, it was not until accident brought them together that they had seen each other for 49 years.

When Henry began living with his uncle he occasionally wrote to his parents and he continued the practice until the beginning of the civil war, when he enlisted in the Seventh Wisconsin infantry and served until the close of the war.

Changed Name Through Error.

Through the error of the recruiting officer his name appeared upon the rolls as Henry Lehman instead of Henry Lierman. Believing that one name was as good as another he adopted the one given to him, and has since been known to the world as Henry Lehman.

He served in many engagements and still bears in the form of scars evidence of the excellence of confederate marksmanship. At the close of the war he was unable to accumulate sufficient money to support him in his declining years, and, becoming ill, he entered the Soldiers' home about 11 years ago.

Charles continued his prosaic life on the farm in Germany until 1862, when he came to this country and soon enlisted in the navy, serving on the famous ships Minnesota, Constellation and Miami of the North Atlantic squadron, under command of the immortal Admiral Farragut.

At the close of the war the love of the sea was so strong within him that he decided to enter the merchant marine service and he has spent the greater part of his life on the water, sometimes on the sea and at other times on the great lakes.

He often came to Milwaukee, within two miles of the long long lost brother whom he would have given many years of his life to see, and whom he had long mourned as dead. He wandered over a great part of the globe and when the Boers began their fight for liberty he went to South Africa, enlisted in the Boer army, and fought against the British until he was captured and thrown into prison where he remained until peace was declared.

A few weeks ago he suffered an injury to one of his legs and underwent treatment at Mercy Hospital. Being eligible to the advantages of the Soldiers' home, about 10 days ago he applied for admission as a temporary inmate, intending to remain only a short time, when he expected to resume his place as cook on one of the lake steamers.

At Last They Were Reunited.

Henry Lierman has long been a waiter in the Home dining room. By a lucky coincidence Charles was assigned to a similar duty, else the reunion of the brothers probably would not have taken place. One day the brothers were standing close together in the kitchen when Chief Cook Brandt said to Charles:

"I'll bet you're a German."

"Yes, I am," was the reply.

"And I believe you fellows came from the same part of the country because both of you are so big."

Charles said he came from Wiasmar. Henry, who had appeared to take little interest in the conversation, suddenly looked up and remarked that Wiasmar was his former home. Question after question was exchanged, until Henry, satisfied of their relationship, clasped the new arrival in his arms and excitedly exclaimed:

"Charlie, you are my brother, whom I left fifty years ago and have never seen since."

Then the brothers embraced, tears streaming down their grizzled cheeks. Suddenly they noticed a crowd of veterans collecting about them, and they disappeared into the basement, where they apprised each other of the many incidents of their lives during the last half century. Neither can say enough in praise of the inquisitiveness of Cook Brandt.

Worked Side by Side for Days.

"The meeting between myself and brother is so strange that I can hardly realize it to be true, and when I think that we had worked side by side for ten days without a sign of recognition, I realize that we could have been there for years without knowing of our relationship had it not been for the cook's remark.

"Many, many times I have been within a few miles of my brother, but after I had traversed the country, inquiring at every home and army post for Henry Lierman I felt certain he was dead. A sailor is a poor writer, and when I thought I would never see Henry again I lost interest in my other relatives in Wisconsin and did not write to them. Now that we are united, I shall search out my uncles and cousins. When father died there was a little property left which mother wished to dispose of, but it was necessary to have Henry's signature. The property, therefore, was not sold for many years until the German courts were satisfied that he was dead. I feel like a new man since I met Henry, and I shall take good care that we are never widely separated again. Neither of us is old, Henry being 59 and I 57, and there ought to be several years left for us to enjoy one another's companionship."

SULTANA SECRET NOW DISCLOSED

How the Mississippi River Steamboat Was Blown Up 35 Years Ago.

EVENGE UPON THE PART OF AN OLD FARMER

Powder in a Stick of Cord- and the Boilers Exploded ling 1300 Persons.

W, Va., May 16.—For near- years the secret of the e Sultana disaster has re- ed in the bosoms of three men. trio is dead; the second, a dis- citizen of the West Virginia le, gave the following interview, ch he tells circumstantially how the a came to her awful end. The dis- is so familiar to the reading public t its retelling now is unnecessary, rther than to recall that the Sultana, a ne, large Mississippi river sidewheeler, coming up the Mississippi, took on board 2400 Union soldiers at Vicksburg, who were en route home after the surrender of Lee.

A short distance below Memphis the boat's boilers exploded and one thousand three hundred persons were killed or drowned. It has always been supposed that the explosion was due to the carelessness of the engineer, who was killed.

The West Virginian alluded to makes this statement:

"As the cause of the fearful explosion of the boilers of the Sultana has remained a mystery, I have concluded to give the real facts in the case, as, so far as I know, there is but one other person living to whom this story was told by the perpetrator of the deed, 38 years ago. The engineer who lost his life has no doubt been severely and unjustly censured for carelessness, when, as a known fact, engineers are always more careful and watchful, measuring the water in the boilers often, when the boat is loaded with such a vast multitude of human freight.

"Of the over 800 steamboats of different rivers plying to and from the port of New Orleans prior to 1861 I may say all used wood for making steam. Many wood yards were kept on the river bank from Memphis down, and planters sold cord wood to the steamboats.

Farmer Was Angry at the Federals.

"An old farmer living some distance below Vicksburg, and who kept a wood yard for many years, was greatly annoyed by the Union gunboats and transports taking his wood without compensation. He had taken no part in the war, though a strong sympathizer with the Confederates, and had taken the oath of allegiance to the United States government, removed his family from the plantation and determined to remain on his place and manage it himself.

"He was regarded as a 'rebel' by the officers and marines of the gunboats that often lay in the river in front of his place. Frequent raids were made on his plantation and all kinds of property confiscated; cattle, hogs, goats and cordwood were taken both by gunboats and transports. He was frequently arrested and charged with disloyalty, called a rebel, traitor, etc.

"He was greatly attached to an old and faithful negro servant, who had grown up with him from a boy and to whom he had granted many privileges, by which the servant had accumulated nearly three thousand dollars. This old servant was loyal to his master and had many Confederate friends. He made frequent visits to Natchez and purchased medicine and dry goods and smuggled them through the lines for his friends. In some way he was detected by the guards and cast into prison, put in a sweat box for nine days and severely whipped. Finally when released he came home very much emaciated and suffered from his ill treatment till his death. His master felt keenly this harsh treatment of his old and faithful servant.

"While brooding over this injury his hatred of the Union troops was further inflamed by the following circumstance: One afternoon, about 4 o'clock, three young Confederate scouts, whom he had known from infancy, and who were his friends, came across from Black river in a boat and asked for something to eat. Dinner was ordered, and while at table one of them happened to look through a side window and saw the yard full of marines from the gunboats. The three made a rush for the back door and for their boat, which was tied to the garden fence at the rear of the garden, which was not overflowed. The marines opened fire on them as they ran, and killed one of them as he crossed the garden. The other two reached their dugout and made their escape to the woods.

Planned Revenge On His Enemies.

"The planter remained in his house, fearing if he went out he would be killed on the spot. Some of the officers entered the house, when he explained how these Confederates happened to be there. The officers were humane men and said they could not see how he could well refuse to give his friends something to eat. He did not venture out of his house till after dark, when the two young men returned to search for their comrade, whose fate they did not know. They found him dead in the garden, where he had been shot, placed his body in their boat and carried him to Black river, where they laid him on the top of the ground and built a mound of earth over him, as the country was all under water except a narrow strip on the bank of the river, and there it remains to this day.

"This final addition to his list of wrongs determined the planter on a scheme of revenge on at least one of the gunboats, which he regarded as the immediate cause of all his troubles. Knowing the scarcity of fuel and that the officers were sure to levy on all his wood soon for themselves and other boats, he had a considerable amount corded on the bank. Selecting a large round stick of ash, he split it with an ax, hollowed it out and carefully put two pounds of gunpowder in a strong bottle, which he wrapped with copper wire, put a fuse in it, placed it in the hollowed-out ash log, put the pieces together and wrapped with copper wire, drawing it tight that the bark might hide the wire as much as possible, then mudded the whole stick well to conceal everything and placed it in the middle of one of the cords of wood.

"That night the Sultana steamed up the river and 'wooded' at his landing. That particular stick was not heaved under the iler till the Sultana reached Cat island, miles above Memphis, where such awful avoc was made of human life.

"The old planter has been dead 15 years. He never expressed a regret, though considered a kind-hearted man. He seemed rather satisfied that he had 'gotten even' for all the indignities that had been heaped on him and many others."

JEWISH MASSACRE LIKE BLACK DEEDS OF NERO

Zangwill Cables the Post-Dispatch That Zionism Is the Only Permanent Solution of This Tragic Question.

SAD COMMENTARY ON TEACHING OF THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT

"ZIONISM ONLY PERMANENT SOLUTION"

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 16.—My latest information from Kishineff is that the damage exceeds £100,000. The Russian official act admits that 700 houses and 600 shops were looted, and I do not think I am libeling the Russian authorities when I say that in such a case the official account is certain to be well within the mark.

There was never a more impudent pretense than that the massacre resulted from the maltreatment of a Christian woman in the neighborhood by a Jewish proprietor.

For weeks the Jews of Kishineff have been living in the shadow of a blood accusation. They were panic-stcirken because they felt that the explosion was coming. Therefore they would have been extraordinarily careful in their dealings with Christians.

Of course I am tremendously in favor of the appeal. I am giving myself, and yet I have a certain grudgingness in asking for money for Jews for cure instead of prevention. It is always so. If the money spent in the last twenty years for undoing the evil suffered by Jews were spent on a plan for doing them good, we should not have these horrible events nor demands upon our purses.

The moral of the whole wretched business is the absolute necessity for Zionism. It is not necessary for the Jews comfortably established in America, but for the great mass of our people. Half the Jews in the world live in Russia. It is the only permanent solution of the tragic Jewish question.

ISRAEL ZANGWILL.

"SAD COMMENATRY ON SERMON ON THE MOUNT"

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

VIENNA, May 16.—The atrocities committed upon the Jews in Kishineff constitute an indescribably mounrful situation, whether viewed from the standpoint of the Jews or the Christian. The tyranny of Pharaoh in Egypt, of Nero in Rome were insignificant compared with the persecution suffered by the Jews in Russia today—a sad commentary on the 1900 years of teaching of the "Sermon on the Mount," which seems strangely interpreted in Christian education in Russia.

All htese oppressions, however, cannot kill the Jewish religion, which will live long after the empire passes away.

LORD ROTHSCHILD FEELS SYMPATHY

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, May 16.—I am averse to saying anything in relation to the appeal, with which I am not prominently identified. This is from no lack of sympathy, but it is my rule and I cannot depart from it, even in such a case as the Post-Dispatch brings before me.

JEALOUSY INTENSIFIED BY THE PROSPERITY OF KISHINEFF JEWS

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, May 16.—All the news that comes from Kishineff adds to the horrors that have already been told in the slaying and torturing of the Jews. The blackest deeds of Nero's reign, the horrible inflictions of the dark ages are not so frightful as the atrocities visited upon the Jews of Kishineff during the three days of terror.

That the outbreak had long threatened is clear. For years a Kishineff newspaper has increased the race hatred with fiendish energy. And the anti-Semitic feeling has always been terribly strong.

Kishineff is a prosperous city of about 140,000 people, almost in the geographical center of the Province of Bessarabia, of which it is the capital. The city is northwest of Odessa. Bessarabia is a land of vineyards, of agriculture. Its people live out of doors and they are famous for their stature and their physical strength.

The commerce of Kishineff is in the hands of the Jews, who make up a third of the population. The Jews are the scholars of the city as well as its merchants. While their places of business were somewhat centered, their homes were scattered all over the city.

The Outbreak Incited by Papers.

The inborn, hereditary Russian hatred for the Jews was intensified in Kishineff by jealousy of their prominence and prosperity. Hence the newspaper that made it a business to increase this feeling had many readers.

For years it has hoped to incite an outbreak that would drive the Israelites from Kishineff, and it succeeded at last by publishing two pieces of fiction as news, one of which was so horrible, so unworthy of credence that it is impossible for a civilized European or American mind to understand how it could find any believers.

That the government officials, if not the government, connived at this slaughter and persecution seems plain. Furthermore there is internal evidence that an organization had been effected to take the utmost advantage of the outbreak when it occurred. The attitude of the government is shown by the fact that horrible outrages began on April 19, and continued through the 21st, yet news of them did not reach the capitals of Europe for nearly a month.

Probably nowhere else in the world save Russia within the touch of telegraph wires could an event of such interest to the world at large have taken place without news of it being universal property within a few hours. But the Russian authorities control the telegraph wires. The outside world learned of the atrocities only when letters from the victims and refugees reached other countries.

Chese Easter as Proper Season.

The Russian newspaper, burning with the blood-lust, selected the time of the Russian Easter and the Jewish Passover for the publication of the articles that aroused the Russians in Kishineff to murder.

It announced as a fact that a young Christian girl had been maltreated by the owner of a merry-go-round, who was a Jew. This stirred the fierce passion of hatred into a brighter flame. Then came the crowning accusation.

The body of a Christian boy or girl—the accounts as to the sex are conflicting—about 4 years old, was found in a part of the town where many of the Jews lived. The newspaper declared that this child had been murdered by the Jews and that the human blood was used for ritualistic rites. A Christian child had been slain to make a human sacrifice.

To the fierce race hatred was added that of fanaticism, which is responsible for the darkest pages in history. The Russians were aroused to a depth of demoniacal fury that only the flowing of blood, the shrieks of victims enduring the most frightful tortures could satisfy.

The outbreak began on the first day of the Russian Easter, April 19. About noon some Russian street boys, under the leadership of older youths, began reviling Jews in the square called the Novi Bazar. They followed this up by smashing the windows of the Jewish houses and shops in the neighborhood. The police ordered them to stop, but no arrests were made. It is believed now that this band was sent forth by those who organized the attack to demonstrate that the police and military authorities were not disposed to interfere in the effort to kill and torture as many Jews as possible, in the effort to drive them out of Kishineff.

ST. LOUIS HEBREWS RELIEVE STRICKEN BRETHREN IN RUSSIA

Rabbi Zachariah Rosenfeld of 1011 North Tenth street, who was born and reared only 40 miles from Kishineff and frequently visited that city, is at the head of the committee of St. Louis Hebrews who are collecting and forwarding funds for the relief of the stricken brethren in the Russian province of Bessarabia.

Rabbi Rosenfeld has forwarded 1000 rubles, equivalent to about $500, to Kishineff, and he expects to be able to forward an equal amount during the coming week.

He is exceedingly gratified at the knowledge that the money he forwarded is already in the hands of the relief committee in Kishineff.

He sent it through an express company. The company telegraphed the money to New York, and from New York cabled the draft to S. H. Perlemutter, a Jewish banker of Kishineff.

"When I took it down to the express office the agent told me first he would have to send it to Odessa or some other larger city," said Morris Rosenfeld, son of the rabbi, "but when he looked in his book again he found Kishineff was one of the company's European stations, so he sent it direct. He said Dr. Perlemutter would have the money within a few hours. We are delighted that the money reached there so quickly."

Reformed Jews and Orthodox.

The money was raised by a committee, of which Rabbi Rosenfeld is chairman, and Joseph Lippman, a merchant, and William Stix of Rice, Stix & Co., treasurers. Three mass meetings have been held, at which funds were contributed.

Reformed, as well as orthodox Jews, have taken hold of the relief movement, and Mr. Stix was placed on the committee as a rep-

NEWSPAPER MEN SNUB SWELL SET

Writer's With President's Party Refuse to Accept Club's Hospitality.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 16.—It has come to light that there was a revolt of the newspaper correspondents accompanying President Roosevelt on the occasion of the President's stop at Burlingame, the country home of San Francisco's exclusive club, on Tuesday.

The correspondents refused to share the luncheon that had been spread in the clubhouse. When a request, equal to a command, came from the President that they lend their presence, word was sent back that they were "busy."

The table that had been provided for the newspaper men, near that of the President, was not in use during the luncheon. As soon as the President returned to his train he inquired why such seeming discourtesy had been shown his hosts.

He was told that two years ago, on the occasion of President McKinley's stay at Burlingame, the newspaper men with the President's train were shown into the servant's dining room and told that they would be waited upon as soon as the main party had been served with luncheon on the club house veranda.

They had walked out in a body and returned to President McKinley's train. President Roosevelt laughed when the incident was mentioned.

"You are a lot of jacks," he exclaimed. "Don't you know that if they had attempted to treat you that way today I would have walked out with you?

"If you had been shown to the servant's dining room I would have eaten there too or gone without my meal."

The newspaper men on their arrival here made it plain that they would not care to partake of any hospitality at the hands of Henry T. Scott, for the reason that he had presented a bill and been paid for the board of President and Mrs. McKinley while they were guests at his house.

STORM MAROONS THE PRESIDENT

YOSEMITE, May 16.—At 3 p. m. a heavy snowstorm set in in the mountains and is still raging furiously.

The President is quartered at Glacier Point Hotel. He will remain there tonight.

The remainder of the presidential party, numbering about thirty, was forced to come to the valley, four miles below, through the storm, as accommodations cannot be provided for more than 15 persons.

he telephone to Glacier Point is out of order at present and no communication by wire can be had.

Notwithstanding the fact that the President, before leaving Washington, outlined the program he was to follow during his stay in the Yosemite, the Yosemite Park commission decided that it should follow another program, which it adopted without consulting him.

This latter program provided for fireworks, the firing of dynamite to produce loud echoes and the participation by the President in some sort of a public ceremony.

Without the President's knowledge this program was circulated broadcast and visitors into Yosemite from hundreds of miles away came to see him.

When they found that the President was not to be there their disappointment was very great.

The President was not told of this proposed change in the program until yesterday, and even then he was not told that crowds were coming from such long distances to see him. As he was tired out as the result of the hospitality of San Francisco he decided that he would adhere to the original plan and spend the next few days in seclusion.

GERMAN PRESS SLANDER ON ST. LOUIS FAIR DEDICATI QUICKLY REFUTED BY

The Post-Dispatch Sends President Francis' Contrad Article to the Paper Which Published It—Diplo Commend World's Fair Officials.

The Frankfurter-Zeitung, one of the most intellectual publications in Ger yesterday an article from New York severely criticizing the entertainment of the r of foreign governments by St. Louis and the World's Fair officials on the occasion cation of the World's Fair.

The article, cabled to the Post-Dispatch by its correspondent at Frankfurt, was President Francis, who gave the Post-Dispatch a denial of the charges made, and letters from diplomats expressing pleasure with their visit to St. Louis.

The Post-Dispatch cabled President Francis' reply to the Frankfurter-Zeitung la The denial of the charge and the defense of St. Louis and the World's Fair were thus to the scene of the attack within twenty-four hours, through the Post-Dispatch.

The Frankfurter-Zeitung's article, President Francis' denial, letters from diplomat subject and a complete report of the reception and entertainment of the diplomats follow:

The Frankfurter-Zeitung's Charge of Discourtesy to the Diplomat

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

FRANKFURT, May 16.—The Frankfurter-Zeitung, one of the ablest and most intellectual, if not the ablest newspaper in Germany, contains this morning the following telegram from New York:

"At the opening of the Exposition the St. Louis people did not exactly cover themselves with glory. The ceremonies had from the beginning to the end a bad country smell. Foreign diplomats who went there have sworn never to set foot again in St. Louis.

"It is well known that the German, Russian and English ambassadors suddenly had pressing engagements when the opening approached. Their not going perhaps is connected with the fact that the French and Spanish ambassadors were on the program for speeches. At least some people think so.

"Accommodations, especially at the table, were above all unsatisfactory to the diplomats. When they went to luncheon on the first day they found somebody already eating at the same table. A crowd of local politicians had entered the dining room and with characteristic appetite of such people had left but little for the President and the guests.

"However, this was endurable, but on the following day one could read in the newspapers that gentlemen of the diplomatic corps had deprived the President of his luncheon. This slander nearly caused some diplomats to ask for their passports.

"The reception Gov. Francis, president of the Exhibition, had arranged for these gentlemen was truly wonderful. He made the diplomats presented to him defile in a body like a procession, condescending to speak a few gracious words to them.

"This, of course, deeply offended the diplomats, for Gov. Francis, who had visited Europe, should have known what is due the direct representatives of royalty and his majesty.

"Some governors who arrived with splendor and pomp had also reason to complain. There were no reception committees, no preparation for their quarters had been made. Several immediately departed for home.

"The population of St. Louis looked upon all this indifferently. There was no spirit in the whole business. Hotel and traffic accommodations are simply miserable. If the exhibition city does not hurry up before next year this enterprise will be a first-class funeral and nothing else."

Pres. Francis' Denial of the Charges Made by the Frankfurter Zeitung

"I failed to see anything provincial in the reception tendered the diplomatic corps in St. Louis. I have attended a good many receptions and functions, both in the United States and in Europe, and I don't recall ever having seen one any better conducted than that given the members of the diplomatic corps at the St. Louis Club.

"The Exposition company knows nothing of any complaints about discourtesies or neglect toward the diplomatic corps during its visit to St. Louis. On the other hand we have received many letters thanking us for the courtesies shown and speaking in commedation of the efforts made to entertain properly all the guests."

Chairman Hirschberg of the Reception Committee Says There Was No Discourtesy

F. D. Hirschberg, chairman of the World's Fair reception committee, who was in charge of all arrangements for the entertainment of the President, the diplomatic corps and all other guests of the Exposition company, when shown the Frankfurter-Zeitung's article, said:

"The Exposition company in preparing for the entertainment of the diplomatic corps was very solicitous that nothing should happen that would infringe diplomatic precedents and etiquette. For that reason the state department was asked to send one of the secretaries with the corps to pass upon all plans and direct all arrangements for receptions and other functions, so that nothing could offend the members of the corps.

Washington Advice Taken.

"In Washington an official of the state department passes upon all questions of diplomatic etiquette and his decree is regarded as final. For that reason the Exposition company felt that such an official in St. Louis would prevent all possibility of offense to the diplomats.

"Mr. Pierce, third assistant secretary of state, was sent with the corps in compliance with our request. Mr. Cockrell, representing the Exposition company, was also along, but he acted always under the direction of Mr. Pierce.

"Mr. Pierce passed upon all plans, including those for the reception to the diplomatic corps at the St. Louis Club. Everything there was left to his direction.

"When the members of the diplomatic corps arrived they were received by Mr. Albertini of the reception committee and introduced to President Francis and the ladies of the receiving party. Then they were invited to take place with the receiving party in order that the guests might be presented to them as they arrived.

"This was all according to the plan of Mr. Pierce, who was there during the reception, and I believe the whole affair was properly carried out.

"The specific criticism aimed at the management, in connection with the luncheon served in the tent to the President, the diplomats and other guests can be readily answered. Back of the stand from which the parade was reviewed by President Roosevelt, members of the diplomatic corps, the governors of the various states, the directors and officials of the World's Fair company, together with all other invited guests, was erected a Marquee tent, 80x100 feet, and large enough to accommodate 500 persons at one time.

"The tent, wherein we served a luncheon consisting of coffee, salads, sandwiches and strawberries, was open for the accommodation of President Roosevelt, the gentlemen of the diplomatic corps, the governors and all other distinguished guests two hours before the parade was over.

"Guards of policemen and soldiers were stationed about the tent, and nobody, except one who was in the reviewing stand, could enter.

"We employed 20 waiters. There was no lack of attention to anyone and no discourtesy or inattention could possibly have been shown to the President or any member of the diplomatic corps.

"The supply of provisions was ample. In fact we were overstocked with eatables.

"I recollect very well that at the conclusion of the parade Gen. Corbin came to me and asked if we could give luncheon to 150 of his officers who could not go downtown.

"The request was readily granted. Even after this we could have fed a great many more. There was a buffet at one end of the tent and cigars and liquors for those who desired them.

"President Roosevelt, Mr. Francis and members of the President's party waited until the parade had passed before they entered the tent. I saw President Roosevelt come in, and I know positively that he was not jostled and did not suffer inconvenience in securing what he wished.

"We had an auxiliary committee, which looked after each individual in the diplomatic corps, and from none of them did we hear the slightest criticism.

"I am unwilling to believe that any exception can be taken to the manner in which this particular feature of the dedication was carried out."

Letters From Diplomats Expressing Pleasure Over Their Visit to St. Louis

Following are copies of letters received by President Francis of the World's Fair company since the dedication ceremonies from the embassies of Great Britain, Italy, Portugal, Sweden and Norway and the Netherlands, thanking him for the courtesies extended the representatives of these countries who attended the ceremonies:

By the English Ambassador.

Sir Michael H. Herbert, the British ambassador, wrote:

"Mr. Raikin has returned from his visit to St. Louis, where he represented me at the dedication ceremonies and has expressed to me his very grateful appreciation of the kindness and courtesy shown to him by the members of the committee in charge of the diplomats. Nothing was apparently overlooked to make the journey and his stay in St. Louis comfortable, and I trust you will accept my best thanks for the attention shown to him. I must take this opportunity of repeating my regrets at having been prevented by illness from attending the ceremonies."

By the Italian Ambassador.

Signor Edmondes, Mayor des Planches, ambassador of Italy, wrote as follows:

"Allow me to offer you and to the Exposition company my best thanks and those of the ambassadress for the kind hospitality you extended to us in our journey to and from St. Louis and during our stay in your city. The visit will permit me to inform my government about the importance of the next fair, and I hope that such information will add to the interest taken by my country in that great event and decide the competent authorities to increase the appropriation of the Italian state and the intervention of the Italian industry.

"This first visit left in [illegible] wish of a second one, and we hope sincerely to be able next year to come in to St. Lou and admire in magnificen your so promising exposition.

"With our best regards to Mrs. Francis I beg to offer to you, dear sir, the assurance of my highest consideration."

By the Portuguese Ambassador.

Visconde de Alte, the ambassador of Portugal, wrote as follows:

"I perform a most agreeable duty in tendering you my best thanks for the courtesy and attention showed me by all connected with the Exposition during my stay in St. Louis for the dedication ceremonies.

"The kindness of the reception accorded was a convincing proof of the friendliness of feelings entertained toward the country I represent and the generous hospitality extended to the diplomatic party is a token of the goodwill with which all nations will be welcomed to the Exposition. I venture to hope that you will kindly transmit to

MISS SANDERSON'S FUNERAL MONDAY

Noted American Singer Will Be Buried as a Catholic.

DEATH CAUSES GRIEF IN ALL ARTISTIC PARIS

Her Demise So Entirely Unexpected That No Members of the Family Witnessed the End.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

PARIS, May 16.—The funeral of Miss Sybil Sanderson, the noted American opera singer, who died at 4 o'clock this morning, will be held Monday at the Roman Catholic Church of Honore d'Evlau.

Death was due to virulent pneumonia, which had complicated an attack of the grip.

The announcement of the singer's death caused a profound shock especially in the American colony and in stage circles.

Miss Sanderson died at her residence, No. 1 Avernd Dubois de Bolgone. There was no member of her family present, no intimation having been given that she was so near the end.

Her last appearance was at Nice, a month ago, when she appeared as Phyrne. She was forced to retire through an attack of the grip, but it was thought that she would have a prompt recovery with rest and medical attention. As she did not improve, it was decided that she had better return here for her recuperation.

Singer's End Was Entirely Unexpected.

Mme. Sanderson grew steadily worse after her return here, although constantly attended by Dr. Falicesco, a well-known Paris physician.

It was found that the patient was afflicted with a trouble of the liver. It was also said that she was partly paralyzed in one leg, but that this affection was an old one; dating back to two years after her marriage to Antonia Terry and following motherhood.

The end was entirely unexpected, notwithstanding that the grip and liver trouble were complicated with an infectious pneumonia.

Massenet, the famous composer, who wrote several works for Mme. Sanderson, and Vizentini, the stage manager of the Opera Comique, are overcome with grief.

The French papers unanimously pay tribute to Mme. Sanderson's beauty and talent, praising particularly the wonderful sweetness of her voice.

Mme. Sanderson became a Catholic after her marraige to Mr. Terry.

"Poor Sybil, She Expected to Recover."

Mary Gordon of the Opera Comique, an intimate friend of Miss Sanderson, said in an interview today: "I saw poor Sybil yesterday. She looked very chalky and her hands were cold and damp, but she had no idea her condition was serious. She spoke hopefully of going soon to take the waters for her troubles and looked forward to recovery. The doctors and others in attendance had no idea that she was in a dangerous condition.

"She continued fairly well until midnight last night, when a sudden serious change took place and death followed so soon that there was no time to send for me or other intimates and old friends.

"Sybil could hardly be recognized; her changed appearance was due to her continued illness; her once famous beauty was gone, and her body was cruelly distorted by the effects of the slow atrophy of the liver and other complications, but her sickness and trouble did not diminish the quality of her voice which retained until the last few days the birdlike quality for which it was originally famous."

Last Hours Were Agonizing.

For the last few hours immediately preceding her death Miss Sanderson's condition was most agonizing. After midnight the patient suffered greatly, the pain culminating in paralysis, affecting the right side of her face and body. She continued in a semi-conscious condition until 5 o'clock this morning when death came.

A close friend of the family says Miss Sanderson had an income of $20,000 a year under the terms of her late husband's will. This and much of the jewelry and valuables inherited from her husband will go to his child by a former marriage, as Mr. Terry and his wife had no issue except a daughter who died soon after her birth.

MAN CHRISTENED TO GET BAPTISIMAL CERTIFICATE

Carl Braun, Who Aspires to Be a Policeman But Doesn't Know His Age, Gets Over the Difficulty in This Way.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Ready of resource is Carl Braun, who aspires to be a New York policeman. Several applications have reached the civil service commission from him within a year, but in each a different birth date appears.

This peculiarity was officially noticed and all of Braun's applications were inspected.

Then Braun called upon Secretary Briscoe of the Metropolitan civil service board. He is a tall up-stater, deliberate of speech and beautifully direct in his method.

"Fact is, Mr. Secretary," said he, "I don't know exactly when I was born, but I'm well inside the age limit for a policeman, and want the job.

"Now, what I want," serenely continued Mr. Braun, "is for you to settle on some date as my birthday. Take your choice on dates, so you fix one for sure."

Unable to adopt this suggestion, but eager to help the plain spoken applicant, Secretary Briscoe finally said

Braun departed to reappear 48 hours later with a brand new application, to which a formal baptismal certificate was attached. In surprise, the clerk read the date of the certificate and ejaculated:

"Great Scott, man! This christening was only done yesterday."

"That's right," replied the undismayed Braun. "The boss said, 'Get a certificate,' and there it is. I had to get baptized all regular in church to get that paper."

Braun will be permitted to take the examination.

LONG SEARCH GIVES CLEW

Detectives Believe They Are About to Unravel Mystery Surrounding Abduction.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 16.—After following a thousand clews, which took them into nearly every state of the Union and to three different continents, detectives have found at last what they believe will lead them to the solution of the mystery which has shrouded the disappearance of Frank Ely Rogers, the 13-year-old son of James C. Rogers of Evanston, and his aunt, Florence Ely, nearly two years ago.

Today William Ely, brother of Miss Florence Ely and a brother of the mother of the missing boy as well, sails for Europe on the Red Star liner Zeeland. Confident that he will meet his sister and his nephew, detectives will sail on the same steamer and watch every move, as they have since he was released from the Connecticut Penitentiary at Wethersfield eight weeks ago.

According to the theory of the detectives, Ely planned the abduction of Frank Ely Rogers because he wanted revenge on the boy's father.

OBJECT LESSON FOR HOME RULE

Irish Exhibit at World's Fair Will Have Moral Effect.

APPEAL MADE FOR FUNDS TO ERECT LARGE BUILDING

Membership of Association Expands From St. Louis to All Parts of World, With Headquarters Here.

The Irish National World's Fair Association has been organized for the purpose of seeing that Ireland, "island of the poets and saints," is properly represented at the World's Fair.

The society is composed at the present of friends of Ireland in St. Louis, but the organizers propose extending the membership to all parts of the country as rapidly as possible. It is expected that Ireland's friends throughout the world will take hold of the project.

In a statement drawn up by the officers of the association and indorsed by the officers of the Knights of St. Patrick in St. Louis attention is called to the unique position of Ireland at this time.

While having a distinctive people, she has no government on which to draw for funds, as have other nations, and whatever is done must be done through the public spirit of those interested.

Attention is called to the fact that there can be no better way of convincing the world that Ireland is worthy of home rule than by making a distinctive and creditable exhibit at the Exposition.

The projectors have investigated the plan of bringing to St. Louis for the World's Fair the chief part of the exhibits at the recent Cork Exposition, and of adding to this exhibit by getting the best of many private collections of the best works of the old artisans who make the Emerald Isle famous for wonderful bookmaking and unique metal work.

The greatest need is a building in which to place the exhibit. This will have to be erected by contributions from the friends of Ireland, and for that purpose an appeal has been made to the public.

The projectors of the building has been assured by the directors of the Exposition that a suitable site will be furnished as soon as the success of the undertaking is assured.

It is proposed to make this building typical of the picturesque architecture that so pleases the visitors to Ireland, and to make it show much that is loved by those who know the island.

The officers of the association are James A. Reardon, president; John J. O'Connor, secretary; Joseph Franklin, treasurer. Contributions are received by Joseph Franklin, treasurer, St. Louis.

North and South to Commemorate Battle of Gettysburg.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., May 16.—At a mass meeting held by the citizens of Gettysburg it was unianimously decided to hold special services on the battlefield during the first, second and third days of July in commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg.

The services, which will consist of addresses by prominent generals of both the North and South will be held on that part of the battlelfield over which Pickett made his famous charge on the afternoon of July 3, 1863, and on ground which is now known as the high-awter wark of the civil war.

OVERTAXED.

Hundreds of St. Louis Readers Know What It Means.

The kidneys are overtaxed;
Have too much to do.
They tell about it in many aches and pains—
Backache, sideache, headache,
Early symptoms of kidney ills.
Urinary troubles, diabetes, Bright's disease follow.

A St. Louis citizen tells here a certain cure.

Mrs. John Rabb of 2101 Bismarck st., Eighth Ward, says: "I can only describe the pain in my back as dreadful. I knew it arose from some disorder of the kidneys, for the kidney secretions were not normal. It was probably the result of an accident some five years ago when I fell from a street car at the corner of 18th and Locust sts. Be that as it may, although I used standard remedies guaranteed to cure kidney complaint I was never successful in obtaining anything to do me the slightest bit of good until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at 'Wolff-Wilson's,' corner 6th and Washington av."

OBITUARY.

Sacred to the memory of our beloved mother, Margaret Matter (nee Path), died May 17, 1902, aged 49 years 4 months and 17 days. A precious one from us has gone.

One year ago today,
A voice we loved is still;
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

God, in his wisdom, has recalled
The boon his love has given,
And although the body molders here,
The soul is safe in heaven.

MINERS STRIKE AT DANVILLE.

Trappers Were Refused Free Oil and the Men Walked Out.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DANVILLE, Illl., May 16.—The operators of the Danville district posted notices that after today the supply of oil furnished the trappers would be cut off, and this caused a strike at the 11 shafts of the district. Nearly 3000 miners refused to go to work until oil was furnished the trapper boys or their wages raised to cover the extra expense.

The tappers have been using about 1½ pints of oil each per day, at a cost to the operators of about 7 cents a person. One reason the operators gave for cutting off the supply was that the miners begged too much oil from the boys, thus increasing the expense to the companies.

National President Mitchell will be here on the 24th to straighten out the trouble.

ROBBED FARMER'S TEETH.

Maine Highwaymen Took Gold From Charles Meyer's Mouth.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILTON PLANTATION, Me., May 16.—Charles H. Meyers, farmer of this place, was assauitde early tonight and the gold removed from his teeth by highwaymen.

Mr. Meyers went to Lewiston recently and had his teeth thoroughly overhauled. He paid over $200 for gold fillings, caps, etc. The robbers, after chloforming him, set to work with drills and took every particle of gold from his teeth.

Officers think that one of the highwaymen was a former dentist, for the job was done in a thorough manner. After robbing the man of the gold in his teeth the assaliants went through his pockets, securing a fine gold watch and about $30 in money. It was three hours before Mr. Meyers regained consciousness.

MR. BOWEN AND THE ALLIES CLASH

Text of the Venezuelan Letter Which Stopped All Negotiations.

AMERICAN WON A VICTORY AT START

Presented at State Department Authority From Castro to Conduct Negotiations With All Powers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—How Great Britain, Germany and Italy, for the asking, could have secured from Venezuela preferential treatment in the settlement of their claims had they asked in time, and thereby been relieved of the necessity of an appeal to The Hague, with its consequent expense and delay, is told in the Blue Book, which Herbert W. Bowen, who acted as Venezuela's plenipotentiary in the peace negotiations at Washington, has prepared containing the correspondence and cablegrams relating to the Venezuelan protocols.

It shows that President Castro conferred on Mr. Bowen two sets of powers, one authorizing him to conduct negotiations exclusively with the representatives of the allied powers, Great Britain, Germany and Italy, and the other granting him full authority to effect a settlement with the representatives of all nations having claims against Venezuela. Mr. Bowen on the day of his arrival here called at the embassies of the allied powers to present his credentials. He presented first his full powers, though expecting that these would be objected to promptly, in which event he intended to fall back on the original powers granted him. Instead the Italian and British ambassadors and the German charge d'affaires accepted without question Mr. Bowen's letters empowering him to negotiate with all the creditor nations. In so doing they waived at the outset the question of separate or preferential treatment for their governments, and this point was not raised until the peace protocols were practically ready for signature.

The Early Negotiations.

The Blue Book begins with President Castro's note of Dec. 9, 1902, expressing his willingness to arbitrate the differences of the allied powers and the Caracas government and requesting Mr. Bowen to represent Venezuela as arbitrator. Many cablegrams were exchanged between Venezuela and the allies via Washington before they would agree to President Castro's proposition for preliminary negotiations at Washington looking to the raising of the blockade. The allies stood out for immediate reference to The Hague of the entire question until Secretary Hay transmitted to them a cablegram from Mr. Bowen at Caracas pointing out the unreasonableness of "forcing" any nation to carry a controversy to The Hague, which is essentially a peace tribunal.

The book makes public for the first time the text of Mr. Bowen's note of Feb. 2 to Sir Michael Herbert, the British Ambassador, which for a time threatened to break off negotiations. It is as follows:

Seek Peace, Not Alliance.

"I have given due consideration to your government's proposition that two-thirds of the 30 per cent of the customs receipts of La Guaira and Puerto Cabello be given to the allied powers, and that the remaining third be paid to the peace powers. That proposition I must decline. I cannot accept even in principle that preferential treatment can be rightly obtained by blockades and bombardments. It would be absolutely offensive to modern civilization to recognize that principle and to incorporate it into the law of nations, as it would have to be if the allied powers and the peace powers should agree to it and acknowledge it. Furthermore, that proposition is objectionable because it would keep the allied powers allied for a period of over six years. Venezuela cannot, I am sure, be expected to encourage the maintenance of alliance against her. On this side of the water we want peace, not alliances.

"Now, as the question of preferential treatment is the only one on which we have not agreed, I hereby propose that we leave that question to The Hague. What we have already agreed upon we can hold to and stand by. We need only to add to it that we have decided to submit the question of preferential treatment to The Hague.

"If this proposition is accepted—and I do not see how it can be declined—there would be, of course, no reason to continue the blockade.

"This solution of the controversy is honorable to all parties, and I beg you to communicate it to your colleagues at your earliest convenience.

Bowen Refused to Retract.

Sir Michael Herbert demanded retraction of the entire note, but Mr. Bowen refused to comply with the demand. The correspondence shows that thereupon negotiations on the part of the allies with Mr. Bowen were broken off and that President Roosevelt was invited to arbitrate the entire matter. In this correspondence the British government took exception to Mr. Bowen's statement that the Anglo-German alliance would be continued for six years were the allies given preferential treatment, and the state department was assured that the British foreign office was of the opinion that such would not be the case. The state department received these assurances as information. President Roosevelt announced his inability to accept the invitation to arbitrate the matter and negotiations with Mr. Bowen were resumed. Venezuela's representative was not a party to the arbitration to President Roosevelt, but his views, respecting it, appear from the following note, which he sent several weeks ago to the British ambassador:

"You never gave me a copy of your note of Feb. 6 to Mr. Hay and I have never possessed a copy of it. I cannot be bound by what you wrote to Mr. Hay on Feb. 6, for, if I remember rightly, your letter to him was a proposition that the question of preferential treatment be left to the President of the United States to decide. That proposition I opposed the moment your said letter was read to me. There the matter ended."

SPINSTER WITNESS IS COY

Causing the Kansas City Prosecuting Attorney All Kinds of Trouble Because of Her Modesty.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 16.—Roland Hughes, the prosecuting attorney, is having trouble in finding a witness in a murder case and all because she, for the witness is a woman, does not wish to again take chances of being put in a room with a lot of men with no other woman to talk to.

The witness in question is the most important for the state. The case in which she is expected to appear was tried [illegible] term and Judge Wofford, as is the [illegible], ordered all witnesses for the state [illegible] one room and those for the defense in [illegible] her. It so happened that all the state's [illegible] except this one were men. She, [illegible] what certain writers call a "maiden [illegible] sat upright and prim. She could [illegible] discuss the weather, because [illegible] not been introduced [illegible] of [illegible] present.

"It's very aggravating," said Hughes this morning. "Every time [illegible] get her address and a deputy goes there to serve the subpena he finds she has moved. She has even gone so far as to have her mail sent to the general delivery and called for by some one else. And all because Judge Wofford kept her in a room for two hours or so where she felt she couldn't talk."

[illegible]EN TO JAIL

[illegible], May 16.—A funeral out [illegible] took place in Franklin yes[illegible]noon. The services were over th[illegible]ns of the wife of G. B. Alderson, wh[illegible] now in jail convicted of assassinating [illegible] Hall, Jan. 5, 1902. Alderson was sentenced for life, but an appeal has been taken to the court of appeals.

After the regular funeral services were held Mrs. Alderson's remains were conveyed to the jail, where her husband could view them, and further services were conducted there. Alderson was a member of the local company which took part in the Spanish-American war. His wife died of consumption.

WHOLESALE MURDER PLOT.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 16.—Two of the four presidents of the See Yup Society, under arrest for conspiring to murder the 300 members of the Chinese Society of English Education, have made confessions. Gee Hong On, president of the On Tick Highbinder Tong and the See Yup and Lee Ying, president of the Bow Leong Tong, made startling revelation to the police.

The other See Yup presidents are in hiding, but will be arrested as fast as they can be found, upon charges of conspiracy to commit murder.

It is believed that the evidence already obtained is sufficient to send all to the penitentiary for long terms. The men under the ban of the See Yup Society were suspected of giving evidence to the authorities regarding gambling under police protection in Chinatown.

RYAN RETURNS TO FACE CHARGES

Man Who Vanquished "Cuddy Mack" Seeks to Surrender Himself.

John J. Ryan, otherwise known as "Baldy" Ryan, is at the Planters' Hotel. He is accompained by O. W. Deppler, one of his lieutenants.

Ryan says he is in the city to answer the indictment against him in connection with his turf company. The case will be called Monday. He will be here, he says, for some time. Ryan has reorganized his company and issued new stock certificates to all who were stockholders at the time of the crash. He says he expects to pay 100 cents on the dollar.

Saturday morning Ryan walked into the Carr street police station and announced that he was ready to surrender himself to answer for the alleged assault by him on John J. McGillicuddy, "Cuddy Mack," two weeks ago in the later's saloon.

Desk Sergeant McFarland told Ryan that there was no charge against him, as "Cuddy Mack" had refused to prosecute. Ryan thereupon walked out.

The annual reception and strawberry festival for the Old Ladies' Home for the Friendless will be held at the home, 4431 South Broadway, on Friday, May 22, at 2 o'clock.

HICKEY TO EXPOSE BRIBE TENDERS

Nebraska Governor Will Give Names of Men Who Offered Him Money.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 16.—Gov. Hickey said today that he intended to expose the bribe tenders who offered him money to influence the appointment to four state offices. He said:

"There will be no political trickery or 'graft' practiced during this administration. I do not know whether there has been bribery or not, but what I am I to think of a man who hopes to influence me by offering to 'donate $1000 to a certain cause,' provided I appoint him to a position, or if I favor another he offers to place the money in a third person's hands?

"I do not know whether it is bribery or not if a candidate for chief oil inspector offers to give $1000 to another person aspiring to the position as a balm."

It is stated that an investigation of the alleged attempted bribery is being demanded by persons in different parts of the state.

Loving Cup Purchased Through Contributions Sent to Post-Dispatch.

A committee of eight prominent business men waited upon Circuit Attorney Folk in his office Saturday and presented him with the solid silver loving cup purchased with contributions from the people of St. Louis through the medium of the Post-Dispatch.

James Y. Pallen, spokesman of the committee, in making the presentation, said that the cup was given as an evidence of the hearty approval by the law-abiding people of St. Louis of Mr. Folk's course in prosecuting law-breakers.

Mr. Pallen pointed out that the cup represented the spontaneous offering of several thousand contributors, as the amount subscribed came largely in nickels, dimes and quarters.

"Mr. Folk has shown," said the speaker, "that the state has rights, a fact which has been overlooked for some time."

At the conclusion of the presentation speech, three cheers were proposed in honor of Mr. Folk and given with enthusiasm.

Mr. Folk made an appreciative reply. He said that he would always treasure the cup, not so much for its intrinsic value, as for the sentiment that prompted its presentation and as an evidence that good citizens approve of the effort being made to bring about a better condition in municipal and state affairs.

"Political affiliation," contiued Mr. Folk, "cannot be made a vicarious atonement for crime. Officials are not elected to prosecute only political opponents, but to enforce the law impartially against all offenders.

"As strange as it may seem, the state has some rights. We hear much of the rights of the accused, but nothing at all of the rights of the public. The rights of the public are sacred and should be carefully defended.

"The campaign against public plunderers who have attempted to prostitute the functions of the state to their own vicious ends is well under way. The fight is on, and every citzen must march either under the flag of decency or the banner of inquity."

resentative of the former. Rabbi Rosenfeld, who is an orthodox Jew, was placed at the head of the committee because the Jews in Kishineff are all orthodox. He is the rabbi of the Shareth Sefard Synagogue. The committee will continue to receive and forward subscriptions.

Local committees are collecting funds in all the large cities of the country in response to an appeal sent out by the relief committee at Kishineff. An official translation of the appeal, reprinted in another column in Jewish type, is as follows:

"Thousands of families, representing all classes—storekeepers, merchants and laborers—remain in the city without clothing for their bodies and without a crust of bread to eat. Their dwellings and homes have been destroyed. Their furniture and household utensils have beeen broken or stolen. Cash money and valuable documents have been torn and burned, and long accumulated wealth has vanished to the last penny, so that nothing remains to sustain the broken bodies and souls.

Fifty Are Dead, Many More Wounded.

"About 50 Jews are dead and about 85 are fatally wounded. Scores of women and girls were assaulted and about 500 persons are confined in the city hospital suffering from minor injuries. The great majority of these unfortunates are now scattered through the streets, without a roof over their heads and in great distress and want. A small measure of assistance has been afforded by a committee organized in this city, which is doing all in its power to raise funds, but the misfortune is so great and the distress so pressing and overwhelming that any amount of relief will scarcely suffice.

"Aid, immediate aid, is needed. We earnestly appeal to you to organize a committee in your city to raise funds. The sympathy that has beeen extended to us in times of famine give us hope that our brethren throughout the world will not abandon us to death and starvation."

Dr. J. S. Mutchnick, Dr. J. M. Bernstein Cohen, Rev. A. S. Ettinger, M. B. Sluzk, M. Funkelmann, A. S. Kenijshats, M. S. Cooperwasser, M. Klingmann, J. M. Krasilshik, S. H. Perelmutter, A. Halpern, S. M. Grossmann, E. J. Reidel, Z. Rosenfeldt.

During his visits to Kishineff, Rabbi Rosenfeld became well acquainted with two members of this committee, Mr. Perlemutter and A. Halpern.

To the Post-Dispatch yesterday the rabbi and his son talked about Kishineff and the atrocities recently committed there. They acted as translator and occasionally added to his father's remarks.

"Kishineff is a large city," he said. "It has probably 150,000 inhabitants. Of this number 50,000 are Jews.

"In America it is difficult to understand how a massacre could take place in so large a city. But when you have lived in Russia, it is very simple.

Even Nihilists Persecute Jews.

"The Jews are persecuted by the government, and it seems that even the Nihilists, who are opposed to the government, persecute the Jews to make the government appear more cruel to the outside world.

"The persecution is largely on religious grounds. The Christians, that is the members of the Russian church, are bitterly opposed to the Jews. All the officials, of course, belong to the Russian church.

"A large portion of the people are ignorant and believe what is told them about the Jews. Many of them believe the old story that the Jews use human blood to celebrate the Passover, notwithstanding an Emperor of Russia has publicly announced that this was not true.

"From what we read in Jewish papers and letters from Kishineff it appears that the recent massacre was caused by the finding of the dead body of a Christian by the roadside. Somebody said a Jew killed him. Excitement followed, then the riots and the killing of the Jews and the looting of their stores.

"We have learned that Mr. Perlemutter, who is a very rich banker, did not suffer by the looting, and that we can safely send funds to him.

Harmony Has Prevailed There.

"We were very much surprised to hear of the outbreak against the Jews in Kishineff. The Jews there have always fared well with the Christians in the past, and they have lived there a long number of years. There have been troubles in other provinces, but not in Bessarabia. Tierospol, the other city in which the Jews were attacked recently, is also in Bessarabia. Kishineff is the capital of Bessarabia, which is one of the richest provinces in Russia. Many of the Jews there were quite rich and were prominent in the community.

"I came to St. Louis from a neighboring province in Russia 12 years ago. I had a friend at that time, though I was quite young, who taught Hebrew in Kishineff. I have written to find out whether anything happened to him."

Mr. Rosenfeld says the Jews all over the United States are responding to the appeal of the Kishineff committee. He says $20,000 has been sent from New York.

CARRIED GUNBOAT ON A FLAT CAR

Nicaragua Suppressed the Latest Rebellion by Heroic Method.

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Some queer tales of revolutionary troubles have come from the Central and South American republics, but they all are eclipsed by the way in which the latest rebellion in Nicaragua was suppressed.

Managua, the capital, is located on Lake Managua, up in the mountains. The only boat on the lake was the Victoria; a pleasure steamer, which was seized by the rebels at the start of the revolution.

They put guns aboard the ship and roved about the lake, seizing government property, pressing the natives living along the shore into their ranks under penalty of bombardment of their villages.

When the rebel commander threatened to bombard the capital the government was forced to heroic action. The only way in which a warship could be gotten into the lake was to put it on wheels and this was literally done. A large flat car was hastily built. The little gunboat, Once de Julio, which was in the Pacific ocean, was hoisted on the car and hauled over the railroad to Managua.

She was launched again behind the fortifications of the city, sailed out on the lake and, with her superior armament, easily captured the rebel ship.

Minister Merry cabled the state department today that the revolution was a failure.

WOMAN HELD IN STONE WALL

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

BAKU, Russia, May 16.—A stonemason was at work on an old wall in the center of this town when a carriage swiftly drove up to him, two masked men jumped out, threw a bag over his head, bundled him into the carriage and galloped away.

After half an hour's furious driving the mason was told to alight, the sack was taken from his head and he found himself in an old-fashioned courtyard. He was pushed through a door into a corridor and in an empty room he noticed an opening in a stone wall in which was wedged a woman, trembling and with terrified face. The men who had brought the mason pointed revolvers at his breast and ordered him to wall up the opening with the woman behind it, threatening to shoot him dead if he refused. Stones, mortar and trowels were in the room.

He was told that she was a Mohammedan who had injured her husband. The mason built up the opening, the sack was again drawn over his head, and three-quarters of an hour later he was put out of the carriage at a lonely part of the city.

As soon as he could free himself of the sack he did so, but the carriage had disappeared. He went immediately to the police and told his story, but although the police are ransacking the houses in the Mohammedan quarter, they can find no trace of the locality of this horrible crime.

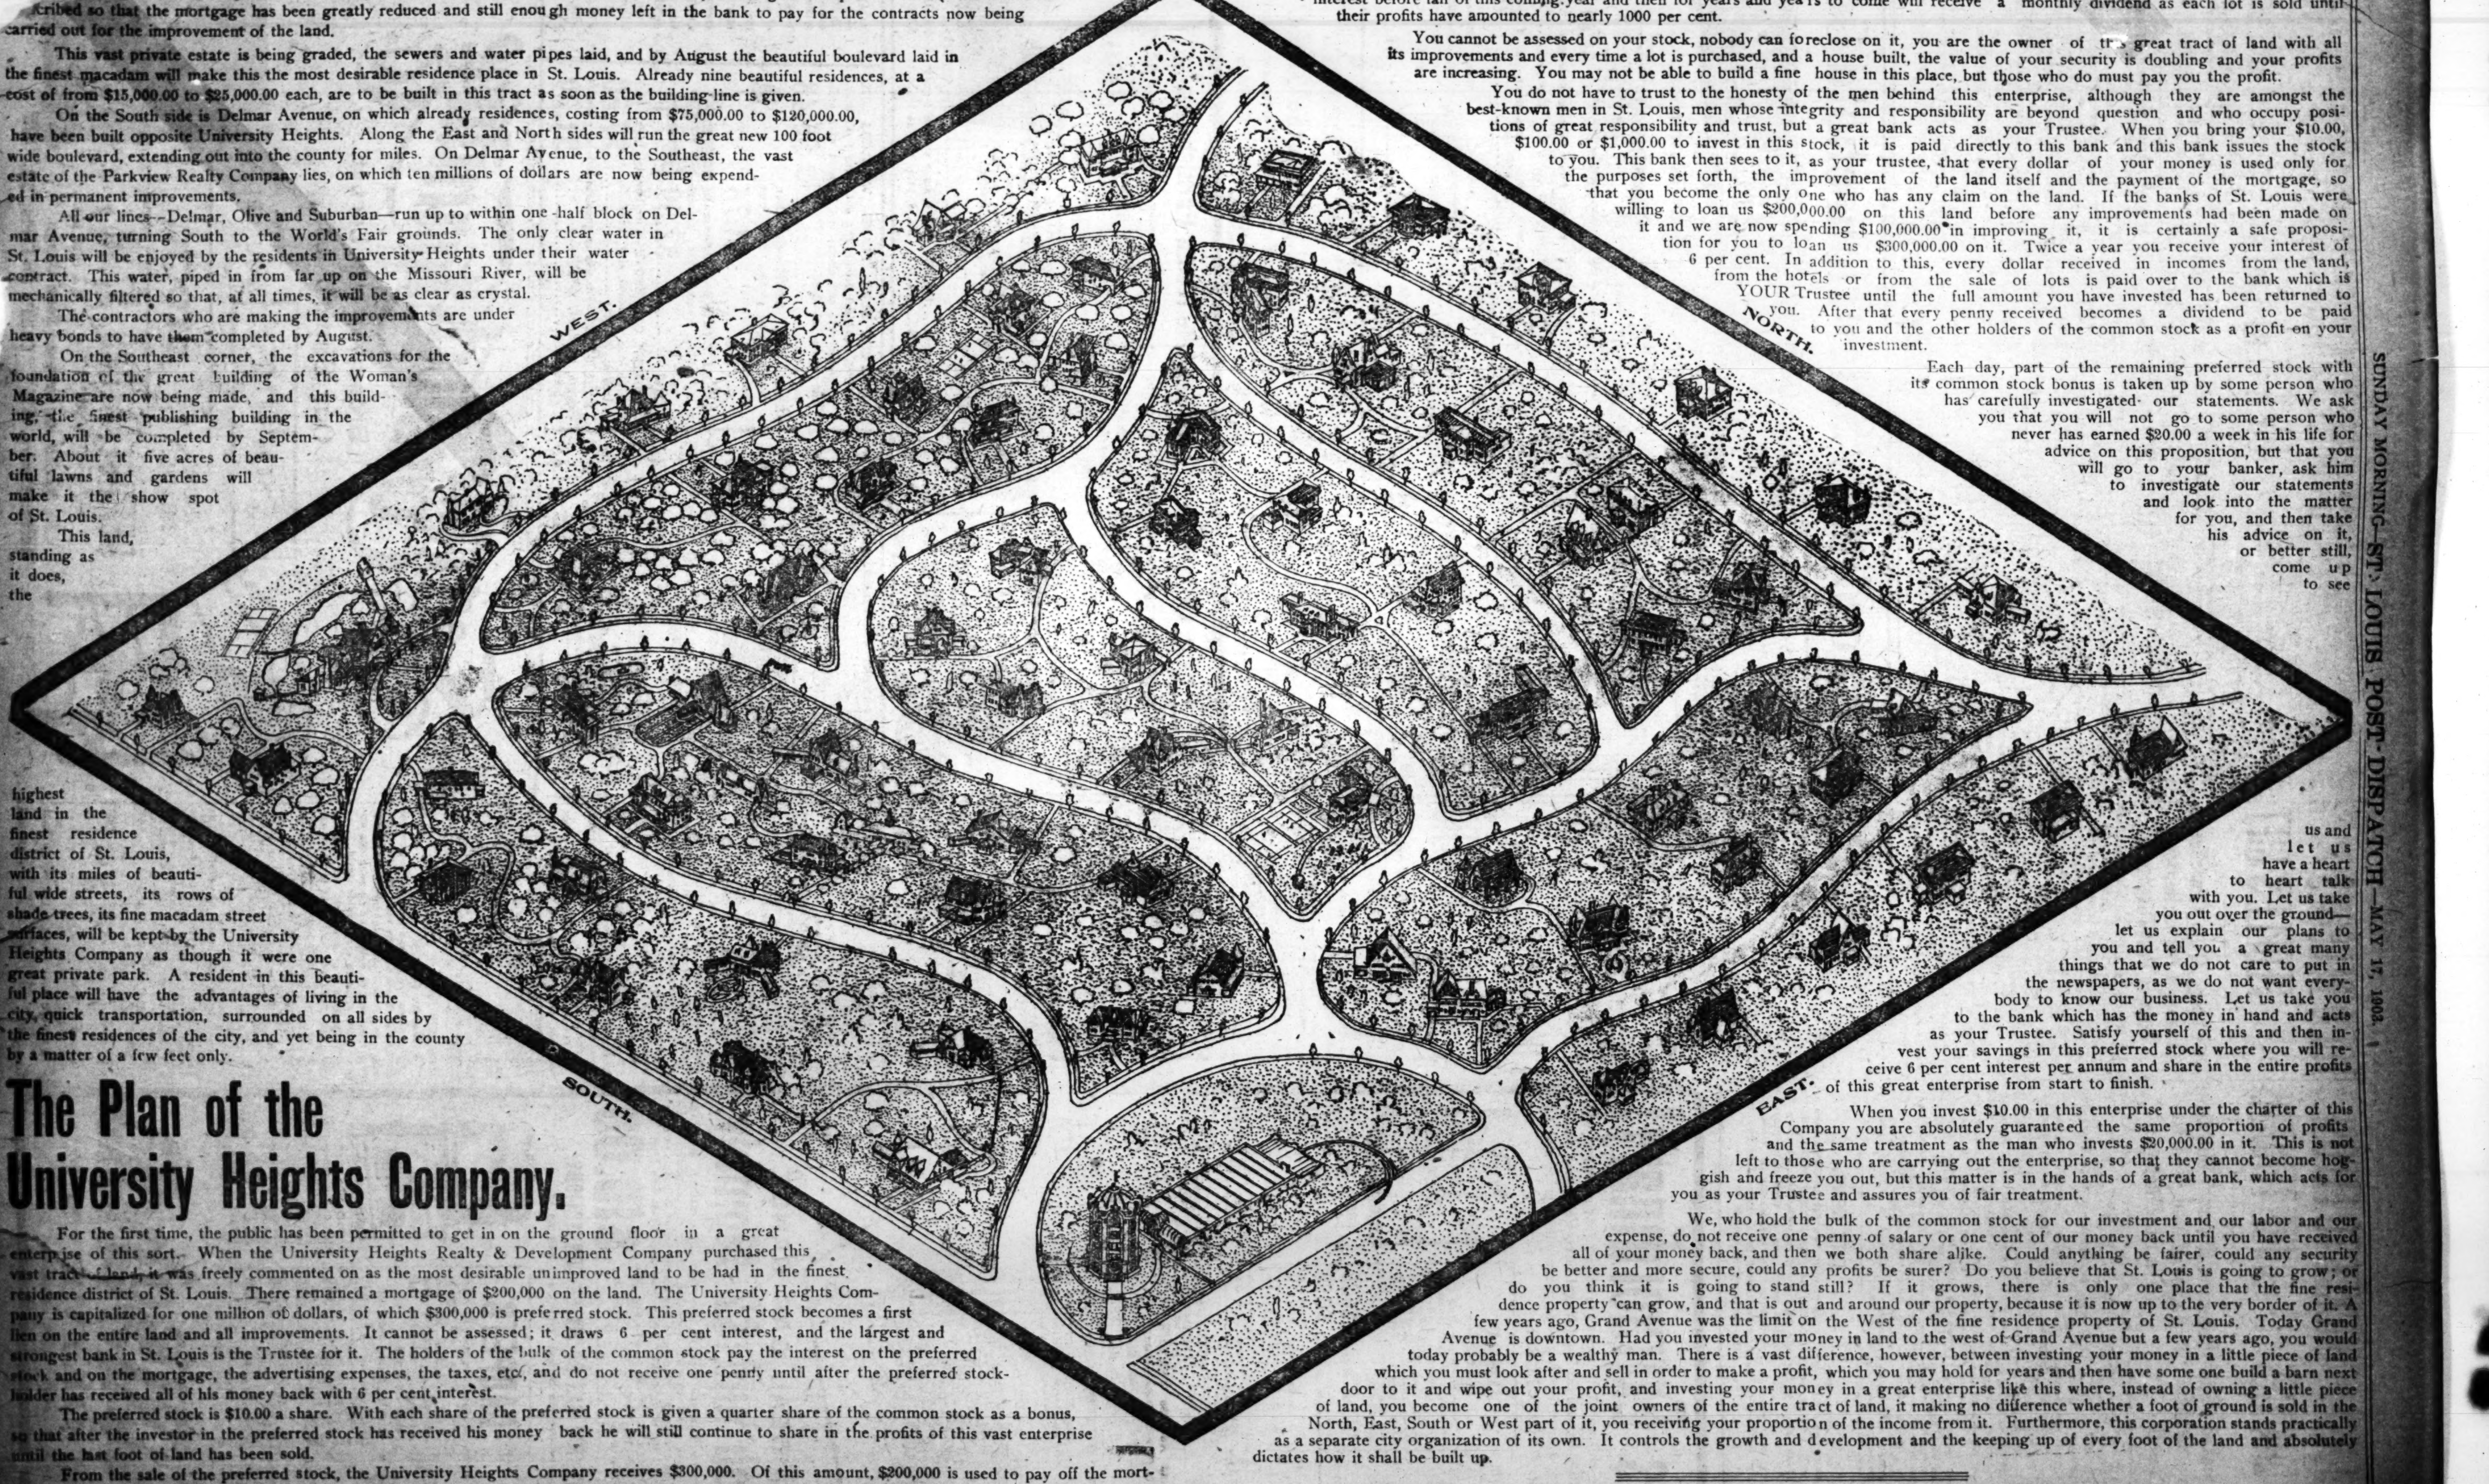
ISOMETRIC VIEW OF UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS.

This view shows the great tract of land as it will appear when the improvements are complete, allowing one house to each one and one-quarter acres. In reality, three times this number of fine residences will have plenty of room in this place.



The great tract of land (85 acres, 50 city blocks) owned by the University Heights Realty & Development Company is rapidly being laid into the largest and finest private residence place in the West, if not in the entire country. Enough of the preferred stock has now been scribed so that the mortgage has been greatly reduced and still enough money left in the bank to pay for the contracts now being carried out for the improvement of the land.

This vast private estate is being graded, the sewers and water pipes laid, and by August the beautiful boulevard laid in the finest macadam will make this the most desirable residence place in St. Louis. Already nine beautiful residences, at a cost of from $15,000.00 to $25,000.00 each, are to be built in this tract as soon as the building-line is given.

On the South side is Delmar Avenue, on which already residences, costing from $75,000.00 to $120,000.00, have been built opposite University Heights. Along the East and North sides will run the great new 100 foot wide boulevard, extending out into the county for miles. On Delmar Avenue, to the Southeast, the vast estate of the Parkview Realty Company lies, on which ten millions of dollars are now being expended in permanent improvements.

All our lines—Delmar, Olive and Suburban—run up to within one-half block on Delmar Avenue, turning South to the World's Fair grounds. The only clear water in St. Louis will be enjoyed by the residents in University Heights under their water contract. This water, piped in from far up on the Missouri River, will be mechanically filtered so that, at all times, it will be as clear as crystal.

The contractors who are making the improvements are under heavy bonds to have them completed by August.

On the Southeast corner, the excavations for the foundation of the great building of the Woman's Magazine are now being made, and this building, the finest publishing building in the world, will be completed by September. About it five acres of beautiful lawns and gardens will make it the show spot of St. Louis.

This land, standing as it does, the highest land in the finest residence district of St. Louis, with its miles of beautiful wide streets, its rows of shade trees, its fine macadam street surfaces, will be kept by the University Heights Company as though it were one great private park. A resident in this beautiful place will have the advantages of living in the city, quick transportation, surrounded on all sides by the finest residences of the city, and yet being in the county by a matter of a few feet only.

The Plan of the University Heights Company.

For the first time, the public has been permitted to get in on the ground floor in a great enterprise of this sort. When the University Heights Realty & Development Company purchased this vast tract of land, it was freely commented on as the most desirable unimproved land to be had in the finest residence district of St. Louis. There remained a mortgage of $200,000 on the land. The University Heights Company is capitalized for one million of dollars, of which $300,000 is preferred stock. This preferred stock becomes a first lien on the entire land and all improvements. It cannot be assessed; it draws 6 per cent interest, and the largest and strongest bank in St. Louis is the Trustee for it. The holders of the bulk of the common stock pay the interest on the preferred stock and on the mortgage, the advertising expenses, the taxes, etc., and do not receive one penny until after the preferred stockholder has received all of his money back with 6 per cent interest.

The preferred stock is $10.00 a share. With each share of the preferred stock is given a quarter share of the common stock as a bonus, so that after the investor in the preferred stock has received his money back he will still continue to share in the profits of this vast enterprise until the last foot of land has been sold.

From the sale of the preferred stock, the University Heights Company receives $300,000. Of this amount, $200,000 is used to pay off the mortgage on the land and the remaining $100,000 is used to pay for the permanent improvements on the land itself. This land, with all its improvements, becomes the security to the preferred stockholder for his money.

Land but three blocks east of us on Delmar Avenue has recently been sold for $200.00 per front foot. The land across the street from us to the Southeast is having $85.00 per front foot spent on it in permanent improvements, yet if the land of the University Heights Company would sell for $18.00 per front foot, after all the streets had been made, the water and sewer pipes laid and all improvements completed, this would bring in enough money to pay back the preferred stockholders with interest. In addition to this, as the University Heights land is the only available land in the West End where large temporary hotels can be erected for the World's Fair, because it is the only land that has sewer and water connections that is now vacant, the University Heights Company have been able to secure the erection of two great hotels on its land and a third one is now under negotiations. Not one dollar of this Company's money is invested in these hotels. It simply gives the use of the land and receives in return a royalty on each guest each night until the Fair closes and the hotels are removed. It is but a fair estimate that these royalties will amount to sufficient to pay the preferred stockholders in this Company 100 cents on the dollar in dividends, returning the entire amount of their money and leaving the entire land with all its improvements as a clear profit, so that the sale of the land itself will pay enormous additional dividends to the stockholders. If this land realizes but $50.00 per front foot, after all improvements are made, it would bring to the stockholders of this Company nearly a million and half dollars in profits.

Nobody can destroy the security or run away with it, every day the value of the land increases, owing to the great improvements that are going on all about it, and as each dollar is added to the value of the land, the value of the stock (which owns the land) doubles in proportion. It is safe to say that the man or woman who invests their money in this preferred stock will have received back their money with 6 per cent interest before fall of this coming year and then for years and years to come will receive a monthly dividend as each lot is sold until their profits have amounted to nearly 1000 per cent.

You cannot be assessed on your stock, nobody can foreclose on it, you are the owner of this great tract of land with all its improvements and every time a lot is purchased, and a house built, the value of your security is doubling and your profits are increasing. You may not be able to build a fine house in this place, but those who do must pay you the profit.

You do not have to trust to the honesty of the men behind this enterprise, although they are amongst the best-known men in St. Louis, men whose integrity and responsibility are beyond question and who occupy positions of great responsibility and trust, but a great bank acts as your Trustee. When you bring your $10.00, $100.00 or $1,000.00 to invest in this stock, it is paid directly to this bank and this bank issues the stock to you. This bank then sees to it, as your trustee, that every dollar of your money is used only for the purposes set forth, the improvement of the land itself and the payment of the mortgage, so that you become the only one who has any claim on the land. If the banks of St. Louis were willing to loan us $200,000.00 on this land before any improvements had been made on it and we are now spending $100,000.00 in improving it, it is certainly a safe proposition for you to loan us $300,000.00 on it. Twice a year you receive your interest of 6 per cent. In addition to this, every dollar received in incomes from the land, from the hotels or from the sale of lots is paid over to the bank which is YOUR Trustee until the full amount you have invested has been returned to you. After that every penny received becomes a dividend to be paid to you and the other holders of the common stock as a profit on your investment.

Each day, part of the remaining preferred stock with its common stock bonus is taken up by some person who has carefully investigated our statements. We ask you that you will not go to some person who never has earned $20.00 a week in his life for advice on this proposition, but that you will go to your banker, ask him to investigate our statements and look into the matter for you, and then take his advice on it, or better still, come up to see us and let us have a heart to heart talk with you. Let us take you out over the ground—let us explain our plans to you and tell you a great many things that we do not care to put in the newspapers, as we do not want everybody to know our business. Let us take you to the bank which has the money in hand and acts as your Trustee. Satisfy yourself of this and then invest your savings in this preferred stock where you will receive 6 per cent interest per annum and share in the entire profits of this great enterprise from start to finish.

When you invest $10.00 in this enterprise under the charter of this Company you are absolutely guaranteed the same proportion of profits and the same treatment as the man who invests $20,000.00 in it. This is not left to those who are carrying out the enterprise, so that they cannot become hoggish and freeze you out, but this matter is in the hands of a great bank, which acts for you as your Trustee and assures you of fair treatment.

We, who hold the bulk of the common stock for our investment and our labor and our expense, do not receive one penny of salary or one cent of our money back until you have received all of your money back, and then we both share alike. Could anything be fairer, could any security be better and more secure, could any profits be surer? Do you believe that St. Louis is going to grow; or do you think it is going to stand still? If it grows, there is only one place that the fine residence property can grow, and that is out and around our property, because it is now up to the very border of it. A few years ago, Grand Avenue was the limit on the West of the fine residence property of St. Louis. Today Grand Avenue is downtown. Had you invested your money in land to the west of Grand Avenue but a few years ago, you would today probably be a wealthy man. There is a vast difference, however, between investing your money in a little piece of land which you must look after and sell in order to make a profit, which you may hold for years and then have some one build a barn next door to it and wipe out your profit, and investing your money in a great enterprise like this where, instead of owning a little piece of land, you become one of the joint owners of the entire tract of land, it making no difference whether a foot of ground is sold in the North, East, South or West part of it, you receiving your proportion of the income from it. Furthermore, this corporation stands practically as a separate city organization of its own. It controls the growth and development and the keeping up of every foot of the land and absolutely dictates how it shall be built up.

The least that you can do is to let us send you our book.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Andrew Carnegie has given away to date to cities, towns, individuals and institutions, for various purposes, $90,912,228.

Within the past year Mr. Carnegie has given away the largest sums since he began the distribution of his surplus income.

More than one-third of the total was given to his native Scotland and to the city in which he grew from a telegraph messenger boy to the greatest iron master of the age and in which he laid the foundation of his vast fortune.

To Scotland, where Mr. Carnegie now is, at Skibo Castle, the sum of $17,713,750 was donated, and Pittsburg received $18,804,000.

If the amount contributed to Allegheny is included with that to Pittsburg the total for the two cities is $19,199,000.

Very little money has gone direct to the maintenance of charitable institutions. Mr. Carnegie does not believe in supporting paupers or other dependents, his whole purpose being to help men and women to be self-sustaining.

The list that precedes is an account up to the time of Mr. Carnegie's departure for Europe on April 24 last.

BURGLAR KNEADED THE DOUGH.

Thus Did Pennance to Woman Who Found Him in Her House.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONACA, Pa., May 16.—Mrs. Kate S. Lawson yesterday found a man standing in the room next to the kitchen. He commandeed her to keep quiet, displaying a revolver, and asked what she was doing up so early. She said she got up to knead dough. He invited her to a seat.

Taking off his hat and coat, and washing his hands, he set out to knead a batch of dough. He explained that he had been all over the house, and got no money, so, as he might have to go back to his old trade of baking, he would take this opportunity to get his hand in.

FORESIGHT SAVED ANCIENT TREES

OLDEST LIVING OBJECTS PROTECTED BY STATUTES

President Roosevelt, sleeping under his blanket amid the giant trees in Sequoia National Park the other night, cut off from all communication with the great nation which he governs, might afford a picture for an artist as striking as the famous painting "It Is the Emperor," which represents Napoleon standing guard while the derelict sentry sleeps beneath the adjacent haystack.

Former Secretary of the Interior John W. Noble of St. Louis, to whom belongs the credit of preserving these giant forests, read of the President's night in the woods with manifest interest yesterday.

"I have been among these great trees," said Gen. Noble, "and no one who has ever seen them could fail to envy President Roosevelt his Sunday there with my old friend, John Muir, the naturalist, who has spent his life, one might say, among these venerable monarchs of the forests.

"When one remembers that the Sequoia trees of California are the oldest living things on the face of the earth, one must be lacking in reverence not to honor them.

"These trees are, some of them, 6000 years old. They blossom in winter, when the golden shower of their splendid bloom sprinkles the surrounding snow banks.

"When while this vast continent was swathed in ice and snow these very trees were in the places where they now stand.

"Fortunately I was enabled during my term as secretary of the interior to do something to preserve these monster monuments of the past.

"Little or nothing had been done toward their preservation up to the time President Harrison took office. I had entered upon the multitudinous duties of the secretaryship of the interior, with only the ordinary knowledge of a St. Louis lawyer, but with an inherent love of nature.

"The western people rightly demanded the preservation of these forests. I talked the matter over with the President. He said: 'Go on and do what you think is right. I will aid you all I can.' The result was that we secured these tracts of forest land as a government reservation. We preserved them from future vandalism, established the forest police and told the sheep raisers they could stay, but they must not burn or injure the trees. It was thus our privilege in later years to know that we saved the California trees for all time to come.

"No one can contemplate them with less awe and veneration than did Napoleon view the pyramids of Egypt. For while the stony parapets of the desert are cold and mute, the great Sequoid graves beneath which the President slept have yearly blossomed, grown and expanded, through six centuries of time.

The riddle of the sphinx may allure the mystic. Her rocky lips are closed in useless silence. The maripose trees proclaim today as they have through ages past the wonderful praises of Nature's God.

Sent Big Trunk to Chicago Fair.

"I took it upon myself," said Gen. Noble, "to expend $10,000 to have the trunk of one of these giants exhibited as a human habitation at the Chicago Exposition. Tens of thousands who otherwise never could have seen the magnificent beauty of one of these trees daily climbed the spiral stairway constructed within its ample trunk. That tree is now in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington. I only hope that an effort may be made to include it at the St. Louis fair next year.

"There are few who know how these Sequoia trees came to get their name. They were named from an Indian chief called Sequoyah, meaning "He guessed it." Sequoyah was born of Indian and German parentage, and it was he who formulated the Cherokee alphabet, which philologists declare is even more perfect than the Arobec. It was because he guessed out this means of communication that he was called Sequoyoh. When the British heard the name they tried to Latinize it by spelling it Seequoia.

Aristocray of Trees Defined.

"Yes, there is an aristocracy of trees," said Gen. Noble, "just as there is of men. Take that tree of the Bible—the cedars of Lebanon. It is of the royal line of forestry. It is evergreen, with shapely tpering trunks nd broad expanse of outstretched bows. Self-protected from insect life by its resinous odor, the wood possesses great durability and is easily converted into the most beautiful shapes that man could desire. Can you wonder that Solomon, in all his wisdom, selected this royal specimen with which to adorn the holy temple?

Then there is the hickory. From it man has learned to make the cradle of his children as well as the primeval craddle with which he garnered his wheat and oats. From it the pioneer shaped his ax helve and his ox yokes.

Splitting straight beneath his blade, it easily lent itself to the open fireplace, blazing and sputtering in cheerful merriment to warm and light his cabin home.

Amenable as it is to man's wishes, yet so straight and unyielding to wrongful treatment, it became the synonym of unbending integrity and linked its name to the President who will always be known as "Old Hickory.".

"And so, as the antipodes of these monarchs, we find growing among bogs and quagmires the natural sluiceways of certain parts of our state, the Missouri blackjack oak, whose acorns are too bitter for swine to eat, and whose features repel the eye.

NEGRO GETS $2000 CONSULSHIP

Americans at St. Thomas, However, Do Not Relish Appointment.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Christopher W. Payne, a negro from Huntington, W. Va., has been appointed consul at St. Thomas, D. W. I. The selary is $2000.

The consulate is the most important in the West Indies and Payne wil have two white consular agents subordinate to him on the island of St. Croix. Payne is an active politician and had considerable influence among the negroes of West Virginia.

Payne succeeds Mahlon Van Horne, appointed in 1897 from Rhode Island. The Danish islands are largely populated by negroes and it has been the custom to maintain a negro consulate at St. Thomas.

Many Americans in business in St. Thomas and St. Croix, where they own much of the sugar plantations, have protested against the negro consular policy.

Wages Are Behind Expenses.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan., May 16.—Labor Commissioner Johnson's report shows that, since 1890, wages in Kansas have increased 16½ per cent, while the cost of living has increased 44 6-10ths per cent.

DEFENDS LAW TO CRUSH FREE PRESS

Gov. Pennypacker Says Pennsylvania's Infamous Libel Statute Is Beneficent.

BY JAMES CREELMAN.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—Gov. Pennypacker defends the new libel law which has aroused editors throughout the land. He declares that Pennsylvania is the greatest state in the Union and is not controlled by corrupt politcians.

"Will you take advantage of the new law yourself and sue the newspapers which are attacking you in cartoons today?"

"I have been too busy attending to my official duties to look at the newspapers."

"Then I can tell you that the Philadelphia North Amarecan printed today a cartoon repersenting you as an ugly parrot with your feathers pulled out and a bandage around your head. It was much worse than the cartoon you complained of in your message. Do you intend to sue the North American?"

"I do not care to speak of my personal intentions. I am too busy to look at the papers."

"Do you think the law is constitutional?"

"I have signed it; I have given my official opinion."

"But your opinion as a lawyer?"

"I do not think it fair to ask me for my private legal opinion. The law is there and the courts will pass upon it."

"You certainly must be aware, governor, that this law is regarded as an outrage all over the country?"

"An outrage in what respect?"

"In that it is an attempt to restrict and cripple a moral agency which is an indisputable adjunct of free government."

Does Not Believe in a Free Press.

"I do not admit that the press is a part of the government," said the governor. "Would you say that a music teacher is a part of the government? And yet a music teacher instructs and elevates the people."

"To speak quite plainly, Gov. Pennypacker, it is pretty generally believed that Pennsylvania is a state given up absolutely into the control of corrupt politicians."

"That is absolutely untrue. Who says such things?"

"Mr. John Wanamaker, for instance, the greatest merchant in your state, told me some time ago that, from a political standpoint Pennsylvania was a sunken state, lying in an almost hopeless moral abyss."

"It was very wrong on that gentleman's part to say such a thing. He had ambitions of his own and they were defeated. He based his ambitions upon his claims as a merchant. His failure to accomplish what he desired may account for his utterances."

"But, governor, it is generally believed that Pennsylvania is an utterly corrupt state, that the only check upon corruption has been the independent and honest press."

"The fact is," said Gov. Pennypacker, "that Pennsylvania is a little better than any other state in the Union."

"You don't mean that seriously?"

"I do."

He cited the many great deeds of Pennsylvanians told of in history.

"But today, governor—the Pennsylvania of today?"

"Pennsylvania of today spends more for schools and charities than any state in the Union."

"But are your elections honest?"

"As I said before, Pennsylvania is a little better than any other state. Public offices are managed here on a broader and better basis, leading to higher thought and better results."

"Apparently you do not care to answer the charge that you have been used by corrupt politicians as an instrument to silence the criticism of the press."

"You can say," answered he, "that the governor of Pennsylvania has sat on the judicial bench for 10 years; that at the time of his nomination for governor he had just been elected for another period of 10 years; that he did not seek to be governor; that he did not desire the office and that he is not a politician."

"And what do you say to the charge that this press law is the result of corrupt politics waging war on reformatory forces, and that it is a disgrace not only to Pennsylvania, but to the whole nation?"

"It is false. Pennsylvania has simply put the newspaper press on the same footing with other private business; that is all there is to the law."

Press Generally Attacks Governor.

The governor's message explaining and defending the new law his stirred the most sedate newspaper of the Quaker commonwealth to burst forth into cartoons, and even the Philadelphia Ledger, soberest of journals, has actually bit its thumb at the tyrant, while Mr. Wanamaker's paper, the North American, has broken the law in a dozen ways and has said of the governor's message:

"Its ideals are ignoble and its morals are sodden as those of the middle ages. It breathes the spirit than animates tyrants and urges the familiar tyrant's plea against free speech and a free press. It would fit the lips of a Torquemada or a Louis XI and should blister the tongue of any lover of liberty to utter."

In every city, town and village of Pennsylvania the newspapers of the parties are uttering defiance to Mr. Pennypacker and the new press muzzling law.

Not since the civil war has that corporation-ridden and politically sodden state shown so much sensitiveness. In whipping the press law through his abject legislature, Senator Quay has at last touched the moral nerve center of his community.

This amazing statute declares that in all civil actions which may be brought against the proprietor, owner, publisher or managing editor of any Pennsylvania newspaper. "If it shall be shown that the publication complained of resulted from negligence in the ascertainments of the facts or in the publication thereof, compensatory damages may be recovered for injuries to business and reputation resulting from such publication, as well as damages for the physical and mental suffering endured by the injured party or parties. Whenever in any such action it shall be shown that the matter complained of is libelous and that such libelous matter has been given special prominence by the use of pictures, cartoons, headlines, displayed type, or any other matter calculated to specially attract attention, the jury shall have the right to award punitive damages against the defendant."

In other words, Senator Quay and his political freebooters are not satisfied with the present law of wilful libel, and have created an instrument by means of which they expect to terrify hostile newspapers and suppress cartoons.

STRENUOUS LIFE IS INJURIOUS SAYS DOCTOR OSBORNE

POST-DISPATCH BUREAU,
1345 Pennsylvania Avenue.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Dr. Oliver T. Osborne's paper on "The Srenuous Life," which was read before the American Therapeutic Society here this week, led to the conclusion that Americans live at too fast a pace.

He enumerated the various strains under which we labor in electric cars, jolting in elevators, exciting times in running or dodging automobiles and the like.

Dr. Osborne said the strenuousness of the life of the average American business man has a tendency to increase cardiac and arterial weaknesses, and that another cause for the many breakdowns is the constantly increasing and reckless use of coal tar products for the relief of pain.

These are Dr. Osborne's ideas. Nearly all the noted doctors at the congress coincide. One who does not is Prof. Hanskehr of Vienna.

"Tut, tut," said Prof. Hanskelhr. "I don't think this strenuous life of you Americans is killing anyone.

"I confess I like the American way. The hurry, the bustle, as you call it, does not, in my opinion, kill men. They are put here to work hard. If you Americans work harder than other people, then you are fulfilling to a larger degree the purpose of your being here. That is my idea of a strenuous life."

"I agree with Dr. Osborne," said Dr. Matthew D. Mann of Buffalo, one of the surgeons who attended President McKinley after he was shot.

"I did not hear the paper read, but the idea that Americans drive themselves too fast is a correct one. After the heart has been worn out by the strain given it by the life of the American, it is useless to expect drugs to restore it.

"The constant nervous shocks to which Americans subject themselves, have the same effect as fast driving on a high-strung horse. Any owner or driver will tell you it is not the distance the horse is driven, but the speed at which he goes, that does the injury.

Distinction Without Difference.

From Comfort.

Mr. Jones: It is useless my arguing with a woman who says she is always right.

Mrs. Jones: I never made any such assertion, and it's utterly cruel and unkind of you to say so. I did not say I was always right; I simply asserted that I was never wrong.

I live at the sanitarium, giving my patients my constant care, either day or night. Ladies, when in trouble and in need of a friend and first-class physician and surgeon, come to me. I have twenty years' experience and have made your ills a life study. I am indorsed by every well-known physician of this city, and have hospital experience in this country as well as in Europe. A great many of you have been injured for life by trusting yourself into the hands of inexperienced midwives. Come to me and I will absolutely guarantee success and my fees are no higher than theirs. If you have been treated elsewhere without success, call at my modern office and I will take your case with a full guarantee.

BIG SALE NEW PIANOS

$175 AND $195

BARDBURY PIANO WAREROOMS, 1012 OLIVE ST., F. G. SMITH, MFR., A. E. WHITAKER, MGR.

This week we begin a big sale of new pianos, the regular prices of which are $300 and $350. We will close them out at $175 and $195. We have lately discontinued a number of our country agencies, and have taken the stock they carried into our warerooms. We do not want to put them into our regular stock and have determined to close them out at wholesale prices, same as we charged the agents to whom they were consigned. None of them have been used, but a few of them are slightly shopworn, but every one is as good as new and are in the latest modern style cases and a beautiful variety of woods. Every one is fully guaranteed for 10 years. This will be a rare opportunity for you to buy a piano, at exactly the same price as if you were a dealer. We will close out every one of them at the actual wholesale price as follows:

$300 beautiful oak uprights at	$175
$300 beautiful mahogany uprights at	$175
$350 beautiful walnut uprights at	$195
$350 beautiful oak uprights at	$195
$350 beautiful mahogany uprights at	$195

These prices are spot cash, but if you want time we will sell them to you at these prices, only charging you a reasonable interest.

USED UPRIGHTS.

We have a fine line of used upright pianos in ebony, walnut and mahogany cases, which we will close out this week at $125, $135, $145, $155, $165. Bradbury, Gabler, Kranich & Bach, Henning and other reliable makes.

SQUARES.

Almost given away this week. Nice small squares, good for beginners and practice work at $25, $25 and $30. Elegant modern style squares with all the improvements at $50, $55, $60 and upwards. Some of these originally cost $450 and $600, but we need the room they take and are closing them out at these astonishingly low prices.

BABY GRANDS.

We have an elegant Bradbury Baby Grand piano which originally sold for $950; we are offering this week at $525. We carry a beautiful line of new Baby Grands, which we sell about $200 less than dealers' prices.

PIANO PLAYERS.

Before purchasing a piano self-player call and see the celebrated Simplex which we have lately added to our stock. "It makes musicians of us all." Our stock is new and fresh, having come from the factory and we are making special inducements just now to get this new branch of our business started.

ORGANS.

A splendid line of new organs at prices about one-half of what dealers charge you.

REMEMBER.

We can suit you in anything in the way of a piano or organ. We are manufacturers, with three factories, the largest piano case factory in the world, and warerooms in nearly all the large cities of the United States. We do business on a large scale and buy all our materials in large quantities and give you the benefit in low prices. Bradbury Piano Warerooms, 1012 Olive st., F. G. Smith, Mfr., A. E. MOLINEUX ASKS PRISON MEASURES

Counsel Demands Bertillon Records in Light of Defendant's Acquittal.

TROY, N. Y., May 16.—Counsel for Roland Molineux appeared before Justice Howard here today and asked for an order directing the state superintendent of prisons to deliver all photographs, Bertillon measurements and other personal description of Molineux taken while he was in Sing Sing prison under sentence of death.

The petitioner's counsel argued that the reversal of Molineux's conviction by the court of appeals and his subsequent acquittal made it as if he had never been accused. Deputy Attorney-General Church opposed the motion, on the ground that the state records could not be delivered up or destroyed in the manner desired. The court reserved decision.

Misses—Held 0, Dueker 4, Clark 4, Giessow 2, Wood 4.

His name is Eugene Held.

If you further inquire about him you will find that the most important fact connected with his recent history, among the bowling fraternity, is that he won the roll-off game in the tie of "90" men, for the Post-Dispatch trophy last night, with a score of 63.

He has done other things in a cocked-hat way, such as lead the Central League for many weeks and generally so conduct himself to be counted in the flight of first ten bowlers of the city.

But his victory in the roll-off is perhaps the most noteworthy of all his achievements.

It is remarkable for the fact that he was contesting against five other men counted as good as himself, all of whom had rolled the possible score during the season. They were: Adolph Giessow, D. G. Wood, W. H. Clark and Paul Dueker.

It was more remarkable for the fact that one of his four opponents was leader of all the city in high average for the season, and member of the Acme team, which won the Post-Dispatch high team average emblems.

It was most remarkable from the fact that Giessow, on figures the best bowler of the year, was working with an additional incentive. He had already won one Post-Dispatch prize, the high game trophy, and he already had participated in another, the high team average emblems donated to the Acme team by the Post-Dispatch. If he could have won the high game prize, he would have participated in the winning of all three.

Giessow, in fact, proved the contender in last night's contest. He finished with a 59 score, four pins behind the winner, and would have won out but for an inglorious finish.

The other contestants all bowled well. Wood and Dueker rolled 51 and Clark 48.

Great Crowd
Saw the Sport.

The contest was held on the Acme alleys before one of the biggest crowds that ever jammed into the place. Anticipating a big attendance, Herr Bengel, president of the National Cocked-hat Association, had covered all but two alleys of his establishment, reserved for bowling contest, and let the crowd swarm on the others.

It was strictly a bowling crowd, and everybody knew everybody else and the contestants.

There was little chaffing of contestants, however. The interest in the outcome of the contest was too intense.

Giessow and Held led off on the two alleys and both scored strikes. Giessow is a little man, and his style is unimpressive compared to the dashing delivery of Paul Dueker. His bowling does the execution, however, and his nerves are steady as rocks.

From the outset he and Held began their neck and neck race for the trophy. Giessow was on the middle alley, lined with the craning necks of the crowd. Held went out as though he were going to make another 90. From the first strike he went down the line to the fifth frame with straight strikes. Giessow, after his first strike, failed to keep up a two-pin break in two frames, and a clean miss in another gave him three spares at his best to Held's straight strikes.

At the start Held and Giessow were by no means the only ones in it. Wood, after a miss and a three-pin tally in his first frame, settled down. Rolling a fast hard ball which hit the center pin full, he went straight through the fifth frame with strikes. Dueker and Clark were off badly. At the end of the fifth frame the former had tallied only 19 and the latter 24.

At the half-way mark it was Wood, 33; Held, 33, and Giessow, 29. Giessow had pulled up at the fifth and began a series of strikes. The men changed alleys on the fifth frame and Giessow started down the line with strikes right through to the ninth.

Held wavered on the fifth and took three, a center punch causing the damage. A spare was his best on the sixth, but straight strikes to the tenth gave him 55 in the eighth, with Giessow 53.

With the change of alleys Woods' luck changed. Two cocked pins in succession and misses in the eighth brought him low and put him out of the race. Neither Dueker nor Clark could do themselves justice and were erratic.

Giessow and Held fought it out.

Held was the steadier at the finish. With a narrow margin lead he came up for the tenth with a center punch. A groan went up from the Held sympathizers in the crowd, who thought Giessow would surely keep up his gait and strike it out.

Held stuck to his job, however, and picked the corners steadily.

Giessow went to pieces at the critical moment. But two pins behind the enemy, it looked a certainty for him, but two was his best. The game was over, the others having no chance.

A cheer went up as the scores were announced and everybody wanted to shake the winner's hand.

Augustus Energetic Bengel quelled the enthusiasm shortly and the crowd gathered around to hear what he had to say.

Those directly interested in what Mr. Bengel had to say were the Acme cocked-hat five, or rather six, winners of the Post-Dispatch high team average trophy. Members of this famous body are Adolph Giessow, Joseph Shaw, Frank P. Pendrum, Ervin Schoenle, Edward Reyburn and Otto Schneiders.

Mr. Bengel read to the winners of the prizes the congratulations of the Post-Dispatch, and added those of the National Cocked-Hat Association, of which he is president.

Following the talk, orders for the emblems were distributed to the winners, and the National Cocked-Hat Association through Secretary Seaman and President Bengel distributed certificates to the several bowlers of 90 during the year.

In his speech Mr. Bengel said:

"The Post-Dispatch, in fostering this great indoor sport by offering prizes for amateur competition, is only acting along the lines it pursues in every particular—lending a helping hand. When a paper of the importance, influence and circulation of the Post-Dispatch backs up a sport, or a policy, its influence is bound to be felt.

"I feel that its activity in the interests of the cocked-hat game will have a large and helpful interest on the sport and in the interest of all bowlers and the National Association I tender thanks. I am sure all bowlers will join in the testimonial."

SHORT HOSE WON WITHER'S STAKE

Rive Pirate, the Favorite, Galloped Home, A Bad Fourth, Before Immense Crowd.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The classic Withers was run today at Morris Park and 30,000 persons saw the Coughacres candidate, Short Hose, gallop home in front at 7 to 1. R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s Mexican was second with Foxhall P. Keene's Injunction third.

Perry Belmont's River Pirate, the favorite in the betting, ran prominently for three-quarters of a mile, and then died away to nothing, finishing a bad fourth. The weather was perfect, and the track fast. Short Hose's victory stamps him as among the best of the thoroughbreds of the year.

After a few moments of delay at the post they were sent away for a good start. J. Martin at once rushed Mexican into the lead, with River Pirate second, Mesmer third and Short Hose fourth. This order was maintained down the back stretch and around the far turn. Rounding into the stretch Hicks, on River Pirate, sent him up to leader, Mexican, but it was only a flash in the pan, and he soon dropped back, beaten.

In the meantime both Haack, on Short Hose, and Gannon, on Injunction, were riding hard. Opposite the field stand Short Hose showed in front, and he won well in hand by a length and a half from Mexican, who was only a head in front of Injunction. Six lengths back was the favorite.

Ishlana, at 1 to 2, easily won the Fashion stakes by two lengths from Mapoota.

WORTH RECORDS GO TO SMASH

Dick Bernard and Jim Spray Do Fast Work in Chicago.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Two track records were lowered at Worth today. Dick Bernard, recently purchased by I. E. Smathers of New York, from Sam Hildreth, lowered the Worth mark for four and a half furlongs one-fifth of a second in the third race. He did the trick handily in :54 2-5.

In the second race Gin Spray clipped three-fifths of a second from the Worth record for a mile and a half, going the distance in 2:35.

The Powers handicap, $3000 added, distance one and one-eighth miles, resulted in a neck victory for Nitrate, Little Scout second, Huzah third. Little Scout and Au Revoir coupled in the betting as the Bennet entry, were favorites at 2 to 1, and Nitrate, coupled with The Lady, as Durnell & Herz's entry, was second choice at 3 to 1.

ISELIN PLEASED WITH RELIANCE

Pronounces the Work of His Yacht to Windward as Wonderful.

NEW YORK, May 16.—C. Oliver Iselin is delighted with the work of his yacht, Reliance, which will participate in the New York Yacht Club races with the Constitution and Columbia, May 21 to 30.

Her work to windward is pronounced wonderful, probably her greatest run being that from Bristol to Newport Wednesday. Mr. Iselin says she had never showed up before as she did then.

All the way down the bay she had to beat her way, and her work surprised Capt. Barr, her skipper, as well as her owner, Mr. Iselin. Capt. Barr was at the wheel and during the first part of the trip Mr. Iselin followed in a launch to watch her work. Later he went aboard.

The New York Yacht Club races will be sailed on Long Island Sound, off Glen Cove, and the sailing committee has issued its directions.

SUNDAY SCHEDULE IN TROLLEY LEAGUE

Eisenstadts at St. Charles.

Terry may not be quite as effective, but he will be supported by the best fielding team in the league. Anderson will do the catching for the East Siders, while Paul McSweeney will handle Talbot's benders. Anson Murphy will umpire the game.

The Belleville team will journey to Alton and with Cornelius and Fredericks as a battery should play the Blues a close game. Leifeld and Stanton will officiate for the Blues as usual. John Griffin will umpire.

PEERLESS RUN OF SYLVIA TALBOT

Daughter of Balgowan Left Press Stake Competitors Behind.

HILEE RAN GREAT RACE AFTER AN UNLUCKY START

The good luck of the St. Louis Fair Grounds Association continues. On the important days of the present race meeting the weather has been all that could be desired. As a result the treasury of the association has waxed fat.

Yesterday was no exception to the rule. About ten thousand enthusiastic racegoers paid $1 each to witness the running of the Press stake, which was scheduled as the principal event of the day. They got full value for their money, and no regrets were heard.

The race itself was one of the prettiest contests ever seen on a St. Louis track. The long line of speculators back of the bookmakers' stands suggested that on the main event of the day, at all events, the public had the best of the argument.

As I anticipated the Schrieber entry was made favorite, although it was closely pressed by Frank Bell, who was only a point higher. It is hard to tell what was Mr. Schreiber's motive in entering Erema, because from every point of view she was hopelessly outclassed.

The Schreiber entry opened at 3 to 1, but it only remained at these figures a few seconds. The volume of public money that was ready to bet on Sylvia Talbot, not on the entry, was enormous, and so she gradually went down until 11 to 5 was about the best that could be had against her.

Starting Delayed by Fractiousness.

As is customary with him, Hilee was fractious at the post and delayed the start, though not very long. By judicious work Mr. Dade got them finally lined up to the barrier and sent them away on their brief journey to an excellent start.

The first to show was the chestnut muzzle of Louis Wagner, on whom Troxler had the mount. The followers of Louis were accordingly exuberant, but it was short-lived. In the twinkling of an eye the purple jacket and red cap of Barney Schreiber flashed in front on Sylvia Talbot. Then from the thousands of lusty throats the cry went up, "look at Talbot, look at Talbot; see how she runs." Before half the race was run, Sylvia had a lead of ten length on the field with Frank Bell laboring in second place.

Little Wilson, who was on the favorite, cut the corners close, and sat far forward on his mount's neck. He was without whip or spur. The gallant animal needed no urging of that kind, for she was full of run. At the eighth pole Wilson half turned in the saddle to look at his nearest opponent.

A smile of confident satisfaction lighted up his intelligent countenance when he saw that, even at that point, the race was won. He simply sat down and let the peerless daughter of Balgowan breeze home. She was eased up at the finish, but even then she was six lengths in front of the second horse.

Weak Finish Only Apparent.

There was a sharp struggle for second place, which was secured by Hilee by the narrowest of margins. Many thought that Waldo rode a weak finish on Bell, and when he saw that it was impossible for him to win was indifferent as to second place. I think this view is not correct.

Frank Bell was perceptible tired chasing Sylvia and Booker set down Hilee for a determined stretch run, and just managed to nose out Bell because he was the stronger.

A rather unpleasant incident occurred in connection with the race. It was a selling sweepstakes, and Sylvia was entered at the liberal sum of $2000, this being equaled only by Maud Gonne. Some gentleman by the name of Daniels, desirous of securing a good horse cheap, bid her up $500 above her entered price.

He was not known to have any interest in the race beyond that of an ordinary spectator.

It is pretty hard to tell where this selling race war will end if it is allowed to continue in that style. There are, of course, occasions when it is justified, but they are rare.

It was a seven-furlong affair, and Brulare was one of the contestants. She was equal second choice in the betting with Elastic, and was strongly supported. After they had run an eighth of a mile and when rounding the chute at the three-quarter pole, Brulare stumbled and fell heavily.

She rolled over twice and it was little short of a miracle that her rider, Booker, was not killed. But horse and rider regained their feet in a few seconds and it was found that no damage was sustained by either. It was the most violent and thrilling accident of the kind I ever saw.

The accident materially interfered with the chances of Deutschland, as the jockey was obliged to pull him up.

In this race Elastic clearly demonstrated that he is a mere sprinter, as after leading into the stretch he was easily passed by Helen Print and Jack Demund in the last eighth.

Cursus won the last race, as he was entitled to do in accordance with form, but he also was bid up from his entered price, although he is only an ordinary gelding. The sum of $400 is about as much as he would fetch at an open auction.

The greatest surprise of the day came in the second race, when Mr. Duffy's crack filly, St. Agnes II, was decisively beaten by Bill Knight. The latter had the race won from the fall of the flag and proved himself a useful plater.

Harry Robinson sprung a long shot on an unsuspecting ring in the first race. His price ranged from 30 to 50 to 1 and at these figures the pikers, who remembered his victory at Kinloch, invested their ones and twos and reaped a rich harvest.

Looked Like Bank Robbery.

Dr. Bernays had a roll of bills after this race that suggested bank robbery, but he invested $100 at 40 to 1 and a roll of $4000 looks pretty large. He lost several wads of it immediately after on St. Agnes II.

There were some "wise" players who were down on Harry Griffith in the third race, but that animal took it into his head to have a race on his own account and on his way to the post he started at fullspeed and ran about two miles. And yet some say he is only a sprinter.

Sweet Dream earned another purse for Gumberts and Powers. She got a most [illegible] ride from Wilson, who restrained her until the stretch was reached.

There was another big plunge on Vestry in the last race by some very "wise" players, but she also quit after running in front for half a mile and finished back in the ruck. She is no distance horse.

Lo, the poor Indian has once more been ruthlessly trampled upon by the white man.

Big Chief Bender of the Chippewa tribe essayed to lift the scalps of Jimmy McAleer's pale face Brownies right here in St. Louis. He did some heap big stunts in a pitching way and twirled just as good a game as Willie Sudhoff, who is not an Indian; at least, not a real Indian.

The Browns tomahawked Bender's delivery in the fourth inning and stole three hits from his reservation. It was not the big chief's fault that he lost, however. His battery partner was responsible for one of those runs, his wild throw to center field laying the foundation for the first St. Louis score.

Although the Philadelphia aggregation touched our "Wee Willie" for the large sum of five hits they could not connect with the home plate, for Willie refused to allow any bunching of safe swats. He made a requisition on the horse collar factory for nine samples of the best brand and hung them on Connie Mack's chesty players. The score was 2 to 0.

The game was played in fast time—one hour and twenty minutes—and aside from the inning in which they scored, the Browns were quickly disposed of. Heidrick's single in the opening round, singles by Wallace and Friel and a double by Hemphill in the fourth comprised the St. Louis output of hits for the day. To say the least, the Browns were lucky.

Fielding features of the game were Billy Friel's catch of a foul with his hands outstretched over a grandstand box and Sudhoff's throw to first from a sitting posture.

The day was hot, but the fans turned out in good bunches, about 6000 witnessing the shut-out of the Athletics.

Powers Had an Off Day.

If Connie Mack had worked his full Indian battery, the Browns might have found it hard to win. Osee Schreckengost, the former Cardinal, is said also to an Indian. Charley Dryden made the discovery. Had Schreck been catching the slants of Bender the Browns wouldn't have stolen so many bases.

Dr. Maurice Powers officiated behind the bat for the Athletics. His throwing was so bad that Connie Mack wanted to perform an operation on it. Bender had the best of the hit argument, allowing but four safeties, but some coarse work by Powers made the big chief's one bad inning a source of income to the Browns.

It was as clever a pitching battle as has been seen at Sportsman's Park this year. The Athletics would have scored but for some good infield support of Sudhoff. They drew a single and a double in one inning with only one man out, yet they could not see the way to the plate.

Bender will do. The Carlisle product is something of a stoic, as all good red men are. He was better after his bad inning than before. From the fourth inning until the end the Browns were retired as fast as they came to bat. Not a Brownie got as far as first base after the fourth.

Bender Fooled Heavy Hitters.

The heavy hitters of the local team could not find the key to Bender's delivery. The big fellow—he is six feet two—laid them across with great speed and had good curves and control. Burkett could not hit safe, though the last time up he was robbed of a hit by Lave Cross' clever catch of a line drive over third base. Anderson failed to touch the big chief and so did McCormick. None of the Browns got more than a hit apiece.

The Browns got men on the circuit in the first and second, but progress ceased at first base. Heidrick singled in the opener, but was finally forced out. Friel drew a pass in the second, but was forced by Hemphill, who died on Sugden's out. The whole story of the scoring is included in one inning.

Capt. Rhody Wallace led the assault, as all good captains do. He lined to right center for one cushion. Anderson could not advance him, as Hoffman gathered Andy's liner on the run. McCormick pushed up a high one to Murphy and Wallace began to look like a fit subject for the coroner.

How the Runs Were Scored.

With the energy of desperation Wallace dashed for second, while Friel was at bat. Doctor Powers hefted the ball to center field and Capt. Rhody continued to third. Friel smashed sharply to left. Lave Cross put his big mitt to the ball, but it was too hot for him and he failed to hold it. The hit scored Wallace.

No great things were looked for from Hemphill, but he furnished a surprise party. Friel stole second, Powers making another high throw. He was off like a [illegible] when Hemphill hit the ball. The [illegible] was one of those classified as Texas leaguers. It rose slowly over Lave Cross' head and descended in shallow left field before Hoffman could run in for a catch. Friel scored and Hemphill took two bases on the hit. Hoffman speared Sugden's fly, ending the inning.

That is the whole story of the St. Louis scoring.

The Athletics made their highest bids in the fourth and seventh, but couldn't quite reach. Harry Davis led off in the fourth with a daisy cutter to right. He advanced when Lave Cross rolled one to Sudhoff. Davis could easily have scored on Seybold's long drive to left, but he thought Burkett would catch the ball and remained on second base until it was too late.

Davis Lost Good Chance.

Seybold's tap bore an extra base ticket. It struck the top of the left field fence and bounded back into Burkett's hands. A good throw held Davis on third, though Seybold went to second. With only one down, a run seemed as good as in, but when Murphy tapped to Wallace there were some "doings." Wallace made a quick pass to Sugden and Davis fled back to third base.

The ponderous Seybold had advanced too far, however, and, as Murphy continued to second, Seybold found himself without a base to hold down. McCormick took the ball and ran him down to third base, which was already occupied by Davis. As soon as "Socks" touched the base he was out. Monte Cross shoved out a mean little short fly to center, but Heidrick got it after a good sprint and the rally was over.

Had it not been for Wallace's fast double play the visitors would have shoved over a run in the eighth. The double killing cleared the bases and Hoffman's three-base clout to center was wasted as Pickering's fly fell in a sheet of Burkett's tanglefoot.

The most sensational play of the game was pulled off by Billy Friel in the third. Hoffman sent up a high foul which fell behind the Philadelphia bench. As the ball descended Friel saw that it was going to fall in one of the grandstand boxes.

Jamming himself close to the cement wall he stretched his arm over the picket gate, got on tiptoe and braced himself. A fraction of a second later the ball descended in his hands. Had he not been prepared the force of the ball's descent would have driven his arm down against the sharp pointed pickets. He was loudly cheered for the catch.

In the first inning Friel made a rattling good stop of a hot grounder from Pickering's bat, but spoiled the play by a high throw which pulled Anderson up in the air and gave Pickering a life which was taken from him when Davis and Lave Cross expired on easy taps to Sudhoff.

Pitchers Were Well Matched.

It was a splendidly pitched game and even. The hits were four apiece up to the ninth, when Lave Cross cut one over second. Wallace managed to knock down the ball, but failed to hold it with his gloved hand. That gave the Athletics one the better of the hits. Each pitcher struck out two men and allowed but one base on balls apiece.

Race Home to Be Feature of Century Run of Stuyvesant Wheelmen.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Every club of wheelmen in New York will be represented in the annual century run of the Stuyvesant Wheelmen tomorrow, if present promises are carried out.

The feature of the run will be a road race home from Hicksville for the fast division. Ten handsome prizes have been put up for the ten men who get home first.

The century run will start from the New York side of the Twenty-third street ferry at 1 o'clock in the morning. Harry Veit of the Century Road Club of America will be captain of the run, and Capt. T. L. Warren, famous for his steady pacemaking, will be chief pacemaker.

The run is a free-for-all, and all wheelmen have been invited to enter.

LIPTON PREPARES BOAT FOR VOYAGE

Challenger Will Be Ready for Sea Trip in Two Weeks.

LONDON, May 16.—The introduction to the story of the America's cup races of 1903 will be closed when the Shamrocks are docked at Greenock for dismantling. An expert analysis of the new challenger's work during the trials on this side of the Atlantic proves that she is undoubtedly the best challenger ever built, and her friends go even further and assert that in the weather and under the condition prevailing during her trials she is the fastest cup racer ever produced.

There has been no opportunity, however, to judge of her sailing qualities in a heavy sea and wind. The trials were one-sided, all being fine weather sailing, with occasionally a fresh breeze, but never wind enough to break the spray over her bows. Hence, winds of over ten knots strength may find the challenger's weakness.

Her out and in form still puzzles outsiders, but the best judges are unanimously of the opinion that this is proof that the fine form shown might have been improved had the skipper and designer so desired. Comparisons based on the trials show that the challenger in going to windward in fresh weather is better than the Shamrock I by a minute on the mile, and in a hard breeze and smooth water, 20 seconds better and that in running down the wind she is probably half these times better than the old boat, while in reaching in a moderate breeze she excels the Shamrock I by about half a minute.

Considering that under similar conditions Shamrock I off and on was as good as the Shamrock II, calculations can be completed with the Shamrock II's performances against the Columbia.

It must be remembered, however, that the challenger has a largely increased sail area over that of any other cup racer, and that unless the Reliance has gone to the same extreme as the challenger there will be a heavy time allowance penalty.

The Shamrocks were towed to Greenock this afternoon. Sir Thomas Lipton says he expects two weeks will easily cover their fitting out for the Atlantic.

O'NEILL BATTERY RECEIVES PROPER KIND OF SUPPORT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—The unexpected did not happen today and consequently there was no disapointment when Capt. Donovan's bunch of baseball talent wrested or rather quietly walked away with the game.

The local enthusiasts have one predominant characteristic—they are willing to enthuse on the slightest provocation, but only once did the opportunity present itself today.

Then the 4000-odd bleacherites and members of the elite arose en masse and shouted.

Base hits by the Phillies this season have savored somewhat of angels' visits, so when Thomas in the eighth inning rapped the ball on its rubber side and sent it bounding merrily to the clubhouse for a home run the feat was worthy of the applause.

It was the locals' fifth bingle, their total number of six being through the generosity of one Mike O'Neil, distributed through a similar number of innings.

Thomas Began and Ended Rally.

It occurred after Smoot, after a manner peculiar to outfielders, had gracefully pocketed Dooin's and Dugglesby's flies.

For one ebrief moment, visions of the old days, when batting rallies with the Phillies were as common as daisies in spring, assailed the optics of the fans. But the pipe was defective and Barclay entirely extinguished it when Barry's balloon descended into his garden.

One of the most pleasing features of the entertainment was a duet performed by the O'Neil brothers, who, between them, muzzled five of the locals, erstwhile heavy hitters. The Browns were kindly disposed toward Mr. Duggleby. To show their appreciation of his merits, they declined to hit him oftener than necessarily required.

In order, however, to display their prowess, the visitors, in the fifth inning, tapped the sphere to safe territory six times. Four tallies resulted, and this seemed to satisfy them, as they refrained from doing any further damage to Mr. Duggleby's curves. Of the Phillies' two runs, one was due to M. O'Neil's three-base wild throw after Barry had beaten a bunt.

SMITH SCHOOL RECORDS SMASHED BY ATHLETES

Results at Annual Field Day Encourage Friends of Track and Field Team to Expect the Championship at Interscholastic Meet May 30.

Two thousand enthusiastic adherents witnessed the thirteenth annual field day sports of Smith Academy at old Pastime Park, De Hodiamont, yesterday afternoon, and the speed and agility displayed by the track and field teams filled the Smith following with confidence that the wearers of the red and white will capture the championship in the interscholastic meet, May 30.

Smith, the High School, Manual Training School, Blees Military Academy of Macon and the Western Military Academy of Upper Alton, Ill., are regular participants in the meet. Owing to the conflagration, which destroyed the buildings of the latter school, it will not be represented.

The showing made by Coach Ewerhardt's athletes surpassed the expectations of the Smith supporters. The teams include some fast lads, and is well balanced. Records were broken at yesterday's trials, and the feats evoked rousing cheers from the grand stand.

Big Stanard, the husky 17-year-old foot-ball tackle, whose prowess on the gridiron has won so much for his school, hurled the 12-pound hammer 120 feet 3½ inches, breaking the Smith record by 13 feet 8½ inches.

In practice before the event, he threw it several feet further, and by the time of the coming meet he is expected to outdo his effort of yesterday. Stanard also captured first in the discus throw. He is preparing for Yale and a brialliant future in athletics of the eastern 'varsity is propheside for him by experts who have seen his work.

Morcom, Smith's speedy all-around man was under the weather and did not display his best form, yet he captured the cup for the most individual points, 15. Lawrence, the hurdler and captain, and Lambert, the crack vaulter, were tied for second place with 12 points each.

Lawrence, scratch man, smashed the record for the 220-yard hurdle by 3-5 of a second when he made the course in 27 3-5 seconds. Morcom, who also ran from the scratch, was a close second and the finish between the two was a beautiful one.

It was a great day for the Swarts family. J. L. Swarts, 17 years old, won the hundred yards dash in a spirited finish. A few moments later his sturdy 9-year-old brother, C. E. Swarts, won the 50-yard dash in his class, from several longer-legged youngsters, showing that the sprinting strain runs in the family. The brothers received generous appleause.

The events were run off in good form. There were no vexatious delays and the work of the officials was uniformly good.

The record of events follows:

100-yard dash—J. L. Swarts, first; A. J. Morcom, second; P. J. Lawrence, third. Time, 10 2-5s.

Shot put—F. G. Delano, handicap 2 feet, first; W. H. Burg, 1 foot, second; E. Stanard, scratch, third. Distance, 31 ft. 9 in.

HIGH AND BLEES TO MEET AGAIN

Interscholastic Teams to Play Off Tie Game at Pastime Park Next Tuesday.

The tie game between the Smith Academy and Blees Military Academy baseball teams of the interscholastic league will be played off at Pastime Park Tuesday afternoon. This game is expected to be one of the best contested in the interscholastic league this season.

The Simth Academy team tackled the Blees cadets at Macon last Tuesday, and, after a sensational 13-inning pitchers' battle, the game was called with the score a tie, 1 to 1.

The game was one of the best ever played by a local interscholastic team. Each team scored early in the game, and then followed a real battle. Capt. Bader of the High School scored High's solitary run by great work on the bases. He beat out an infield hit, stole second and scored on a hit by Smith.

Pitchers Ricker and Whitney, who twirled the tie game, will officiate in Tuesday's contest. They are evenly matched. The High School team is regarded as the best school team in St. Louis this season. It has been splendidly coached by Frank Pears, and, under the captaincy of Arthur Bader, has accomplished much. Already the High boys have defeated such strong teams as Christian Brothers' College and the Missouri School of Mines.

SPORT BRIEFS

Tom Sharkey will have to quit both the pugilistic and the wrestling game for awhile. In a wrestling bout at Perth Amboy, N. Y., Friday night, he was thrown heavily, and several tendons were torn and a blood vessel ruptured.

Dr. Hetherington of Missouri University is trying to arrange a dual meet between the state university and William Jewell College.

The Smith Academy field day exercises will take place this afternoon at Pastime Park. The events are all well filled and the contests will be particularly interesting, as the meet is practically a tryout for the interscholastic meet of May 30.

St. Louis University and McKendree College track athletes will participate in a dual meet to be held at Lebanon, Ill., June 4. A baseball game will be a feature of the exercises.

President Haughton of the West End Club stated Saturday morning that following the bout between Young Corbett and Jack Keefe, Tuesday night, the next attraction at the West End Club would be between Tomm itz and Brooklyn Tommy Sullivar pounds.

"BANNER ROUTE" VETERANS MEET

General officials, including vice-presidents, superintendents of divisions, corporation counsels, superintendents of departments, conductors, agents telegraph operators and representatives of the Wabash railroad system in cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific met at the second annual banquet of the Wabash Veterans' Corps, given at the Mercantile Club last night.

It was a memorable occasion, marked by the feeling which serves to weld together the employes of the well-known system, known more familiarly among Wabash men as the "Banner Route."

Covers for 165 guests were laid. The banqueting hall was tastefully decorated and an orchestra played during the courses. Col. Wells H. Blodgett was toastmaster, and his witty references to the "Wabash family that never grows old" evoked applause.

Letters of regret were read from C. D. Ashley, former president and chairman of the board of directors; President Joseph A. Ramsey, Jr.; Edwin Gould, a director; A. C. Bird, one of the vice-presidents; Joseph Flory, secretary of the World's Fair, a former conductor, and others.

The following program was carried out:

Vocal selection, "Stein Song"—By the Banner Route Octette.
"The Day We Celebrate"—George S. Grover.
"When Thou Art Nigh"—By the Banner Route Octette.
"Passenger Transportation, Past, Present and Future"—Chas. S. Crane.
Vocal solo—Wm. M. Porteous.
Recitation—Geo. M. Ravold.
Selections by the famous bell ringers, Messrs. John and F. B. Harrington.
Reminiscences—By the Vets.
"Good Night"—By the Banner Route Octette.
"Auld Lang Syne (sung standing)—Led by Wm. M. Porteous.

The Wabash Veterans' Corps was organized two years ago, through the efforts of C. B. Adams, superintendent of transportation, and P. J. O'Brien, traveling car agent, and numbers 250 members.

It includes on its roster the oldest employes of the system, from the president to the section hand. Its only object is to promote a feeling of fraternity and social intercourse among its members.

The guests of honor at the banquet were T. Rice Smith and wife, Mrs. Alice B. Smith of Jacksonville, Ill., the oldest employes in point of continuous service on the system.

Mr. Smith has been with the Wabash 53 years and has only been absent from his post two days in over a half century. Mrs. Smith has been 44 years in its employ. She enjoys the honor of being the first woman telegraph operator west of the Alleghenies. The patriarchal couple, who declare themselves as young as any of the others, enjoyed special attention and received many congratulations.

The officers of the corps are: O. D. Ashley, president; M. Knight, first vice-president; W. H. Blodgett, second vice-president; W. B. Wyle, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee, C. B. Adams, chairman; B. C. Winston, C. S. Crane, C. P. Chesebro, P. J. O'Brien, John J. Sim, C. B. Needham.

PROF. JOSEPH LIVELY,

The Man of the Hour in New York—His Wonderful Discovery for Bright's Disease, Kidney and Bladder Troubles—The Greatest Boon of the Age.

Prof. Joseph Lively's remarkable discovery has made it possible to state that Bright's Disease and all Kidney and Bladder Troubles are curable diseases. It has made the most remarkable success of any new discovery in the Past Decade.

When it was announced by the Medical Press that the Professor had made a discovery whereby proper medications are carried to the diseased parts of the Kidneys and Bladder, the profession became interested. First, because of the high standing of Prof. Lively they knew anything in materia medica for which he stood sponsor must have been proven by the most searching and effective tests. Second, because from time to time the profession have seen their patients die inch by inch from these terrible afflictions, being hopeless in giving anything but temporary relief.

Prof. Lively states many people will not believe anything that they hear and the only way to convince them that his treatment is all that he claims for it, is to let them try it and see for themselves what it will do for their own case.

By our special request he has sent a large supply of his discovery to G. E. Remick, 518 N. 3d street (three doors south of Washington avenue), St. Louis, and those who write or call this week between the hours of 2 and 4 p. m. will be given a bottle free of charge.

COL. SINCL S SILVER JUBILEE

Commanding Officer Honored by Members of First Missouri Regiment.

Col. George S. Sinclair of the First Regiment, Missouri National Guard, was tendered a banquet last night at armory headquarters, in celebration of the twentieth anniversary of his connection with the state military service.

Others of the regiment composed the festal party. The banquet room was a bower of beauty, and the glittering uniforms of the guests lent brilliancy to the scene.

In the days of the famous Police Reserves, which preceded the present National Guard, Col. Sinclair was among the youths who followed the militia's cause.

He entered the service as a private, May 11, 1878, and was promoted to the rank of third sergeant six months later. June 24, 1881, he was made first sergeant, and from that time his rise was steady. Three years ago he succeded Col. Edwin Batdorf as colonel of the First Regiment. He is still on the sunny side of 40.

As a testimonial, a handsomely embossed leather volume containing a record of his splendid services in the militia was presented to Col. Sinclair by his officers. The colonel replied feelingly.

Capt. Edward Evans, inspector of the Eighth Cavalry, United States army, then made a few remarks.

Those in attendance included:

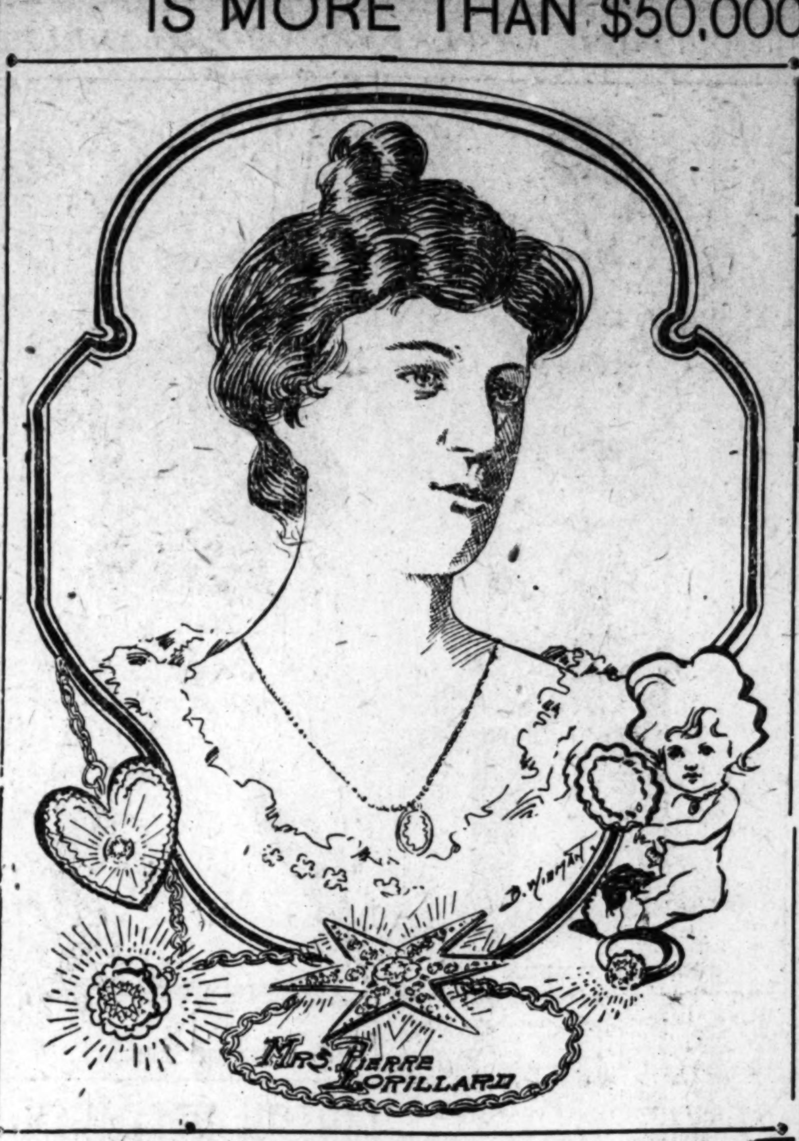
Lieutenant-Colonel Charles W. Holtcamp, Maj. Albert A. Marquard, Capts. William A. Cocke, A. C. Robinson, Arthur E. Ebbs, William S. Robinson, Shepard Barclay, Harry C. Threll, Thomas H. O'Keefe, Edward Murphy, Jr., A. L. Boyce, Vernon Biggs and Julian M. Gebhardt, Thomas Lyden, Sam Rosenfeld, Frank R. Larimore, Claud M. Gignoux, Thomas L. Mills, E. P. Summers, Comond McMahon, Emil Dorn, H. Cridler, Charles C. Peake, Charles Irvin, O. M. Buck, Thomas Finan, Frank L. Reardon, Alexander Melville, Harry C. Steinmeyer, Harry d'Arcy, Ernest Schoen, William Thummel and William Heiner.

Among those who responded to toasts was Maj. Emmet Newton of the governor's staff. The major congratulated the regiment on the large appropriation secured for the militia from the legislature.

The Emerson Centenary.

The one hundredth anniversary of Emerson's birth will be celebrated in the Church of the Messiah on the evening of May 25. Of Emerson's influence in theology Dr. Lee will speak, Prof. Lovejoy will sum up his philosophy, Dr. Sale will present his religious teaching, and Mrs. Learned will trace his literary influence. Choral music, directed by Mr. Kroeger, will form a part of the program.

MRS. LORILLARD'S LOSS IS MORE THAN $50,000



Magnificent $25.000 Necklace of Graduated Pearls, With a Diamond Clasp, Is Among the Jewels That Were Stolen.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

(Copyright, 1903, by the Press Publishing Co.)

LONDON, May 16.—The chief article in the $50,000 worth of jewelry stolen from Mrs. Pierre Lorillard of New York immediately after her arrival from Paris, was a magnificent necklace of 98 pearls, graduating in size, with a diamond clasp, worth $25,000.

The Post-Dispatch correspondent called today at the Berkeley Hotel and was told that Mrs. Lorillard had given strict orders that no information should be given out about the robbery. It is believed the loss is much heavier than reported.

But the correspondent ascertained at Scotland Yard that, although up to the present no trace of the missing jewels has been discovered, the detectives are hot on the track of a gang which is suspected of practicing this kind of thefts and has headquarters in Paris.

This gang is said to be well known on the continental railroad lines and to have made rich hauls in the principal cities in Europe.

In this case, however, the police theory is that the robbery, which was not discovered until Mrs. Lorillard, accompanied by her two maids, arrived at the Berkeley Hotel last Tuesday afternoon from Paris, took place on this side of the English channel.

The factory of the Hoyt Metal Co., at 4153 Clayton avenue was partially destroyed by fire, which was discovered at 12:30 o'clock this morning.

The entire West End was illuminated by the blaze. The plant of the Mound City Paint Co., which closely adjoins that of the Hoyt company, was threatened with destruction, but was saved by the firemen.

The fire originated in the rolling mill and spread to the boiler room. Both these departments were destroyed, and heavy damage was done in the sections adjoining. The company's offices were not damaged.

The rolling mill was 50 by 280 feet, and contained large quantities of lead and tin, which was rendered almost worthless by melting and running together.

When Policeman Sullivan of the Seventh district saw the fire and turned in an alarm, the flames were appearing from all parts of the building. A second alarm followed the first almost immediately.

The buildings, one story in height, were almost wholly destroyed. In the loss were included valuable machinery and molds. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

Charles C. Hoyt is president of the company, E. R. Hoyt vice-president and Willoughby S. Swingley secretary. The company is one of the largest in its line of business in St. Louis.

VIBRATORY TREATMENT.

A Revolution in the Treatment of Chronic and Nervous Diseases.

The wonderful progress that has been made in recent years in the treatment of disease finds no more striking example than the new Vibratory Treatment, which is so successfully used by Dr. Rupert Wells of this city. The remarkable cures affected by this treatment are very numerous, and thousands of letters from sick men and women in every state of the Union are being received, all inquiring in regard to this new system of eradicating disease. A great many patients have journed to St. Louis to place themselves under the care of Dr. Wells' treatment—from Michigan, Colorado, Iowa, Texas, New Mexico and even from California and far-off Canada come these pilgrims to recover in St. Louis the health that they had almost despaired of ever regaining.

Dr. Wells states he discovered at the very outset of his medical experience that medicine by itself would not effect a cure in those stubborn, chronic and nervous diseases and felt that it would require something different—a treatment that could be applied directly to the parts affected, one that would arouse the diseased organs, stir them to new life and vigor, control the action of the medicine and compel its effects. The Vibratory Treatment, the discovery of a German scientist, but improved and brought to its present state of perfection by Dr. Wells, supplies the long-sought-for remedial action and produces effects that are almost unbelievable.

Those who cannot call on the Doctor personally are invited to send for his new book on "Diseases of Men and Women." It is a handsome book, full of interesting pictures and sound advice. The book is sent free to all who write for it. Address Dr. Rupert Wells, Sixth and Olive streets, Suite 3, St. Louis, Mo.

HOW MILLIONS ARE SPENT BY THE LOBBY TO CORRUPT MISSOURI LEGISLATORS

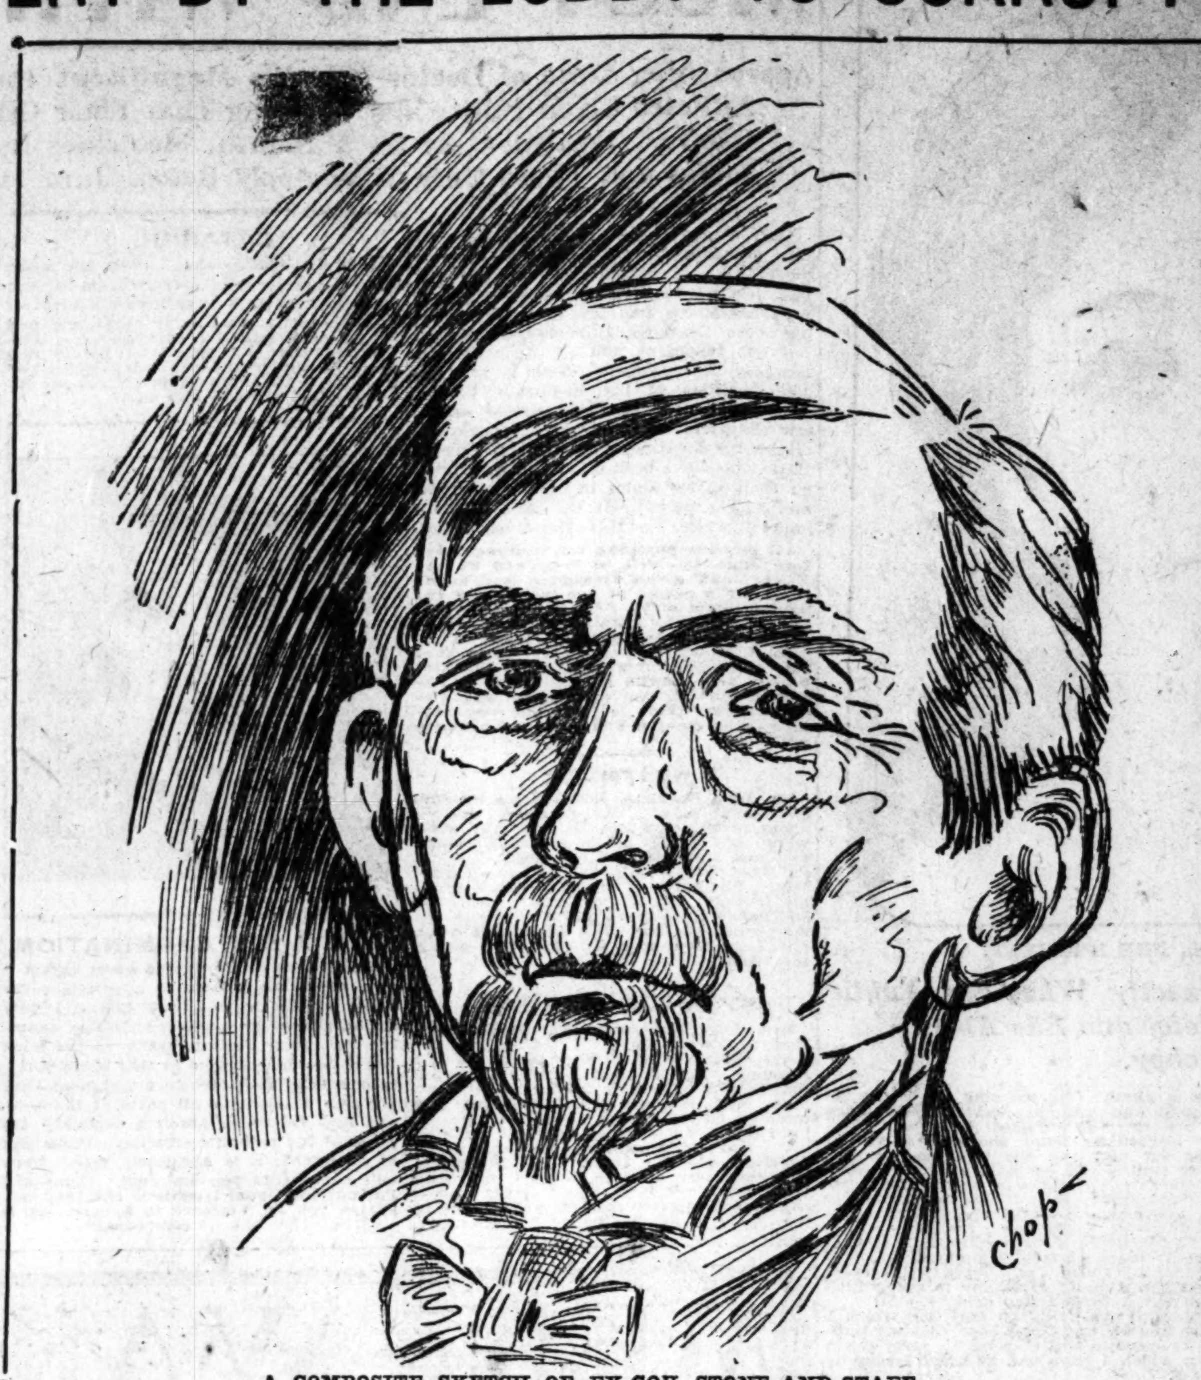
The Railroad Lobby Has Ever Been One of the Most Powerful Influences as It Gives Out Thousands of Dollars Worth' of Tickets at Each Session of the Legislature.

How Senator Stone Essayed the Roles of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde by Supporting One Good Measure One Day and Pushing the Iniquitous Alum Bill on the Next.

LEGISLATIVE LOBBY OF 1903

The following comprised the lobby of the Forty-second General Assembly:

Steam and street railroad attorneys.
Fire and life insurance representatives,
Racetrack owners.
Baseball associations.
Slot machine promoters.
Theatrical managers.
Baking powder manufacturers.
Agents of School Book Trust.



A COMPOSITE SKETCH OF EX-GOV. STONE AND STAFF.

BY JOSEPH J. M'AULIFFE.

Noah Webster's definition of the lobby given 75 years ago is not different from the popular and practical understanding of that word today.

Contemporaneous lexicographers might elaborate its significance by adding that the lobby stands for corruption.

In the Missouri legislature, as the grandjury revelations have shown, these elements are of the same flesh and blood. Their common bond is money.

In ringing platforms the dominant political parties have acknowledged the lobby's bondage. Freedom has been promised, but the Forty-second General Assembly closed with no sign of performance.

It remained for the prosecuting authorities of St. Louis and Cole County to demonstrate the power of the lobby and what it has done to suppress popular legislation and promote that which is of its own making.

Biennially the assembly meets to transact the state's legal business.

Laws are to be made, revised, amended or abolished, according to the needs of the great commonwealth whose interests they are designed to protect.

Legislators and Railroad Passes.

This is the occasion when the lobby presents itself. It is seen as a body of men who visit the state capitol for the specific purpose of influencing legislation.

The important nature of their mission may be gauged from the community of wealth which they represent.

Missouri's public service corporations are valued at $250,000,000. Other corporate interests, such as banks, trust companies, fire and life insurance companies, bring this total to more than $1,000,000,000.

The workings of such a vast agency are centered on the men sworn to discharge their legislative duties at $5 a day.

Probably the most powerful lobby is that fostered by the railroad companies.

This is true chiefly because the attorneys of railroad corporations have always been conspicuous in the politics of Missouri. The thousands of railroad employes make up a valuable political army. Legislators who refuse ready cash are conscience free when they accept a railroad pass.

But railroad tickets represent money and they help equally to debauch the integrity of the recipient.

This was worth to each about $100, so that a total of $12,500 was expended for transportation among members alone, to say nothing of their families, their clerks, their clerks' friends and their own personal followers.

"I always pay my fare," said a prominent member of the House of Representatives one day, "but I have to supply some of my constituents with passes."

When Representative Oliver of Cape Girardeau County introduced a resolution providing that members of the Legislature and state officials generally shall be entitled to free transportation, he considered that he offered a satisfactory solution of the "pass evil."

The House approved the resolution and in the Senate there were only two dissenting votes. The result was claimed as an anti-lobby victory.

This proposition will be submitted to the voters at the next general election.

The lobby merely smiled at this move. In the first place it was unwilling to believe that the public would be so gullible as to be drawn into a trap where a premium would have to be forced upon honesty.

In other words the state would say to the lawmaker:

"We will give you a pass, so you will not be under obligations to the railroad companies."

"But," replies the legislator, "how about my friends? Goodness knows they must be supplied."

And the state answers:

"We can't do anything for them."

The legislator is duly furnished with transportation and to his surprise he finds that it is good only on some branch line.

Again he makes inquiry, only to learn that he cannot compel a railroad company to surrender property; that the Oliver resolution applied only to charters granted from new branch lines or extensions, so that he must perforce seek the lobby if he would go home without paying railroad fare.

Under the terms of the Oliver resolution the railroads would be exempt from the constitutional provision which makes the bestowal of passes a misdemeanor punishable by fine or imprisonment.

For all the sixty-ride tickets, 2000-mile books and regular trip tickets issued at the late session the railroads were not wholly responsible.

Some of the Missouri lawmakers—and they are limited to neither body—whose urgent persistence practically forced the railroads to grant them favors, were among the most clamorous of those whose response was ever ready to the cry of "down the corporations."

Whenever a member was unusually vehement in proclaiming the cause of the "common people" and prattling about the questionable motives of his colleagues you could put it down to a certainty that this self-professed Goliath of honesty had a "blue streak" somewhere in his official composition.

I recollect a trip to Jefferson City one night with a man who had introduced 16 bills to offset what he was delighted to term the "encroachments of soulless railroad companies upon the rights of the masses."

The Sandbagger at Jefferson City.

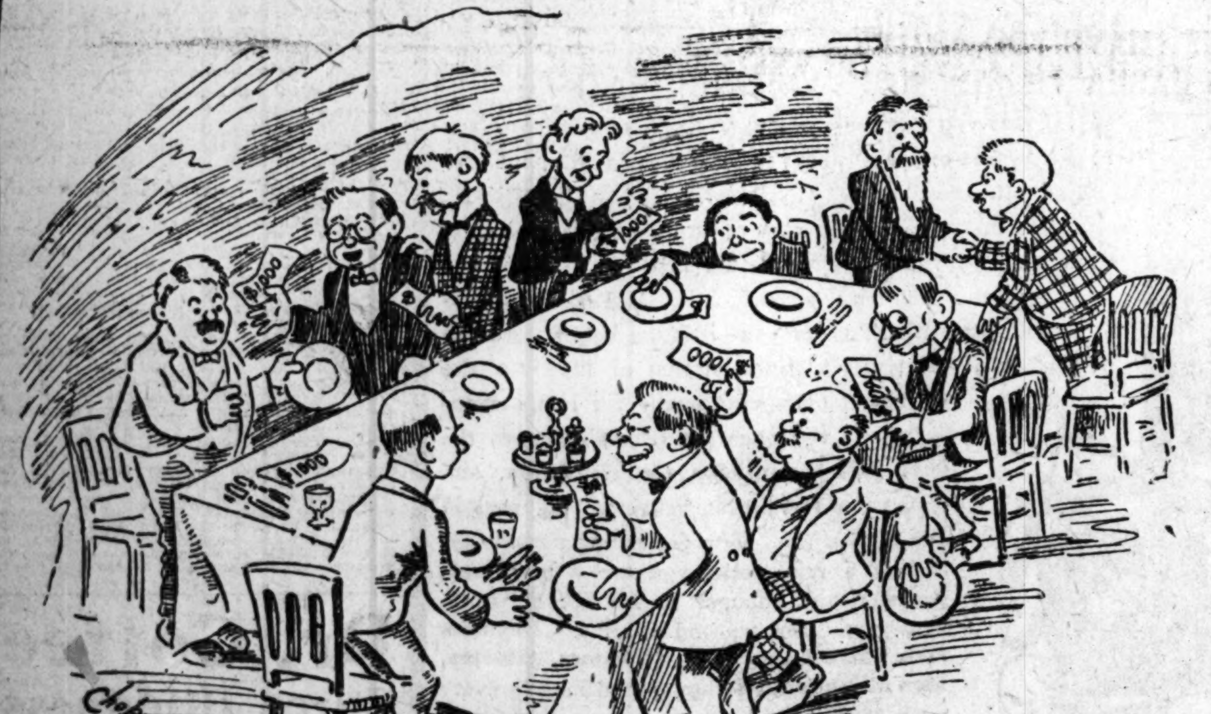
This gentleman made frequent visits to St. Louis and his income did not, it appeared to me, justify an extravagant expense account.

My doubt as to how to reconcile this individual's antipathy to everything that smacked of corporation influence with the fact that as an humble wage earner he could ill afford to pay many railroad fares was satisfied when the conductor called for his transportation.

From an inside coat pocket he drew a wallet containing a thick roll of paper currency and two annual passes, each good all the year round over the entire Burlington and Missouri Pacific systems.

The incident served as my first introduction to the legislative "sandbagger," who holds up the corporations with one hand while the other is waving fidelity to his constituents.

But the purposes of such men are easily thwarted, and if the lobby is not a part of their scheming, their methods are soon brought into the [illegible] of publicity.



A TYPICAL THOUSAND DOLLAR LOBBY BANQUET.

It is on such important measures as the fellow servant bill, the franchise bill, and the bill which legalized the St. Louis Street Railway Trust that the recources of the lobby are best exemplified.

On these matters the issue was unequivocal. There could be no question as to the right or the wrong side. There was no middle ground.

Stupidity or absolute betrayal of public confidence constituted the only excuse of the legislator who aligned himself on the side of corporate lust.

The fellow servant bill and that providing for the taxation of the franchise of public service corporations were passed after a hard struggle. Their benefit to the public was never questioned.

The St. Louis grandjury inquiry has developed that the sum of $100,000 was paid to secure the adoption of a law giving the street car companies with the exception of the Suburban, the right to consolidate.

The iniquitous features of that measure were thoroughly exposed by the Post-Dispatch; the mere preamble was enough to stamp it as the grasping demand of money barons, and an effort to create a monopoly, yet a lobby directed by splendid generals and a liberal supply of money accomplished the triumph.

How the Lobby Does Its Work.

1. If the bill is not to the lobby's liking an attempt is made to induce the author to withdraw it. This plan is usually resorted to in an indirect way by having some friend who is least suspected of unworthy motives appeal to the legislator.

2. Failing, recourse is had to the committee which considers the bill. The committee is asked to defer consideration or smother it altogther.

3. If reported favor[illegible] the scheme is to have it "sent back [illegible] committee" for the reason that certain persons whose interests it affects may be heard from.

4. To make the bill a special order of business and then have it laid over informally.

5. If an adverse vote should decide that it is to be called up for passage to prevent a quorum.

6. To nullify it with amendments.

7. The final test is an open fight on the floor of the assembly in which all the influences that the lobby controls are mustered. That is the time money counts.

It must be remembered that this schedule applies to both Houses, so that the author of the bill is "up against" what the turf follower would call a 14 to 1 shot when he aims for the goal of success.

Daniel J. Kelley, the agent of the Baking Powder Trust and his lieutenants, former Lieutenant-Governor John A. Lee and Senator Farris of Crawford County, only went the second round to encompass the defeat of the bill to repeal the anti-alum law two years ago.

The criminal jurisprudence committee agreed to bury the bill and its obedience was rewarded by the payment of $8500, of which the Senate president got $1500.

At the recent session the situation presented more serious aspects.

The agitation for an open vote was too effective to permit another quiet burial, and so the bill was postponed after amendments agreeable to the Baking Powder Trust were added.

The "Friendly Man at Court."

Still another lobby method suggested by the declarations of J. R. Hume, banker of Kahoka, Mo., to Circuit Attorney Folk is to have a "friendly man at court" in the clerical organization of the House or Senate.

According to Mr. Hume, Joe Tall, who was chief clerk of the House in the 1901 and 1903 sessions by the grace of the lobby, had a way of disposing of a bill when other schemes failed. He would hold it back or lose it, so Mr. Hume says.

His political ambition forever crushed and imbued with the idea that he is a political Samson "who has pulled down the temple of corruption" (which, figuratively speaking, has fallen upon him), Missouri's former lieutenant governor has "peached" on his erstwhile lobby companions.

Mr. Lee frankly avers that two years ago lobbyists pulled the legislative strings from behind his rostrum. He saw Carroll, Phelps and others virtually dictate legislation inside the Senate chamber, and when bills were up for consideration he saw them writing amendments which were forwarded to the senators delegated to look after their interests.

The president of the Senate did not rout the lobby as he insists he tried to do.

But what Mr. Lee says is interesting as an official vindication of the oft-repeated charges that the lobby has been the "power behind the throne" during the sessions of the General Assembly.

Personnel and History of the Lobby.

It has been stated that political influence is the bulwark of the Missouri lobby.

It is only necessary to refer to the men who compose it to establish the verity of this assertion.

In the old days, O'Day and Clardy were the big men who stood behind the legislative guns.

Col. John O'Day, who died two years ago, became a millionaire, while Martin L. Clardy is the general attorney for the Missouri Pacific and Iron Mountain railroad systems.

They were succeeded by Col. William H. Phelps, Col. John H. Carroll, Chris Ellerbe and Capt. John W. Farris of Lebanon, Mo.

Carroll served a term as a member of Congress and was twice elected chairman of the Democratic state committee.

Phelps is still a controlling spirit in the affairs of the Missouri Democracy and despite intense opposition was made a delegate-at-large to the Kansas City convention which nominated William J. Bryan.

A year ago Carroll announced that he intended to retire as a lobbyist.

He kept his promise so far as Jefferson City was concerned, but he went a step higher by going to Washington, which will hereafter be the center of his operations.

Between John H. Carroll and William H. Phelps there are no more skillful manipulators of legislation in the western country.

Both labored long and arduously at Missouri's capitol. Together they accomplished more for their employers than all the other generals of the lobby put together.

Usually they took an active part in the organization of the House and Senate, and in the upper branch the "combine" was not infrequently of their doing.

Carroll's personality won him many friends. He was always affable, always serene and seldom worried.

Phelps, on the other hand, is more brusque; is vindictive to the point of revenge, but invariably loyal to his friends.

Phelps had more brains than Carroll—more brains, in fact, that nine-tenths of the corporation lawyers who made Jefferson City their biennial sojourning place.

Carroll would pat one on the back and in a patronizing way say: "My boy, what can I do you for yau?"

The New Lobbyist With New Methods.

If you were inexperienced as a legislator your hair might bristle as he did this and perhaps again you would fancy yourself the only pebble on the lawmaking beach. When later it was discovered that Carroll repeated the same tactics with nearly everybody he knew and many he did not know, you would be inclined to put him down as what the boys call a "salve spreader."

There is none of the cheap clap-trap to Phelps. He knew men better than Carroll to resort to such tawdry tricks.

His workday was one tireless, unending procession of hours. His calculations were not the outcome of the moment, but the fruit of patient study. There has not been a man connected with the Missouri legislature during the past 20 years whose biography—and not the kind that appears in the blue book, either—is not a part of the Phelps encyclopedia.

Fashionable social functions appealed to Carroll, who was considered a "ladies'" man. It was partly because of his social connections that Carroll disdained the title of lobbyist.

He always dressed well, but never ostentatiously.

When Carroll abandoned the field at Jefferson City Phelps was left as the supreme master of the [illegible] railroad lobby. How well he man[illegible] shown by the records [illegible] bill adverse to a railroad interest was passed.

They had things pretty much to themselves until the session of 1899, when a new man with new methods and a new following entered the field.

He worked along quietly for some time without any of the "old stagers" being aware of his presence.

Occasionally they met Dr. Jekyll and sometimes they ran across the shells of Mr. Hyde.

"I wonder what they are going to do," said Carroll one day.

"Search me!" replied Phelps. "They certainly work on the same lines, but more as alternatives and you never see both at the same time."

It was not long before William J. Stone's identity was discovered.

But discovery did not deter him from continuing his role.

As Dr. Jekyll he urged the members of the state board of equalization not to raise the assessment of public service corporations because such action would injure the Democratic party; as Mr. Hyde he accepted a fee of $2000 for his services.

Jekyll started out to "bust a trust," but it was found that Hyde was merely trying to sandbag the trust.

Jekyll and Hyde and the Alum Bill.

Hyde took the money, amounting to $1000.

In the role of a public benefactor taking up arms in behalf of the health of the people of Missouri Jekyll reached the acme of his performances.

And Mr. Hyde called on the baking powder trust for a fee of $5000.

All this startled Mr. Phelps. He could not at first realize that his old comrade had joined the lobby.

He thought and thought and thought. For 10 years he and William J. Stone had been political partners. Now Stone, by the aid fo his noiseless gum shoes had stolen in upon his legislative reverie.

And when he accused Jekyll and Hyde of being one Stone denied it.

"You can't deny," said Phelps. "We both suck eggs, but you hide the shells."

When legislation must be bought an expert lobbyist is required.

The man who "cuts the money" and at the same time does so without piling up evidence against himself must have shrewdness and cunning.

Daniel J. Kelley thought he had both, but the facts showed that he possesses neither.

If Kelley was not an amateur he would never have distributed $1000 bills or checks. How, for example, did he know that a country editor could get such a big sum changed without attracting attention?

Of coruse it might be different in New York and perhaps the boodle agent of the trust merely applied the same methods to his base of operations in Missouri that he did down east, where they treat Kelley's indictment as a joke, but at the same time admit that he is under a cloud with the added charge of being a fugitive from justice.

It was Kelley's carelessness that is undoubtedly responsible for getting others of his lobby comrades into trouble.

Evidently it must have been contagious, since no one would ever suspect that anything but an alum emetic could induce Senator Farris to talk rashly before the grandjury of $1000 bills he had changed.

How the Boodle Is Passed Around.

The professional lobbyist in Missouri, Mr. Kelley, has peculiar methods of passing out money.

The scheme may be on old one, but that of distributing the "coin" at poker games still appears to be the popular one.

Two years ago a lobbyist invited the members of the senate or rather those who made up the combine to dine with him at the Southern Hotel. Bills affecting the interests which he represented were then pending.

But the host said nothing about this. "Just come along, boys," was his hearty invitation, "and we will enjoy an evening together."

According to report covers were laid for 14 and the senators, bowing and smiling, walked to the table.

For a moment they stood perfectly still. Then the lobbyist excused himself a moment, and while he was away the plates were lifted. Under each was a $1000 bill. No surprise was expressed.

Unlike the Julius Lehmann birthday party at which $47,500 lighting bill "swag" was "cut up," no noise was made and there was no suggestion of exceptional jubilation.

The lobbyist returned in a few minutes and the banquet proceeded.

The skilled lobbyist trus[illegible] legislative friends and they in tur[illegible] fair to him.

The lobby also [illegible] conv[illegible] ways of transacting business with the statesmen, one of which was to inclose the boodle money in a blank envelope. This envelope was addressed to the senator who was to act as distributing agent.

WHAT THE LOBBY MEANS.

Lobby (noun), that part of a legislative hall not appropriated to the official use of the assembly; any persons not members of a legislative body who strive to influence its proceedings by personal agency.

Lobby (verb), to address or solicit members of a legislative body in the lobby or elsewhere, with the purpose to influence their votes.—Extracts from Webster's Dictionary.

There was a tacit understanding, of course, between the recipient and the one who sent the money as to the purpose for which it was being supplied.

In the House of Representatives boodling has not been carried on extensively and the lobby finds little time to do business with this branch of the assembly, unless the Senate "price" is too high and then an effort is made to buy votes among the representatives.

Senators who make a practice of boodling reap between $8000 and $10,000 out of a session, according to the information before Circuit Attorney Folk.

During the 42d general assembly a dozen or more persons composed the lobby and it was common report that "pickings" had not been so good as in former years.

Outside of the state capitol St. Louis is the chief field of the lobby's operations.

Here most of the big legislative bargains are made and here the financial managers of those interested in important legislation assemble.

Here the baking powder trust fund was distributed and here the ex-lieutenant governor and Senator Farris acquired the "alum taste."

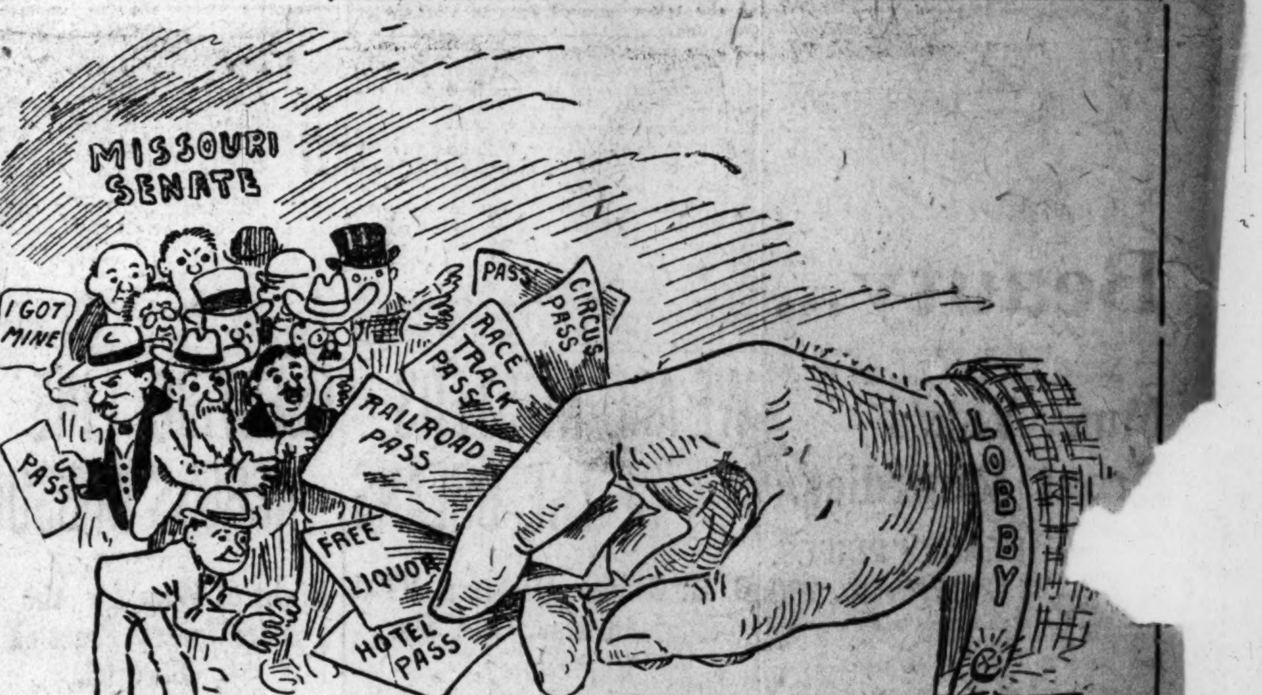
Evidence before Circuit Attorney Folk and Attorney-General Crow shows that legislation could not be enacted without the expenditure of money or the bestowal of favors equivalent to money.

Proof is positive that members of the assembly looked upon official thievery [illegible] common and pardonable offense.

Legislators bearing the crown of th[illegible] by and the cross of corruption win[illegible] the possible consequences.



THE LOBBY DISTRIBUTES ALL SORTS OF PASSES TO ITS VICTIMS.

The Political End of the Lobby.

The political lobby is not an unimportant feature of the assembly. This is controlled absolutely by the state machine, the active manager at the present time being James M. Seibert, excise commissioner of St. Louis.

Mr. Seibert enjoys the fattest political plum at the disposal of the Dockery administration. The income from the fees of his office last year amounted to over $18,000.

Of that sum Mr. Seibert is obliged t[illegible] give a substantial portion to the campaign managers.

Seibert has been the head and fro[illegible] the financial manipulator of the state house lobby for upwards of 15 years.

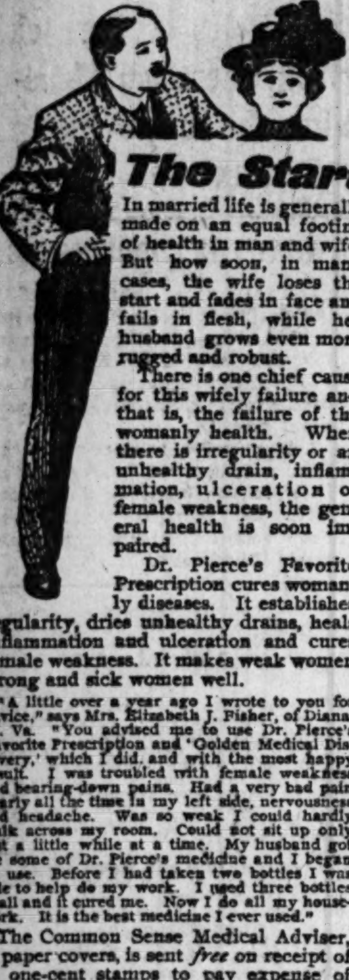
SWEEPING QUARANTINE ORD

Western Cattle From Mexico to Ca Will Come Under the Regulations.

DENVER, May 16.—The most extensive quarantine of cattle in the West for many years will be in effect within a few days as the result of the general prevalence of the mange. Gov. Peabody has issued his proclamation. Six or eight other states and territories will come under the same rule before the end of the week. Cattle from the Mexican border to Canada will come under these regulations and practically all of the territory from the Rocky Mountains to the Missouri river will be affected.



The Start

In married life is generally made on an equal footing of health in man and wife. But how soon, in many cases, the wife loses the start and fades in face and fails in flesh, while her husband grows even more rugged and robust.

There is one chief cause for this wifely failure and that is, the failure of the womanly health. When there is irregularity or an unhealthy drain, inflammation, ulceration or female weakness, the general health is soon impaired.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries unhealthy drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"A little over a year ago I wrote to you for advice," says Mrs. Elizabeth J. Fisher, of Diana, W. Va. "You advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which I did, and with the most happy result. I was troubled with female weakness and bearing-down pains. Had a very bad pain nearly all the time in my left side, nervousness and headache. Was so weak I could hardly walk across my room. Could not sit up only just a little while at a time. My husband got me some of Dr. Pierce's medicine and I began its use. Before I had taken two bottles I was able to help do my work. I used three bottles in all and it cured me. Now I do all my housework. It is the best medicine I ever used."

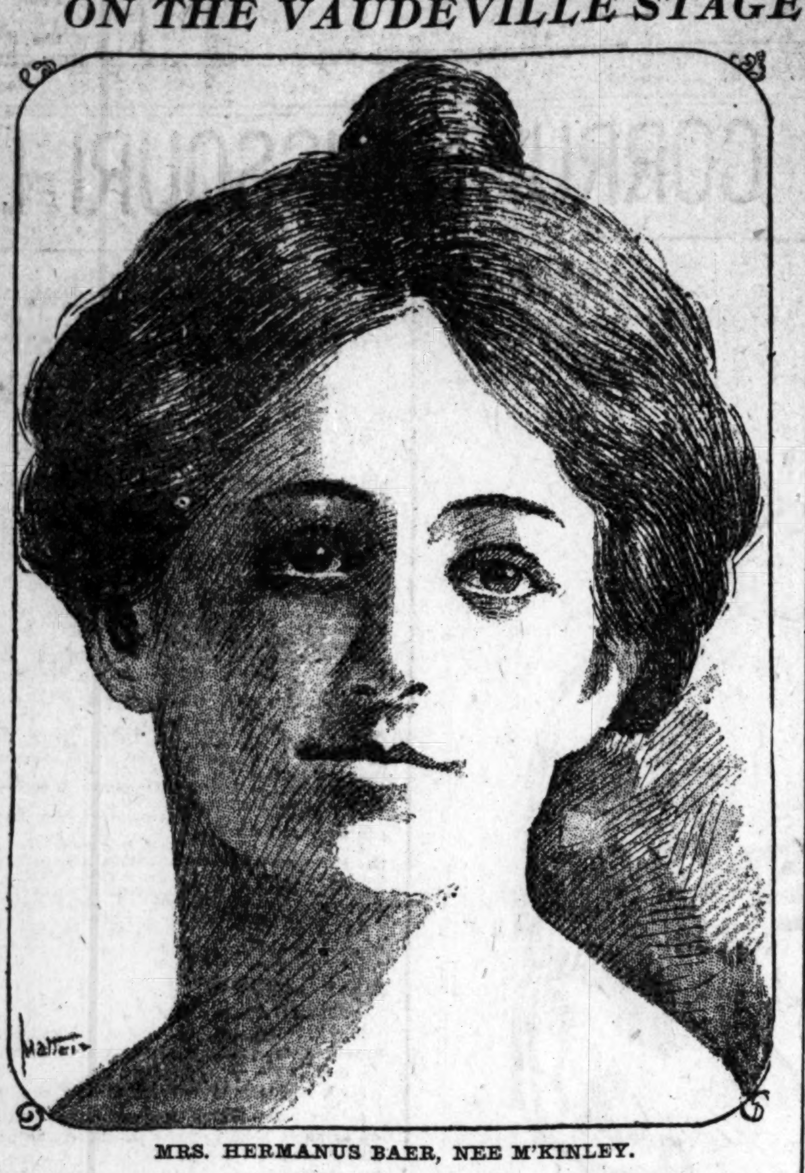
MABEL M'KINLEY TO SING ON THE VAUDEVILLE STAGE



MRS. HERMANUS BAER, NEE M'KINLEY.

She Wants to Know Just Exactly What the Public Will Think of Her Voice and She Also Has a Hobby.

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

NEW YORK, May 15.—"I am going on the stage because I want the public verdict on my voice. If you are a musician, an artist or a sculptor, and think that you have talent, you soon learn that the opinion of your friends is without value. You have to sing in public, to send your picture to the salon or the national academy to find out what they are really worth."

This was the chief of many reasons which Mabel McKinley, daughter of Abner McKinley and favorite niece of the late President, gave to me for her debut as a professional singer, which she is to make in the latter part of June in Chicago or Washington.

"I do not mind appearing in vaudeville, as I have agreed to," she continued, "for I am sure that only the best artists in the different lines will precede or follow my songs. Some persons might think it strange for the name McKinley to follow that of an acrobat or clog dancer, but if these people are prominent in their own line of work I do not see why I should not be.

"President McKinley was, you know, a very broad-minded man. He knew before his death of my intention to sing professionally, and he did not oppose it. My father is less liberal in his ideas and does not like the idea. When we were stopping at the Windsor Hotel, Mme. Melba was also a guest. One morning she heard me singing and sent her maid to the office to find out who occupied the room. When she learned my name she sent for me. I sang for her, and she told me I had a great future. By her advice I took lessons of Margaret Elliott, who studied with her in Paris. Since then I have studied under Victor Capoul, in Paris, and in New York with Isadore Luckstone.

"I have always wanted to sing professionally, and of course I want my voice to be judged exactly for what it is. I don't want the name of McKinley to be credited with any success I may achieve.

"Besides gratifying an ambition which I have had all my life, I hope that my public appearance will help me to carry out a plan which I have had at heart for many years.

"I think the city ought to establish conservatories where the poor children can be taught music free of charge. I know a great many very accomplished society women who have had the best musical education Europe and America can supply, who would be only too glad to teach for an hour or two in a free musical school if the opportunity were given them. Perhaps the public schools, after school hours, could be utilized for the purpose.

"People, as a rule, have no idea how necessary music is to the poor. What a blessing it would be to the worker in a sweatshop or factory, if, upon his return home, his little girl could sing or play something to him in a really sympathetic way. To the rich people of America music is a luxury, but to the poor it is a necessity.

"Jenny Lind, you know, was picked up when singing and dancing in the streets.

"I cannot imagine anything more dreadful than to have a fine voice and to have it wasted for lack of cultivation."

WE ARE MASTERS OF THE OCEANS

C. H. Cramp Declares That England Has Lost Her Supremacy.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—"In one respect the great Morgan ship combine rendered a good service to England, for it awakened that country from its lethargy and England is now aware that the United States has outstripped her, and she is doing her utmost to regain her former supremacy as mistress of the seas."

Charles H. Cramp, president of the Cramp Ship and Engine Building Co., made this statement in his address before the students and faculty of the Wharton School of Finance and Economy of the University of Pennsylvania, on "The Condition and Prospects of the Shipbuilding Industry in the United States."

Mr. Champ compared the prosperous condition of the shipbuilding industry here with that of England and Germany. He said that there was a remarkable decline of the former British supremacy, and although this decline was discernible within the last 10 years, yet it was only clearly perceptible immediately after the South African war. Since then the so-called commercial supremacy of Great Britain has been reduced to a subordinate position.

"Germany," the speaker continued, "is making giant strides in the shipbuilding field and is gradually working her way to a foremost position. While England is resting on her oars, confident in her former strength, Germany is building and forming a splendid merchant marine and passenger service.

"Goldwin Smith was right in saying that England had reached its climax because she has almost exhausted her coal and iron supply. Complete exhaustion was delayed because of discoveries of new processes, yet one thing is true, England as an iron and steel country has been relegated by the United States to a subordinate position.

"Germany's great advance in the shipbuilding industry is due largely to the personality and energy of Emperor William, who has done more for Germany in the arts and the sciences than any other monarch."

Worst of Idiots.

"Did you say he was arrested for making an incendiary speech at the opera house?"

"Yes."

"The idea! I didn't know he was an anarchist."

"I didn't say he was; he simply yelled 'Fire.'"

ELECTRIC LINE ACROSS MISSOURI

BROOKFIELD, Mo., May 16.—With 80 per cent of the right-of-way secured, the Missouri Central Electric Railway from this town to St. Louis seems assured. The distance from Brookfield to St. Louis by the route of the new railway is 200 miles. A strip of ground 100 feet wide for 175 miles of the distance now belongs to the company, and it is only a matter of a fortnight until the rest of the right-of-way will be deeded over for the use of the electric road.

"In securing the right-of-way," said Walter Brownlee, cashier of the Brownlee Banking Co.; and dircetor of the new road, "we have had little trouble. The farmers through whose lands the road will pass have almost in every instance given the right-of-way and very little, if any, will have to be condemned. The increased value of farm property along the line of the road is sufficient inducement for the land owners.

"As soon as the entire right-of-way has been obtained all contracts for the construction of the road will be let. They have already been drawn and the terms settled. In New York several millions of dollars are awaiting the beginning of the construction work. The road will cost near to $20,000 a mile, $4,000,000 being needed to build it and put it in operation. This amount of money, and as much more, should it be decided to build a double track, has been provided by eastern capitalists."

The new road will be of the newest and heaviest construction. It will be standard gauge and the rails will weigh 80 pounds to the yard. Two power houses, one at Brookfield and the other at Glasgow, will supply the power. It is probable that another power house will be built at New Florence. Electric motors will draw trains of passenger coaches and freight cars at a speed of 75 mile an hour. Regular freight trains will be run to pick up all the produce of the country at a nominal charge. The carrying of milk and vegetables will be a specialty. The passenger fare will be 1 cent a mile and the trains will stop anywhere in the country.

The survey of the road has been completed from Brookfield as far as Culver Junction in Lincoln County. The projected survey is to St. Charles, where it is expected that connection will be made with trolley lines there that run into St. Louis. The road will cross the trunk railroads of the state 11 times, affording connection in all directions.

The Missouri Central Electric railway is essentially a Missouri project, and while foreign [illegible] to build it, Mis[illegible] it. It had [illegible] George B. Harrison of Glasgow a year ago. Mr. Harrison is now president of the company. The other officers are E. W. Price of Keytesville, vice-president and treasurer; Charles A. Loomis of Kansas City, counsel; W. B. Cauthorn of Columbia, chief engineer; Howard Ellis of New Florence, secretary, and W. H. Chase, general manager. Its directorate is made up of one man from each county through which the road passes.

AMERICAN DOCTOR EXTRADITED

Charged With Complicity in Insurance Murders in Mexico.

EL PASO, Tex., May 16.—Dr. C. S. Harle, accused of complicity in the murder of two policy holders of the New York Life Insurance company, at Chihuahua, Mexico, was today delivered to the authorities on the southern side of the border and will be held pending trial.

Dr. Harle was driven across the Rio Grande in a closed carriage and now occupies a cell in Juarez jail, from whence he will be taken to Chihuahua. Before leaving this country he stated that he had no fear of the fate awaiting him in Mexico, but was greatly agitated as he spoke. If he is convicted of the crime, with which he is charged he will be shot.

MUST END WITH MAY 31

Approaching Close of Doctor Powell's Magnificent Public Offer. The Sick and Afflicted Given Notice and Warning That Their Grand Opportunity Is Soon to Expire. Treatment at $5 a Month, Medicines Included, Until Cured, Is for Those and Those Only Who Apply Before June 1st.

Only a short time remains in which to take advantage of the famous $5 offer of the Bi-Chemic Physicians. During the past few weeks their offices have been a veritable Mecca for those persons suffering from Deafness, Blindness, Lameness, Nervous Disorders, and all other Chronic Diseases that human flesh is heir to. The facilities of the Bi-Chemic Offices have been taxed to their utmost capacity. So great has been the multitude applying for treatment that the Bi-Chemic Physicians have been compelled to lengthen their office hours in order to accommodate the people. It will be absolutely impossible to extend this offer much longer.

All persons applying for treatment before June 1st will be examined by the X-Ray, and given treatment and medicines for a period of one month, for the nominal sum of $5. The Bi-Chemic Physicians wish to state that many cases are cured in one month's time. They also wish to emphasize the fact that this offer positively expires on the 31st day of this month, and will not be extended beyond that date under any circumstances. This is your last opportunity to be treated and cured at a nominal fee.

DEAFNESS.

Mr. John Brennan, 3921 Folsom avenue, St. Louis, says: "My deafness started about seven years ago. It gradually grew worse, and finally got so bad that I could not hear the alarm of my clock. I could not hear people talk without great difficulty. The noises in my head almost drove me frantic. Strange as it may seem, the Bi-Chemic Treatment has completely restored my hearing. The noises are gone, and I can now hear my clock tick across the room."

STOMACH TROUBLE.

Mrs. John Kurtzman, 604 Summit av., East St. Louis, says: "I had suffered for years with catarrh of the nose, throat and stomach. My stomach became so weak that it was impossible for me to eat solid food. The pain which I experienced was intense. Oftentimes I would cough so hard that I would vomit all that I had eaten. I had lost 25 pounds in flesh and was a physical wreck. Under the Bi-Chemic Treatment my appetite is good, my head clear, my cough gone, and, in fact, I am a new person in every respect. I cannot speak too highly of the Bi-Chemic Physicians."

CATARRH.

Mr. Fritz Winkleman, Venice, Ill., says: "I have been a great sufferer from catarrh for many years. I have tried all forms of remedies and a great many physicians, and got no relief until I began treatment with the Bi-Chemic Physicians. I fail to find words to express the gratitude which I owe Dr. Powell for establishing his famous Bi-Chemic treatment in this city."

FREE X-RAY EXAMINATION.

The Bi-Chemic Physicians never accept a case unless they know to a certainty the cause of the trouble, and this can only be determined by a scientific X-Ray examination. Their X-Ray outfit is the most elaborate and complete in this country. By their special Flueroscopic attachment they are able to examine all parts of the body and find out to an absolute certainty the cause of the patient's affliction. Come and be examined; it is absolutely free. They will not charge you one cent. Come and find out what your trouble is and they will advise you in reference to a cure. It is all free. They ask no compensation.

What This Offer Means.

O. K. BUCKHOUT.

Chairman Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co. (Ltd.); Member of British Tuberculosis Congress; Member National Association for the Prevention of Consumption.

Consumptives need not worry about their future any more, as the long-looked-for cure for consumption has at last been found, and a cure is now just as sure as in ordinary disease. To satisfy yourself of this you have only to write for free trial treatment to the Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co. (Ltd.), 548 Main street, Kalamazoo, Mich., of which the chairman is Mr. O. K. Buckhout, a noted member of the British Tuberculosis Congress and also of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, composed of world-famous men who have made consumption—its cure and prevention—a life study. This cure is something entirely new, and is called "Antidotum Tuberculose," or the Copper Cure, and is the only discovery we know of that absolutely kills all tuberculosis germs which cause consumption, as, unless this is done, the disease cannot be cured. As the name of the remedy tells, its chief ingredient is copper, which metal has at last been found to be the deadly enemy of the consumption germ. "Antidotum Tuberculose" is the original copper cure.

You can tell if you have consumption by the coughing and hawking, by continually spitting, especially in the morning, when you throw yellow and black matter, by bleeding from the lungs, night sweats, flat chest, fever, weak voice, peculiar flushed complexion, pain in chest, wasting away of the flesh, etc. Find out how the Copper Cure kills the germs, then builds up the lungs, strengthens the heart, puts flesh on the body and muscles on the bones until the consumption is all gone, and you're again a strong, healthy, robust man or woman.

Don't doubt this, for the very same discovery benefited A. H. Dingley, a son of Congressman Dingley, of Dingley Tariff Bill fame, who went West and South for relief and didn't get it, and came back with death staring him in the face, and was benefited by "Antidotum Tuberculose" after all else had failed.

So don't give up hope, and don't spend your money in travel. Attend to it right away, for consumption spreads to other members of the family. If you have consumption or fear you are predisposed to it write tonight to the Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co. (Ltd.), 548 Main street, Kalamazoo, Mich., for the FREE Trial Treatment, and the plain and comprehensive literature which they will gladly send you, all charges prepaid. Remember the trial treatment is absolutely FREE.

FREE TO WEAK MEN

I HAVE made the curing of men who are Vitally Weak my life's study, and until within the last year or so I had never been able to find a restorative which would do the work, and I had to content myself with "patching up" men with the old lines of treatment laid down in the medical books and which treatments are being used by the so-called specialists of today in vain attempts to partially relieve this weakness. Men who have been paying out their money for years trying to find something to make them strong and vigorous again, and to the knowledge of those who have tried these supposed cures, and to my positive knowledge, there has never yet been a single cure made until the discovery of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative, and I know that if you are ever to be completely restored that sooner or later you will have to take this treatment, for it records no failures. I can, with the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative, cure you to stay cured and the cost to you will be very small. I enjoy the confidence of every one of my patients, for I have never made them a promise that I did not fulfill to the letter and I will never make a statement to them which will not be absolutely true.

You will notice by the affidavit here printed that every vital assertion which I make is sworn to, and that the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative will not fail to cure these weaknesses and the wasting diseases of men. My treatment is rapidly becoming the most widely known in the world because of its universal success in building up and remaking the physical vitality in man, and if you are in need of rebuilding and revitalizing, you will not be disappointed in placing your case in my hands and sending for the one dollar treatment today, for I will make you as sound and as vigorous as you would care to be.

Just because there are hundreds of concerns and physicians advertising that their treatment will do just what the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative WILL DO and as most men know these treatments are absolute failures—I have decided to convince every man, practically without cost, that there is a real cure for Vital Debility, for the offer I am making you will cost me considerable money. I lose just one dollar and fifty cents every time a man takes advantage of it—but I am doing good work for myself after all, for every man I cure will be an advertisement for me, and sooner or later I will profit accordingly. I will send a treatment of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative, prepaid, until further notice, to any man writing and inclosing me one dollar—I will send him that which costs me two dollars and fifty cents. You will derive more good and benefit from this treatment I will send you for a dollar than you have from all the medicine you have ever taken to overcome these Weaknesses. I would as soon send this dollar treatment free to every man writing to me, but I have tried that and find that thousands of curiosity-seekers write for the Restorative simply because it is "something free," and I make this small charge of a dollar to effectually bar this class—and a man who is in need of treatment will not regret having to pay the dollar, therefore I have decided to answer no letter unless the dollar accompanies it. This is no C. O. D. fraud, like you will find most seemingly liberal offers are. I send nothing C. O. D.

Bear in mind that the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative is my own discovery and that it is not sold in drug stores nor by agents. It is entirely different from any remedy in appearance and action you have ever seen. I learn that there are already "substitutes" in the field. Every successful man's methods are imitated just as spurious concoctions closely follow in the wake of remedies that cure.

Men who are suffering with a loss of Physical Power, Nervo-Vital Debility, Varicocele, Wasting, Non-Development, Drains and Kindred Ailments are the only men whom I want to write for the one-dollar treatment, for the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative is not a "cure-all," but is an ABSOLUTE and POSITIVE cure for the ailments which I claim it will cure. Of course if one of my patients is suffering with other ailments in connection with these weaknesses, I will then prescribe for him, but will not charge him a cent for so doing.

You can scarcely doubt that I have a cure for you when you read the accompanying affidavit, and as I may withdraw this one-dollar offer soon, avail yourself of it at once and give the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative a trial, and you will live to bless the day that you read of this treatment. You may send the dollar in stamps, a dollar bill or postal order made payable to M. E. Alkire, treasurer. My book, "The Travels and Researches of a Renowned Physician," sent free, postpaid, to all who write for treatment. Write today. Address all communications to the English Restorative Co., 17 to 35 Union bldg., Denver, Colo.

A SWORN STATEMENT.

Can Any Man Doubt That at Last There Is a Cure for Him When Such Assurance as This Is Given?

CITY OF DENVER,
County of Arapahoe. April 27, 1891.

I, the manager of the English Restorative Company, first being duly sworn, on oath depose and say that the ingredients of the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative are known to me and that this Restorative does not contain any of the following poisonous drugs, all or a portion of which are contained in all of the supposed cures for the ailments or weaknesses, which have been examined by me, and which the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative will cure, towit: Phosphorus, Nux Vomica (Strychnine), Cantharides (Spanish Fly), Morphine and Damiana (although Damiana is not considered a poison by some physicians). And I do most solemnly swear that the Sir John Hampton Vital Restorative could be taken in full doses by a child without injurious effects; further, that I have been associated with the discoverer of this treatment ever since it has been offered the public and that I am fully conizant of the vast number of cures that it has and is making, which number many thousands, and have investigated these cures personally and am assured that they are permanent and lasting. From indisputable evidence, from the thousands who have been fully restored and the successful action of the Restorative in all cases, I am further prepared to swear that it is an absolute and positive cure or specific for Sexual Weakness in its various forms and for Associate Diseases, and I most positively affirm that it is the only treatment in existence which will cause growth or development where shrinkage or atrophy exist. I believe this to be the only real cure that has ever been offered to men, and I make these statements voluntarily and without compensation, knowing the good this treatment will do men in need of it.

The manager of the English Restorative Company, personally known to me, appeared before me, a notary for the County of Arapahoe, and State of Colorado, and duly swore to the foregoing.

MARTIN SMITH,
Notary Public.

My commission expires March 13 1905.

BLOOD POISON NOW CURABLE.

We have little doubt that the statement that there is at last a scientific cure for contagious blood poison, guaranteed and backed by responsible business men, will be the best news to many readers in today's paper. Dr. Francis A. Sieber, the discoverer of the only serum that's anti-toxin to blood poison, is the head of the medical department of the International Serum Toxin Co., 501-503 Commercial building, Sixth and Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo., who guarantee to cure the very worst cases of specific blood poison. The "guarantee" of a company of this character is something tangible for a prospective patient to consider; for it is given by F. H. Cooper, Esq., president, who founded the "Big Stores" of Siegel-Cooper Co., New York and Chicago, and who is one of America's foremost and wealthiest merchants.

A FREE MEDICAL TREATISE.

There is no disease to which human flesh is heir about which there is so much misleading and worthless literature as blood poison. A genuine public service has, we are sure, been performed by the International Serum Toxin Co. in preparing and publishing an accurate and explanatory treatise on this subject. Although this valuable little hand-book was prepared by [illegible] Sieber and is correct and scientific as [illegible] medical facts, it is written in plain, [illegible] day English and can be easily c[illegible] hended by the average reader. Amo[illegible] most useful features of this treatise [illegible] space devoted to a clear explanation of the treatment, the charges and the results of the administering of the Sieber serum, the only anti-toxin ever discovered for specific blood poison. Any person sending a name and address to Dept. W of the above company, 501-503 Commercial building, Sixth and Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo., will receive a free copy of this valuable book in a plain, sealed envelope.

A CONFIDENTIAL TREATMENT.

Every feature of the Sieber serum treatment is based on secrecy, confidence and success. A person suffering from blood poison naturally doesn't wish the fact known. That is the chief reason why the offices of the International Serum Toxin Co. are located in a prominent office building—501-503 Commercial building, Sixth and Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo. The company's patients mix with the throngs entering and leaving this convenient building, and the world is no wiser as to the real nature of their errand. The offices of this company are arranged and appointed like those of the best practitioners in a private practice—separate entrances for men and women and large tastefully furnished consultation rooms. Patients suffering with contagious blood poison can come to 501-503 Commercial building, Sixth and Olive streets, St. Louis, Mo., confident that two things await them there: First, the courteous advice of skilled physicians; sec[illegible]d, the only human agency through which [illegible] terrible disease can be eradicated from [illegible] human system.

"HAVE A DRINK?" WAS HIS TICKET

John S. Sells Girdled the Globe on a Bottle of Good Whiskey.

ALL MANNER OF MEN WERE WON BY LIQUOR

Now That He is Back Home He Will Take the Keeley Cure and Throw Away His Battle.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 16.—Starting from New Orleans April 22, 1902, John S. Sells has accomplished a trip around the world in a manner that has demonstrated the potency of a "treat." By the aid of a flask, kept continually filled with "good red liquor," he has accomplished 30,000 miles of his long journey and returned to his starting place, as he says, to take the Keeley cure.

"Have a drink," was his cordial greeting always.

Railway conductors, steamship officials, stage drivers, rickshaw boys and men of every nationality have bowed before their thirst and carried an adventurer to the far corners of the earth and back again.

Sells arrived in Houston riding in the caboose of the through freight train made up on the Pacific coast. From here he journeyed in the same manner.

Aside from the expense of continually keeping the bottle filled, he had spent exactly $3.25 since leaving San Francisco.

The entire expense of the trip was close to $600, of which nearly all was spent for whisky. The remainder went for several contingencies largely encountered in strange countries.

Sells Always Fared Well.

During most all the trip Sells fared about as well as those who pay the regulation prices for travel. He never went hungry, and, of course, was never dry. Sleeping was a little difficult, but after a few days out he grew accustomed to take whatever came his way. Aboard ship and aboard trains he shared whatever the crew happened to possess.

The traveler is of German extraction, and has resided in many different portions of this country. His parents died in Lincoln, Neb., ten years ago, and he was left with a comfortable compentency. By trade he is a barber, talkative, jolly and always ready with a story. His trip just completed was arranged on a wager of expences up to $750, the limit placed by H. W. Sherman, lately of Houston.

Starting at New Orleans, Sells sauntered down on the docks. Among the many vessels in port he picked out one, an English tramp, about to sail for Gibraltar. Luck was with him.

Sells followed a party of sightseers on board. At an opportune moment something snapped. There was a whirr and a report like that of a pistol. The cable used on the steam derrick snapped, and the loose end whipped over the deck, striking a sailor. He fell as though dead.

Sells was at his side in a moment. Out came the bottle. Soon the man revived and was taken to his bunk. Sells assisted. Tearing his handkerchief into strips he soaked the pieces with whisky and bound them over the injured spot. Instead of placing the flask back in his pocket he handed it to the captain, who stood close at hand.

"Have a Drink," Was the Password.

"Have a drink," inquired the wiley ex-barber, not stopping in his work. When he turned around the much used flask was almost empty.

Sells was invited to the captain's cabin. Another bottle was produced from his roomy pockets in spite of the officer's protestation of standing treat himself. The two men sat down and spent the afternoon together. The visitor made himself so agreeable that he was remembered when he was later found stowed away on the ship, then at sea.

Talking, laughing and telling stories over the flask, Sells worked his way from Gibraltar to Genoa. Singing and dancing and drinking he made friends. In time he was a chum with a ship captain bound for Greece. Away they sailed. The ship was lost but the crew and the jolly rover were picked up by a tramp bound for India. More whisky was purchased. All the old stories were told over gain, and all the entertaining qualities of Sells were put to the test. He succeeded. An invitation was extended to him to continue his trip through Ceylon instead of being put ashore at Suez as were the others.

Three months from the day he had started from New Orleans the treveler found himself in India. From thence on, by easy stages and mostly by slow vessels Sells made his way.

At Singapore the fact that he was an American and spoke English made him a favorite with the class of men necessary to the pursuance of his journey. At Manila he found himself among Americans and the taste of the good old rye, liberally dispensed, won him the friendship of the master of a sailing vessel bound for Japan.

Rickshaw Boys Liked the Bottle.

Rickshay boys succumed to the sight of a bottle and Tokio was visited. Good fellowship and liberal treats won to Sells the heart of a Yankee ship captain and the long journey across the Pacific Ocean was accomplished. Once in San Francisco Sells stories, new and old, still stood, and the supply of "old Kentucky" was still unexhausted. Train crew after train crew bowed down to the bottle, and finally the trip through to Houston was accomplished.

Wild eyed, red faced and staring, Sells wiped off his thirsty lips and climbed to the ground. His newly made friends introduced him to the train crew taking the through cars on to New Orleans.

Now he is back in the city from which he started. In the year of travel he bought 379 quarts of whisky and consumed almost half of it himself. According to his story he was never intoxicated, never sick and never without friends wherever he stopped. But the strain told upon his physical condition until now he is little more than a wreck.

"I went round the world treating people, and the answers they get from my references will prove it. Sometimes it was hard, but I have left a string of friends wherever I have been. When I started out I was always asking some one to have a drink with me. Lately I have discovered that I am always asking myself to take one with any old tramp. When I get back to New Orleans I'm going to take the Keely cure."

The statement was made by Mr. Sells on the day he passed through Houston. The evidence of his hard trip is written on his face.

SHARON, Pa., May 16.—Miss Sarah Thompson of Clarksville will leave this week for Rampart City, Northern Alaska, where she will marry Rev. M. Edgbert Koonce, a missionary and vice-president and general manager of the Rampart Gold Mining Co.

Rev. Mr. Koonce was formerly pastor of the Jeannette Presbyterian Church, but resigned to do missionary work in Alaska for the First Presbyterian Church of Allegheny. He was first lieutenant of Company M, Sixteenth regiment, and was in the Porto Rican campaign.

Miss Thompson will arrive at Rampart City in about six weeks, when the wedding will take place.

Here is a Sure Cure For Constipation.

I Will Return Your Money if This Great Remedy Does Not Do All That is Claimed for It.

There is but one remedy known to medical science that will permanently cure Constipation. There is no other medicine for which such a claim is made. Numberless have been the attempts of medical men and others to perfect a remedy which would quickly relieve and permanently cure the Constipation habit. The result with one exception has been failure. The trouble was in the method of treatment. All remedies now known with this one exception are cathartics and laxatives. They physic the patient, but in doing so they weaken the body. Physics will pull you down—continue their use and you will lose flesh and strength.

Mull's Grape Tonic is not a patent medicine. Its formula is the same as the famous "Traubenkur" of Germany, or grape cure. It is prescribed by physicians everywhere and long ago demonstrated that it would quickly and positively cure Constipation. It is not a physic but a strengthening, blood-making, health-giving tonic which exerts a strong and beneficial influence over the organs of the alimentary canal. Mull's Grape Tonic will not physic a well person. It is only indirectly that it will move the bowels; it does that by giving such strength to the digestive organs as will enable them to properly perform their functions. The result is quick. ONE DOSE WILL BENEFIT YOU.

MRS. J. ALCOBA, 795½ W. Madison Street, Chicago.

Mrs. J. Alcoba, 795½ W. Madison St., Chicago, Was Cured.

"I was on the flat of my back when I read about Mull's Grape Tonic and that it would cure Constipation. I had been ill for three weeks, unable to leave my bed. I got a sample bottle, then bought three full sized bottles. When I had finished taking my first bottle I was able to leave my room. I am now well and praise this great remedy as being the successful treatment in the many efforts that had been made to cure me. I will gladly talk to any one who comes to see me."

This letter is but a sample of many which we receive daily from all parts of the country. We have instructed every druggist to return the purchase price to all who use Mull's Grape Tonic and are not cured. You run no risk. Send us 10 cts. to cover cost of postage and we will mail you a sample bottle of Mull's Grape Tonic. Address LIGHTNING MEDICINE CO., Rock Island, Ill.

Tired Out Women

I can truly say that Wine of Cardui is a wonderful medicine for women. I suffered for many years with female trouble in various forms and tried so many different remedies without relief that I got tired and thought I was to be in poor health to the end of my days.

I read so many times about the women who had been benefited through the use of Wine of Cardui that I determined to try it as a last resort. The first bottle made me feel much better and stronger and I did not get up every morning with a headache and that all worn-out feeling, so I kept on taking it, growing better and stronger each week, and at the end of four months I was well and strong, and since then I have been regular and have not had to go to bed each month as heretofore; in fact, I could not not wish for better health than I have now. I am happy to testify to the merits of Wine of Cardui for ills of women.

Mrs Fay Lewis

Women should know that a continually worn out feeling and severe periodicalheadache indicate dangerous trouble and serious weakness.

Bearing-down pains, ovarian troubles, irritation and other symptoms of female weakness wear on the nervous system, making sleepless nights and drowsy, fretful days. This wearing on weakened nerves produces the worn-out feeling and nervous headache.

If you get up in the morning feeling all tired out, if you feel nervous and suffer from headache or backache you need Wine of Cardui, that great medicine which cured Mrs. Lewis.

With Wine of Cardui within your grasp to-day, health may be yours. You can soon be a perfectly well woman. Ask your druggist for a $1.00 bottle to-day.

CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

BLOOD POISON

Is the name sometimes given to what is generally known as the BAD DISEASE. It is not confined to dens of vice or the lower classes. The purest and best people are sometimes infected with this awful malady through handling the clothing, drinking from the same vessel, using the same toilet articles, or otherwise coming in contact with persons who have contracted it.

It begins usually with a little blister or sore, then swelling in the groins, a red eruption breaks out on the body, sores and ulcers appear in the mouth, the throat becomes ulcerated, the hair, eye brows and lashes fall out and, as the blood becomes more contaminated, copper colored splotches and pustular eruptions and sores appear upon different parts of the body, and the poison even destroys the bones.

Our MAGIC CURE is a Specific for this loathsome disease, and cures it even in the worst forms. It is a perfect antidote for the powerful virus that pollutes the blood and penetrates to all parts of the system. Unless you get this poison out of your blood it will ruin you, and bring disgrace and disease upon your children for it can be transmitted from parent to child.

Write for our free home treatment book and learn all about contagious blood poison. If you want medical advice give us a history of your case, and our physicians will furnish all the information you wish without any charge whatever.

We have a NEW SECRET REMEDY absolutely unknown to the profession. Permanent cures in 15 to 35 days. We refund money if we do not cure. You can be treated at home for the same price and the same guaranty. With those who prefer to come here we will contract to cure them or pay expense of coming, railroad and hotel bills, and make no charge, if we fail to cure. If you have taken mercury, iodide potash, and still have aches and pains, mucous patches in mouth, sore throat, pimples, copper-colored spots, ulcers on any parts of the body, hair or eyebrows falling out, it is this secondary blood poison we guarantee to cure. We solicit the most obstinate cases and challenge the world for a case we cannot cure. This disease has always baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians. ONE MAN CANNOT SWING ATLAS JOB

Two Or More Are Needed to "Hold Up" the Cardinal Heavens.

It is not difficult to discover why Homer Smoot was afflicted with his Hellenic first name.

Smoot was a born classic and something posted his parents about it when they christened him.

True to his name Homer is re-enacting a tragedy that transpired in Eupidee of Thessaly or some other country in the ancient state of Greece.

President Donovan of the reorganized crowd of world-get-beaters, is assisting in the little affair, which is a sketch in two innings, with an epilogue, entitled: "Atlas and Hercules, or Why Is It?"

Patsy Donovan is holding up the title role of Atlas. Holding up was one of Atlas' long suits.

Homer is exhibiting in the part of Hercules, a gentleman who had 12 jobs to perform and accomplished most of them up to the time he struck Atlas.

The original tragedy represented that Atlas had the busy job of supporting the heavens, so they wouldn't fall down and smother the inhabitants of earth.

He was the champion weight lifter of the times until Hercules came along. Herk had got himself in bad and was doing time and strange things. One of these was to relieve Atlas and keep the earth from going up in the air, even as the ball player.

Atlas got out from under and let Herk hold the heavens awhile. The occupation soon began to pall, however, and Herk decided he had better not be a "scab" and cheat Atlas out of his union job.

"Say, At, old boy, hold this bunch a minute while I tie my sandals," he said.

"At" took the burden off his hands and Hercules didn't wait to tie his shoe or say "thank you," but hot-footed out of the country. He didn't want the job.

The baseball play is very similar. Donovan, as Atlas, was trying to hold up the whole Cardinal ball team. He had had the job for two years. His chief occupation was less that of keeping the heavens up than of holding his little section of earth inhabitants down.

Homer to the Rescue.

They have a strong tendency to go up into the air.

When Homer gets a heft on the baseball business something moves. Frequently it is the ball, and generally the base runners in front of him. He didn't have 12 labors to perform, but he obligingly consented to hold up the Cardinal team for a while.

This he did.

He did about everything that could be done in the outfield, he did most of the batting and a large section of the scoring. He was the life of the organization while he held down his job of "supporting" the team.

And they once said Homer had a "glass" arm. If he did, Atlas must have had "charley horse."

Inning two of the play, represents Smoot getting tired of his job. He couldn't work off the sandal racket on Donovan, who, perhaps, had worked that too often himself.

So he went and filled himself full of malaria. While in that condition the heavens didn't fall, but the team went up into the air with alarming rapidity.

Up to the latter part of the week they were still soaring with every prospect of collision against some celestial orb.

At this juncture Patsy Donovan regretfully resumes his position as Atlas. He is very tired, however, and the job is wearisome. Something appears about to drop.

This was the status last week.

There May Be a Third Act.

A third inning may be added to this baseball sketch.

In it Herky Smoot relents, recovers from sickness and goes back into the game and helps support the team.

In this case the clouds again assume their natural distance from the Cardinals and the world at League Park again returns to normal conditions.

If the job proves too great for them, the Cardinals are destined for a career which will interfere with the operations of Santos-Dumont.

Samson Barclay apparently has had his hair cut, and Sandow Nichols is not breaking any chains with chest expansion this season.

Otto Williams, Johnny Farrell and Davy Brain have to be nailed down before every game, and occasionally break loose at that. Jack Ryan has come to the front nobly and affords an occasional pleasing break to the monotony of strike-outs by lining out a base hit. But——

On the whole the number of candidates for the classical position of Atlas to the team are few. Eddie Murphy and Mike O'Neil might take turns and do a stunt; but Murphy likes to rest and Mike O'Neil is not in shape.

No doubt if the original Atlas and Hercules had got together and divided the graft of holding up the heavens, it would have been dead easy.

So with Smoot for right bower, Donovan may be able to hold up his team. It is certain that without him the Cardinals have been in a bad way.

UMPIRING IS PASTIME NOW

WASHINGTON, May 16.—Tom Connolly, the American League umpire, says his work is sport now to what it used to be. He has been ten years in the business, starting when an umpire's life was not altogether rosy.

"Say, it's a pastime now," he remarked to a crowd of friends after a game. "It's a pastime now, but when I began the business a man took his life in his hands when he went into the field."

Connolly says Ban Johnson is to be given the credit for the improved lot of the umpire.

"He held that if an umpire was to be of any use at all he ought to be upheld," said Connolly. "So he told the men on his staff to go ahead and give their decisions to the best of their ability and he'd back them [illegible]."

BEST FAIR GROUNDS RIDER HAS BRILLIANT FUTURE

A. W. Booker, Darden & Co.'s Promising Rider, Getting Big Salary Now With Chance of Much Better if He Continues to Show Form.

BY R. D. WALSH.

There are some recegoers in St. Louis who believe D. Hall is the best jockey now riding at the Fair Grounds; others think "Tommy" Dean is best, while not a few believe that Willie Waldo is the peer of them all.

But the overwhelming majority of those who follow the "sport of kings" on the local tracks have no hesitation in saying that A. W. Booker is the most finished rider in St. Louis. This opinion is not newly formed.

When Booker rode at the Fair Grounds last year he gave unmistakable evidence that he was a jockey of the first order. He "hooked" up against some of the best and most experienced riders in the West, and was frequently victorious in many a thrilling contest.

Booker is comparatively new to the game, having only commenced to ride two years ago at Delmar. Whatever skill he possesses he learned on the local tracks, and he is not the first crack jockey that owes his greatness to a vigorous apprenticeship in St. Louis.

Booker is at the time of life when jockeys are at their best. He is just 20 years old, having been born at Decatur, Ill., in 1883.

Two years ago he started in to ride at Delmar, with little or no experience in the saddle and from the very outset made a success of it.

Booker has three brothers in the jockey business, Jim, Harry and Charlie.

No other family in the whole country can boast of having two professional riders in it.

Charlie is the oldest of the boys and has almost retired from the profession.

He now owns and trains a stable of his own, and will get A. W. to ride for him when that youngster is not needed by his employers.

Harry Booker is riding at Louisville for Charlie Ellison and has already made an enviable record. His success has been brilliant.

A. W. Booker is under contract to the prominent racing firm of W. W. Darden & Co., of which Mr. Lacy Crawford is a member.

He refuses to say what his salary is, but it is generally understood to be $6000 a year. That is rather good pay for a lad of 20, but he will be worth twice that sum if he continues to improve as he has in the last year.

Booker can ride at 95 pounds and in all probability has three good years ahead of him before he becomes too heavy to ride. Booker does most of his riding with his hands and knees.

He uses the whip only occasionally and then it must be absolutely necessary. He believes that a genuine thoroughbred does not require the gad or steel to do its utmost, but will better respond to more humane methods.

SMALLEST JOCKEY IN THE WORLD IS MASTER JAMES HENNESSEY

St. Louis has been noted in the last few years for many distinctive characteristics. Her latest claim to originality is that she has now within her boundary the smallest jockey in the world.

This latest recruit to riding honors in St. Louis is a little bit of a tot named James Hennessy.

He is the smallest boy that has ever taken part in an actual race in any racecourse in the United States.

And this means that he is probably the smallest in the world. He is not small through any oversight or unkindness of nature, but simply because he is young, being only 11 years old. His height is 3 feet 10 inches.

With all this he is a sturdy chap, and can hold his own with any boy of his age at the Fair Grounds.

His weight is 58 pounds, so that if he were invited to ride a good horse in a handi'cap, any Sambo, the lead in the saddle would outweigh the jockey himself.

James was born in St. Louis of Irish parents, and as he lived in the neighborhood of the Fair Grounds, he was always around the stables, and occasionally managed to be allowed to exercise some of the thoroughbreds that are constantly there.

Although he has only ridden in two or three races, he is very sensitive about his profession [illegible] and he recently had an encounter with a boy who laughed at his pretentions to jockeyship.

His antagonist was some 15 pounds heavier than he, but James had no trouble in defeating him.

Hennessy is at present under the care and protection of Willie Harris, who is a horse trainer of recognized ability. Harris has a five-year contract on the boy's services and intends to teach him all he knows about the riding game.

"Jimmy" has two great friends in the animal world that he values highly. One is the racehorse Hansborough, who will come at the boy's call and deliberately kiss him.

Another is a beautiful water spaniel. This dog is wonderfully intelligent, and he is Hennessy's constant companion. The boy will be seen in the saddle at the Fair Grounds this week, as he is engaged to ride the horse Called Back.

Terry McGovern as a Bookmaker.

Terry McGovern is said to be making a hit as a bookmaker in New York. It is the first time he has ever been put up where everybody could see him and he is constantly a center of attention. During his fighting days, which he now says are over, he was so modest that hero-worshipers had a hard time getting a glimpse of him and now they are making up for lost time. Many of them try to get on friendly terms with him, but Terry is rather chilly, for he says he's a bookmaker now and doesn't know how to fight any more.

BUCK WEAVER IS KANSAS' LATEST

Catcher Who Cannot Be Seen Edgewise Is Rapidly Acquiring Fame.

Along with "Sockless" Jerry Simpson, Carrie Nation, William Allen White and other men, women and things that Kansas has been responsible for, the name of Arthur C. Weaver is becoming famous in the sporting world.

"Artie" is too kittenish a title to bestow on a ball player, so he is called "Buck." That nickname has been hung on every ball player named Weaver.

Weaver is a recent discovery. Looie Heilbroner, erstwhile secretary of the St. Louis National League Club, came across him while exploring the wilds of the Three-Eye League last fall.

One day Looie was wafted into Cedar Rapids, Io. There he beheld the work of a pitcher named McFarland. But it was the catcher that attracted Looie's attention. The longitude of this receiver was far in excess of his latitude. His props reminded Looie of a pair of stilts. His general appearance was that of a colt. He ran mostly to legs.

Even while Heilbroner was carefully noting the work of the Cedar Rapids battery a strange thing happened. One of the opposing team got on first base and started for second.

"I'll see how he throws," said Looie to himself, "and then I'll buy him and take him home to the children."

Heilbroner Solved a Great Mystery.

Even as he thus conversed with himself Looie was struck with amazement. The figure behind the bat straightened a hand and a ball swung in the air and then the catcher disappeared. Looie looked toward second base, fearing that the catcher had failed to let go of the ball in time and had been carried along with it. The ball dropped into the second baseman's mitt and the runner was out. Looie brought his eye back to the plate and there he beheld the catcher. The mysterious disappearance bothered Heilbroner and he determined to solve the case.

"Will you please tell me," he inquired of one of the regulars, "where the catcher went after he threw the ball; how he got away so quickly and where he learned the disappearing specialty?"

"Guess you must be from the pines," replied the Cedar Rabbit, "can't you see, you chump, that he only turned sideways for a minute. That's the reason you did'nt see him. He has to turn twice before he casts a shadow."

Looie determined to buy the battery and forthwith closed the deal. When he returned to St. Louis he told Pat Donovan of his capture.

"You're a fine hunter," says Patsy to Looie. "It's good practice for you, as I hear you will be hunting another position next spring. By the way, you might hunt us up a pennant. Still the cloth don't cost much and if we take up a collection next spring I think we can buy one."

"Captain," replied the secretary, "we have in this young man a jewel. When he gets on first base he can easily steal second, for he will not be noticed, as he casts no shadow. Should he be discovered in the larceny, however, he can twist himself and disappear. Then the player that takes the throw will not know what to do with the ball. I guess I'm a wise gazabo. Excuse me while I congratulate myself."

And so Weaver was given to the National League and the St. Louis club and while he hasn't done any "fading away" stunts, according to Heilbroner's prediction, he is making good and promises to develop into one of the best young catchers of the league.

Tallest Catcher in National League.

Weaver confesses to six feet two inches of highness and some 160 pounds of heaviness. His is a strange story. When a boy he was very young for his age and he was trained with the idea of making him the champion corn husker of the county. He was taught to "chin" a trapeze with huge weights tied to his feet. In this way he grew up and down instead of out and back. At the early age of 15 he was able to oil the upper gearing in the windmill without getting on tiptoe.

By the time he was 16 he attained his ambition in the corn shucking line. The stalks grow ten and twelve feet high in Kansas, but "Buck" soon began to complain of weariness caused from constant stooping to reach the ears.

About this time a cyclone, not an uncommon disturbance in Kansas, blew into the state one day. It blew a St. Louis newspaper through the cornfield and Weaver captured it. It told of the game of baseball and "Buck" determined to be a baseball player.

As near as he could ascertain a baseball player in a big league was a person who was intimately related to contracts, bills of large denominations, big headlines in the papers and an ability to "jump." The paper Weaver read didn't say that a ballplayer ever worked. As for the jumping part, Artie was well up on that, for during the noon hour he used to tickle the big Kansas grasshoppers with a section of timothy and watch them all get away in a bunch.

Weaver thought a catcher's life would be the most delightful, for that player gets to wear a big pillow on his hand. He also is allowed to wear a wind bib so that foul tips do not soil him, and he bosses the pitcher and tells him what curves to throw.

After a few months' practice with the croquet ball and a stuffed mattress he started out in the world and his rise has been as rapid and unsolicited as that of the young man who rode out of the door on the toe of her father's boot.

After catching for several independent teams this diamond disciple penetrated the Southwest and joined a club at Oklahoma City, O. T. For his services he was to receive all the money secured from the sale of tickets to the third balcony in the grandstand and whatever money the patrons threw on the field. His regular income kept him in toothpicks while the donations bought the necessities of life.

Weaver was a star at Oklahoma City. To see him now with his mild manners and quiet ways, one would never take him for the swaggering receiver of the Oklahoma City Fire Eaters. He won many games by fearlessness in dealing with the umpire. They used to say that whenever a man wanted to commit suicide and didn't have the nerve to shoot himself he would apply for a job at umpiring in Oklahoma City. If the team lost it wouldn't cost him a cent to be shot up. The spectators used to amuse themselves shooting at fly balls.

It is said that one day when the championship hung in the balance a squad of [illegible] saved the day for Oklahoma City. The game was played upon the home grounds and Weaver was catching. When the Fire Eaters went to bat in the ninth the score was [illegible] against them.

TERRY AND ABE ARE MISMATED

They're About the Most Incompatable Couple That Ever Agreed to Be Up.

"Matches are made in heaven," somebody said.

Whoever it was had no reference to pugilistic matches.

The Terry McGovern-Abe Attell contest, which takes place at Fort Erie May 30, was probably never made at all—it just happened together.

A more incongruous pair of fighters and fighting styles could not be gotten together in the world.

The principal attraction about the affair is not due to any probability of fierce mixing; the interest will be morbid curiosity.

How long a retreat can avoid an advance; whether mere defense can offset all other fighting traits; how long the gadfly can keep away from the bull, and whether he can sting him into submission are some of the interesting points that the battle should bring out.

The contest will be 20 rounds.

Upon this the McGovern faction is doubtless figuring. In that length of time, it is thought, the fierce rushing Terry should beat down the defense of Attell and get blows through his guard.

In 20 rounds, it is said, Attell will be so wearied that his footwork, the most marvelous ever seen, bar that of no fighter in the country, will have been neutralized.

This has been the theory of every fighter of the McGovern stamp, that has been pitted against Attell.

It is also a theory that has universally disappointed by failing of realization.

Attell has fought rough-house men before.

Kid Broad, Benny Yanger, Harry Forbes, Eddie Hanlon are some.

In not one fight has he been leg weary at the end. To none of the heavier men did he lose through weariness.

He beat Broad in 20 rounds, after the latter had cried for an extension over their first battle of 15 rounds. Broad thought Attell would tire over the route.

He lost to Yanger from a chance punch in the solar plexus and through the lack of perspicuity on the part of the police. He was beating Yanger on the ropes when the bout was stopped.

He drew with Eddie Hanlon, who could not get near to him.

And he lost to Harry Forbes, the only man who squarely beat him. This defeat, his first battle of importance, was not due to the rough-house tactics on the part of Forbes, but the fact that the champion fought him at his own game and played clever.

Forbes today stands as good a chance to beat Attell as McGovern, not barring the difference in weight, because he is peculiarily adapted to Attell's style.

So McGovern is apt to be disappointed in hoping that Attell will not go the distance. The "terrible" atmosphere that once clung to McGovern's reputation is gone. He is just a plain fighter, like any other good one, whose reputation has been carefully nursed.

Very little more danger is to be anticipated from him than from a number of hard hitters and rushing fighters. At his best he was just a shade better than men like Broad, Yanger and other good ones of today.

What Attel is in the matter of being difficult to corner was shown in his local fights. He made Broad look like an imbecile for 20 rounds. At times in sheer despair Broad dropped his guard completely and stood open in the center of the ring, desperate to get at his opponent, but paralyzed as to how it could be done.

For 15 rounds Benny Yanger, a much cleverer man than Broad and probably more inclined to employ science than McGovern, was in much the same shape as Broad.

The manner in which Yanger pounded the air and stood for jolt after jolt from the maddening left glove of Attel was almost ludicrous.

It maddened even the mob, who could not understand how that gliding phantom could for so long evade rushes of his opponent, who, time after time, apparently had him cornered on the ropes, only to lose him in the instant.

Attell's work is aggravating to watch to those who usually frequent fights. He leaves the impression that he is merely goading his opponent, and waiting for an opening to swing and land a knockout.

As a matter of fact Attell has fought himself away from a swing and will never let himself deliver one.

He is nevertheless a real marvel and instead of weakening at 20 rounds it takes a distance to show his full powers.

When the enemy has exhausted himself in trying to rush Attell into a hole, when he is gasping for breath from his own exertions, when he is praying for that glove to vanish which flashes into his face from all directions tearing his skin, jarring his head, when, finally he strains his battered senses for the sound of the gong, it is then he realizes that there is something in the "dancing" policy and possible defeat, if not a knock-out, in the lightning landing of "taps."

It is possible that this may come to Terrible Terry in some moment of the contest at Fort Erie.

Twenty rounds Attell can go and still be strong. As for his weak hitting, constant dripping wears away a stone.

AUTOS MUST STOP WHEN HORSES PASS

Chauffeurs Will Fight New Measure Which So Provides.

The Automobile Club of St. Louis is preparing for a campaign of both defense and offense against the new anti-automobile bill which is to become a law in June.

It is said not only to necessitate the paying for and taking out of licenses in all counties passed through, and the printing of the different license numbers on the lamps in three-inch figures, but to enact that whenever an auto meets a horse vehicle it must come to a stand. At no time must the speed exceed nine miles an hour. Such a bill can scarcely be considered as nourishing diet for an infant sport.

AUTO NOTES

Two years ago purchasers of expensive machines in New York and Boston were buying French and German makes almost altogether. This year more high-class American machines are being bought than ever before. For average American roads the American machine is claimed to be superior to the French, though it is generally admitted that, auto for auto, the American product is not yet as perfect as the European.

Two steam touring cars had an exciting brush one evening last week from the Glen Echo Club to the city. Mr. and Mrs. Rumsey were in one, and they finished ahead of the other, containing O. L. and A. C. Halsey and O. L. Garrison. The latter continued on to the Colonial Cafe, making the 7½-mile run in 13 minutes.

Sir Thomas Lipton has what he calls an "international stable" of autos, English, French and German makers being represented. The United States finds place in the cosmopolitan gathering with an Oldsmobile. This is a machine of which there are many in St. Louis, more than 30 having been bought in the last eight weeks.

The run of 75 miles to Greenville, Ill., was made in five hours on Wednesday under favorable conditions by Jack Landers of the Preston Auto Co. The start was made in a heavy rain, which lasted throughout the trip. The roads were in bad condition. A six horsepower Northern runabout, gasoline, was used on the run.

B. B. Culver and W. L. Culver are among the recent purchasers of Winton touring cars. These are 20 horsepower gasoline machines, costing [illegible]. Other buyers of the Winton during the last week are E. L. Winchell, T. H. McKittrick and Walter McKittrick.

W. B. Preston will make an attempt to ride up the steps of the St. Nicholas Hotel during the coming week. He says he thinks he can win the wager which has been made against his doing it. A six-horse power gasoline runabout will be used.

Recent recruits to the ranks of automobile owners are William Shotten, Dr. W. W. Gardiner, J. W. Bemis, Earl O. Lucky and D. D. Lancaster. This machine is of the runabout type, costing $650. It uses gasoline and is of four horsepower.

H. S. Rumsey and J. H. Timmerman received White touring cars during the last week. This is a steam machine of 10 horsepower, but which is said to be able to develop 18 horse-power. Its cost is [illegible].

Mrs. H. S. Ramsey is said to be one of the best chauffeurs in the city. She is an absolutely fearless and cool-headed driver, having plenty of the great auto quality of "nerve."

E. L. Green, R. C. Kearns and Harris T. O'Fallon are buyers of autocars within the last few days. The autocar is a 10-horsepower tonneau, run by gasoline and costing $1750.

The July international cup races in Ireland should see the English finishing in front of our team. They have been running away from us ever since 1776.

Ten-horse power gasoline convertible runabouts have been bought by J. W. Morton, Ephron Catlin, Dwight Davis and W. L. Desnoyers. The machine costs [illegible].

Moses Rumsey and H. S. Steadman are in receipt of seven-horse power convertible cars, costing $750. This car used gasoline.

Among the recent applications for membership in the Automobile Club is that of H. J. Miller of the Vandalia.

New Head for Yale Crew.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 16.—The usual overhauling of the Yale 'varsity crew as the result of the showing made by the second crew at the Annapolis race took place this week, Capt. Cameron making several important substitutions in the shell. Daly, who rowed last year, has been dropped to the four-oared shell, and Stuyvesant Fish, Jr., has been taken on in his place. Cutlin has, for a time, also been displaced by Bailey, another sophomore. This makes the 'varsity eight as it is now rowing largely an experimental af[illegible] two of the veterans being out of the [illegible]. The rowing order, now that the [illegible] have been made, is as follows: [illegible]; No. 1, Cross; No. 2, Miller; [illegible] No. 4, Judson; No. 5, Bailey; [illegible]; bow, Waterman.

FIGHT FOR GOLF CHAMPIONSHIPS

Country Club Men Confident of Capturing the Individual Contest.

Country Club golfers are confident that one of their number will again carry off the championship of St. Louis this summer. They look to Stuart Stickney, Arthur Stickney or Ralph McKittrick to win out in the finals.

McKittrick, always a strong player, is showing exceptionally good form this season. In the Country Field Club game he defeated H. C. Gilbert 10 up.

Stuart Stickney, last year's champion, did not play in the opening game with his club, but he will be on hand when the championship tournament opens at Glen Echo June 20.

Last year his brother Arthur played brilliantly and was the runner-up in the championship tournament.

The other clubs are not counting on bringing the cup home, although they are all hopeful. The Normandie Park players now include Burt McKinnie and Bart Adams, both former champions of St. Louis.

McKinnie, however, is planning to leave St. Louis. He may depart before the championship tournament opens, and it will devolve upon Adams to do the cup-chasing for his club.

Harry Allen is the Field Club star and he may cut a figure in the running. A. C. Vickery and Jesse Carleton will try to bring the trophy to Glen Echo.

The Triple A Club has developed two new stars who will give the older stick-swingers some trouble this season. They are Champ Connor and Sim T. Price, Jr. Mr. Connor showed his mettle in the local championship tournament last year by knocking out the sensational Mr. Kirk of Philadelphia who was "touted" as the warmest proposition that ever blew unannounced upon the local links.

Last Saturday he showed that he was in good form again by playing Jesse Carleton to a standstill in the Triple A-Glen Echo match game. In the same game young Mr. Price distinguished himself by defeating B. C. Edmunds of the Glen Echo team five up. If Capt. Canter can find a few more pairs like Messrs. Connor and Price, the Triple A team will soon be hard to lose.

World's Fair Tourney for Glen Echo Club.

Edward P. Martin of Chicago, president of the Western Golf Association and vice-president of the United States Golf Association, visited Glen Echo recently as the guest of President McGrew.

Mr. Martin's visit was for the purpose of looking over the links at Normandy before passing on Col. McGrew's application for the indorsement of the associations of his plan to hold a world's championship tournament at Glen Echo in 1904.

Mr. Martin expressed himself as delightfully surprised with Glen Echo and assured Col. McGrew that his action will be favorable.

Col. McGrew expects the best golfers of Scotland and England as well as the United States to participate in this World's Fair competition.

The Tower Grove Golf Club, a woman's organization, has been admitted to membership in the St. Louis Golf Association, and its president, Mrs. Dr. W. A. Hardaway, has been appointed its representative in the association.

In the future she will attend all the meetings of the association with the five gentlemen representing the other five St. Louis golf clubs.

The Tower Grove club is in excellent condition this season. Its opening tournament about ten days ago was quite successful, and a very pleasant golfing function was held on the park links yesterday afternoon.

The feature of the afternoon was a mixed foresome. Men are barred from these links by a rule of the club, but this rule was suspended for the occasion yesterday afternoon each of the ladies brought with them an escort from one of the masculine golfing organizations. The club has about 75 members, including Mrs. Henry Koehler, Jr., Mrs. C. W. Scudder, Mrs. O. H. Greene, Miss Taussig and many other ladies of prominence.

The women's tournament for the championship of St. Louis will be held on the Tower Grove Park links Oct. 10.

Golfing in St. Louis is not confined to young men, though the greater portion of the players are not well-advanced in years. This season, however, there are a number of veteran business men indulging in the Scottish sport, among them being W. A. Stickney, C. F. Gauss and Ewing Hill.

There are other middle-aged men in St. Louis whose friends think they ought to play golf, but who decline. It is related of one of them that, when asked to join one of the clubs and chase the little ball over the green, he replied:

"I like to play golf, all right, when I'm at one of the resorts where the links are in the backyard of the hotel, but here in St. Louis they're too far away. If you get some links down on the river front, though, I'll join that club in a minute."

St. Louisans say that this gentleman's position is not well taken, and that the golfing grounds are closer to the golfers places of business in St. Louis than in any large city in the country. In Chicago, they say, the clubs are all out in the country and removed from stre and railways.

SECOND BOAT RACE IS DECLARED OFF

Naval Academy Crew Asked Postponement and No Other Date Will Do.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—The second boat race between the University of Pennsylvania and the Naval Academy crews, announced for this afternoon, did not take place, as the Naval Academy crew asked for a postponement of the race and as no satisfactory date can be arranged the race has been declared off.

The second race was arranged at the request of the academy to clear their title to the championship between the schools.

At the first race some weeks ago one of the Pennsylvania boats was swamped in the rough waters of the Severn and the midshipmen wanted to give the crew another opportunity.

Coach Ward of the Pennsylvania crew does not feel that he can spare the time from training the Junior crew for their race with Ithica for May 30 to have the race after today.

SINGLE SCULLER WILL BE SENT

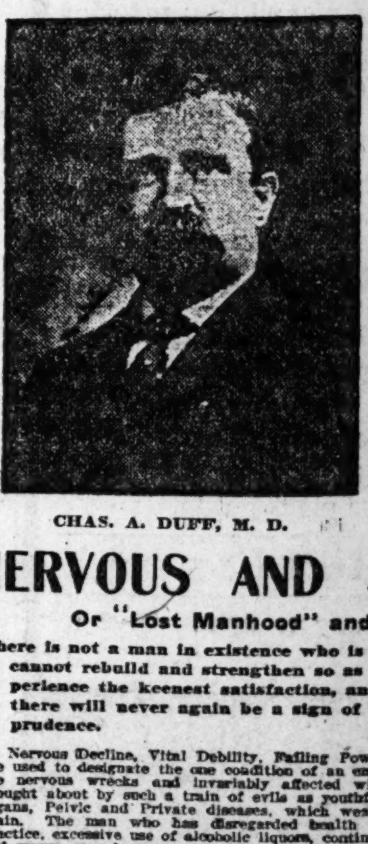
The Mound City Rowing Club will probably send a single sculler in addition to a four-oared crew to the national regatta in August. The club has several single scullers this season, any one of whom is fast enough to carry the colors well, and one will be selected from the lot after the thorough trials to be made between now and the middle of July.

The club is also putting its four-oared crews to hard work. A new four-oared shell has just been received and launched. It was built by W. H. Davy of Cambridge, Mass., who builds the shells for the university crews.

The launching of the shell last Monday was attended with ceremony, F. G. Suerig, president of the club, making an address outlining the plans for the season. The club also has a new barge.

Americans After Golf Honors.

John Reid, Jr., and T. Markee Robertson, two Americans prominently connected with intercollegiate golfing, will probably compete for the amateur championship of Great Britain this spring. The championship is to be played at Muirfield, in England, May 20, 21, 22 and 23, and the two Americans have written from Paris that they will be in Muirfield on those dates. Reid was formerly intercollegiate champion of the United States.



RELIABLE CURES BY A TRUE SPECIALIST

Dr. Duff's Pelvic Methods are your only hope for a complete cure, if you are afflicted with either BLOOD POISON, STRICTURE, VARICOCELE, HYDROCELE, NERVOUS DECLINE, PILES, RUPTURE or any affection of the Kidneys, Bladder and Prostate Gland. You are wasting money and endangering your health in treating with ordinary doctors and specialists. My systems of treatment have established their reliability by permanently curing cases that had been unsuccessfully treated by dozens of other physicians.

A SURE CURE

Is what I will give you beyond a doubt if your case is curable; if not, I will not accept your money, and promise to do anything for you. I accept only curable cases, and all my patients receive a written contract binding me to effect a permanent cure or refund money, and to insure those who deal with me against fraud I have deposited $1000 in a trust company to secure any man holding my contract and promise that I cannot fulfill.

CHAS. A. DUFF, M. D.

NERVOUS AND SEXUAL DECLINE

Or "Lost Manhood" and Its Positive Restoration.

There is not a man in existence who is troubled with Sexual Weakness that I cannot rebuild and strengthen so as to accomplish the greatest desire and experience the keenest satisfaction, and after I have cured a case of this kind there will never again be a sign of "Weakness," except brought on by imprudence.

Nervous Decline, Vital Debility, Failing Power, Lost Manhood and many other familiar terms are used to designate the one condition of an endless number of young and middle-aged men who are nervous wrecks and invariably affected with the same symptoms originating from a source brought about by such a train of evils as youthful abuse, resulting in undevelopment of the private organs, Pelvic and Private diseases, which weaken the nervous system and impair both body and brain. The man who has disregarded health by early folly and later over-indulgence in sexual practice, excessive use of alcoholic liquors, continued exposure, or even close confinement, overwork and worry, may have one or more of such detrimental symptoms as Night Emissions, Day Drains, Loss in Urine, Premature Discharge, Impotency, No Desire, Poor Memory, Nervous and Restless at night, No Physical endurance, noticed by Shortness of Breath and exhaustion during ordinary exercise, Weak Back and many other like indications of failing health and an untimely end.

There is only one course to pursue for those whose lives are being overshadowed by the penalties of nature, and this is by resorting to medical science through a skilled Pelvic specialist. The young man laboring in hope that he is not in a serious condition from his boyhood folly and neglects to have himself rescued is committing a worse deed in allowing himself to follow a path that leads to destruction. If he is still practicing the error that his weakened system cannot resist he should by all means place himself in the care of a scientific specialist who can administer a thorough course of treatment that will remove the degenerating effects that induce continuance, making the mind and body sound and healthy and the faculties complete.

My Pelvic method is a thorough and scientific course of treatment which acts at once upon the nerve forces, stopping the drains, emissions, all the bad effects of indiscretion and replacing the wornout and run-down tissues. It increases the weight with sound, healthy flesh and muscles that give strength and fill the brain and nerves with fresh vitality, building up the entire system and transforming the sufferer into a type of perfect manhood. Of the many "weaklings" who come to me with sunken eyes, weight greatly reduced from loss of flesh and muscle, presenting the appearance of a man with one foot in the grave, I find no trouble in curing them, and when they leave my care they go on their journey of life full of hopes for a bright future.

CONSULTATION FREE, CONFIDENTIAL AND INVITED.

I charge nothing for consultation, either by mail or in person, and every man suffering from any of the diseases I treat is at liberty to call or write, when he will receive courteous attention. Those living at a distance are requested to write, giving symptoms, duration and origin of their diseases, and particular pains will be taken in promptly and privately answering. Everyone who writes to me may feel assured that they will receive no mail from me except in answer to theirs, which will be personal and in a plain sealed envelope, as I positively do not send out question blanks and second-class mail matter, which characterizes the many unreliable medical institutions. My treatment is adminstered by mail with the same success I make at my office, and my charges are always so reasonable as to be within the reach of every one. Do not treat elsewhere until you have investigated my methods and terms. Office hours, 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. Sundays, 10 to 1. Address or call on

After Investigating all Known Methods We Believe There Is Nothing to Equal "Calthos"—Cures at Home.

To Prove it, Full 5 Days' Trial Treatment will be sent Free to any Needy Man—Send for it Today.

This paper is authorized to say that if any middle aged or old man who does not feel himself as capable today as when he was in his twenties, or any young man who is not as perfect as he knows he ought to be, will write in confidence to the Von Mohl Co., of Cincinnati, they will be glad to send each man who writes them a full 5 days' trial treatment of "Calthos," the great remedy for weak and nervous men, discovered by that celebrated French scientist, Prof. Jules Laborde. This is the very remedy that has cured so many thousands of men of all ages, who through errors in youth, excesses in later life and still other causes, had become weaklings of the most embarassing kind. It instantly restored to them this power which they had lost, and gave them back again the vigor, confidence and ambition of younger days, and all privately in their own home. It is the only remedy of its kind sanctioned by the French and German armies, and the Von Mohl Co. has the sole distributing rights for America.

There is nothing whatsoever behind this offer to send you a 5 days' trial treatment free. It means that and nothing more. It is no C. O. D. prescription or deposit scheme, as this concern is too large to resort to such nefarious methods. And while others are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars every year in advertising, the Von Mohl Co. puts its spare money into free trial treatments, which it sends out broadcast to all men who send their name and address and in this way they not only prove the value of Calthos, but they do mankind some good. You surely need this great discovery if you suffer from Lost Manhood, Emissions, Prematurity, Spermatorrheoa, Varicocele, Enlargement of the prostrate Gland, Lack of Virile Power, Hydrocele, Impotency; if you are bashful, timid in the company of ladies, if you lack confidence in your powers, if you are not socially as attractive as you used to be, if you are getting to be a "woman hater." Calthos will get your blood to circulating to the desired spot, your nerves to tingling with renewed ambition, your muscles enlarged with increasing power; it will stop the drains, create healthy life force, invigorate the flabby parts, and make you once again see life as you saw it in your prime, and as every vigorous man sees it throughout life. It will be a permanent cure, and accomplished privately in your own home.

You may think you have tried your level best to be cured, you may have spent money on this thing and that without good results, but until you send for the free trial treatment of Calthos and see for yourself what wonderful good it does you, you cannot say with a clear conscience that you have done your full duty to yourself. Calthos has permanently cured thousands who have tried "everything else." It will cure you if only you will be thoughtful enough to send for it. Do so today sure and they will send you free, besides the 5 days' trial treatment, many interesting illustrated books on the subject, all in plain wrapper and sealed against inspection. Do not hesitate to write as they are only too glad to do this for any suffering man and you should not rest content until you find out by actual trial if Calthos can cure you. Write today in full confidence.

SEEKS MURDERER FOR 30 YEARS

Son Pursues Slayer of His Father and at Last Finds Him.

CESARIO MANCHACA IS ARRESTED IN MEXICO

Killed John Green During an Expedition Against the Indians and Must Now Pay the Penalty.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., May 16.—After 30 years of freedom, Cesario Manchaca is in the clutches of the law, charged with a murder committed during July, 1873. He was arrested at Sabinas, Mexico, by a friend of his alleged victim, and an eyewitness to the murder, Capt. James M. Van Riper, until recently city marshal of San Antonio.

Capt. Van Riper is now here procuring evidence to present at the extradition hearing to be held at C. P. Diaz, Mexico.

Thirty years ago San Antonio was on the frontier and the inhabitants of Bexar County were much annoyed by the depredations of a band of Indians. These savages stole everything they could lay their hands on, including litle children, whom they held for ransom.

With the view of breaking up this band of marauders, a company of minute men was formed, composed of the hardy farmers and stockmen of the county. Among these were John Green and Capt. Van Riper. It was the custom of the minute men to scout three or four days before and after each full moon, this being the season usually selected by the Indians for their expeditions of pillage. In July, 1873, two little children were stolen by the Indians, and the minute men were summoned, and started in pursuit, under the leadership of John Green.

In the company was a Mexican named Cesario Manchaca. Eighteen miles northwest of San Antonio the company camped for the night, but at 9 o'clock they received word that the Indians were nearby. Green called his men to saddle and mount. As he was arranging his saddle a shot rang out, and Green fell. The others ran to him, and he said: "I'm a dead man, boys," and expired.

The others at first thought the fatal shot had been fired by an Indian, but they soon had evidence that this was not the case, for they found that Manchaca was missing. They pursued him, but he eluded them, and he was never seen again in these parts.

John Green left a son, W. F. Green, who swore a solemn oath that he would never rest until the murderer of his father was brought to justice. He made many trips to Mexico, where he felt sure Manchaca had taken refuge, but until three years ago he found no clew to Manchaca's whereabouts. Then it was learned that a Cesario Manchaca had sold a small business at Santa Rosa Musquiz, Mexico, and moved to Sbinas. An indictment was returned, all the witnesses save one were alive and the prospect of bringing Manchaca to justice seemed bright.

But an obstacle presented itself. There were two Cesario Manchacas in Sabinas and it was doubtful whether the right man could be identified. Capt. Van Riper was then city marshal here and could not go to Sabinas.

Capt. Van Riper retired from office recently and was at once commissioned to go to Sabinas and arrest Manchaca if he could be found. The captain executed his commission, being able to positively identify his man, notwithstanding the lapse of 30 years. Indeed, when confronted by Capt. Van Riper, Manchaca did not hesitate to admit his identity. But he fought extradiction on the ground that he had killed Green in self-defense. He applied to the Mexican court for a writ of habeas corpus. This made it necessary for Capt. Van Riper to procure evidence as to the crime. Manchaca is in custody at Santa Rosa, and Capt. Van Riper is here gathering the evidence.

"POLISH QUEEN" IS SEEKING DIVORCE

Says Mother Selected an Old Husband Who Has Been Most Cruel to Her.

RACINE, Wis., May 16.—Carrie Cernecki, who is suing her husband, Frank Cernecki, for divorce, charges that she was compelled to marry him by her mother, although he was 16 years older than she and that he threatened her with death three months after the ceremony.

Caroline Wolentorski, the "queen of the Poles of the Northwest," was married to the defendant in January, 1902. Some of her young Polish admirers threatened to stop the wedding because the bridegroom was the selection of the mother. Accordingly the police furnished a guard at the church and at the home all night long.

In two months' time there was trouble and the wife had her husband arrested several times on charges of assault and battery and threatening his wife. One night she fled to the home of a neighbor and the house was bombarded with bricks and stones. Her husband was arrested, but was not convicted. Then the action for divorce was started.

The defendant denies the allegations and alleges that the plaintiff left him without cause, that she went out with other men at night, attended the skating rink and did other things that a faithful helpmeet would not do. He also claims that he had made repeated efforts to prevail upon her to live with him.

MRS. FERGUSON SUED.

Daughter of Racing Woman Seeks $1500 Claimed as a Salary.

LEXINGTON, Ky., May 16.—Mrs. Bessie L. Ferguson, widow of James B. Ferguson, the starter, and ex-proprietress of Kingston stud, has arrived here from California to defend herself in a suit for $1500 filed by her daughter, Mrs. Elsie F. Chinn, wife of Phil Chinn, for services rendered, so Mrs. Chinn claims, as bookkeeper for Mrs. Ferguson when she was in possession of Kingston Stud. The suit is to be called for trial during the coming week in the Fayette County Circuit Court.

Mrs. Ferguson says she told her daughter if she had a good sale of her yearlings in the spring of 1902 she would give her $1500, but denies she ever employed Mrs. Chinn at any promised salary. The latter failed to get the $1500, as Mrs. Ferguson's sale last year resulted disastrously, and after three colts had been sold for a song the sale was declared off.

Mrs. Ferguson has been spending the winter at San Francisco with her son, Garnet Ferguson. She says the latter's string of 2-year-olds are high-class youngsters, especially Bearcatcher, which looks like a sensational colt. Mr. Ferguson has refused several good offers for [illegible] youngster, but he has him well enga[illegible] future stakes, and has no desire [illegible] him at any figure. FIGHTING JUDGE REMOVED.

RICHMOND, Va., May 16.—Final action in the case of Judge Clarence J. Campbell of Amherst county, who horsewhipped Rev. Dr. Crawford, at the time head of the state anti-liquor league, has been taken so far as the general assembly is concerned. The house of delegates agreed to the Senate amendments to the resolution removing the judge from the bench. The vote was 56 to 12.

One of the amendments requires that the causes of removal be spread on the journal of the House. The other makes it appear that Judge Campbell's attack on Dr. Crawford was not premeditated.

DRESSED AS A BEGGAR

OMAHA, Neb., May 16.—A few days ago the pity of many people passing a certain prominent street corner in Lincoln was excited by an old beggar woman playing a zither and singing hymns. Nickels, dimes, quarters and even dollars were dropped generously into the battered tin cup that she held in her lap. When night came she had a snug sum of money to take to her lodgings. The next day passers-by looked for the old woman again, but she did not appear. Nobody knew where she had come from or whither she had gone.

It came to light at a meeting of the Ladies' Society of All Souls Episcopal Church today that the old beggar woman was none other than Mrs. W. C. Frampton, an active member, and one of the best-konwn society ladies of the city.

Mrs. Frampton explained to her co-workers that she had promised to raise a certain sum of money for the society, and that she had adopted this novel method of doing it. When her story was told the other ladies applauded.

Many of her contributors were members of the aid society and her most intimate friends, who had failed to recognize her, so skillfully had she disguised herself.

THE SKIN LIKE A SPONGE

Through the millions of little mouths, or pores, the skin absorbs from the surrounding atmosphere innumerable poisons, and takes into the blood and system the virus of the most deadly diseases. It is as porous as a sponge, and is supplied with a perfect network of tiny blood vessels that carry to the great current of the blood the impurities and poisons that are absorbed by the skin, and diseases thus contracted become constitutional, deep-seated and as dangerous as those brought on in other ways.

POISON OAK, IVY and other noxious wild plants percolate through the skin like water through a sponge, and are taken up by the blood, where they linger on for years, breaking out again each season or until the poison has been antidoted and driven from the blood.

BARBER'S ITCH breaks out in yellow pustules and red, angry looking bumps, sometimes covering the entire bearded portion of the face, causing the greatest pain and annoyance, and itching and burning almost incessantly.

DYE POISONING is a common occurrence among the employes of dye houses, and from wearing under-clothing and hosiery colored with cheap dye stuffs which soak through the skin, poison the blood and spread throughout the system, causing boils and sores and great injury to health.

BLOOD POISON, the most loathsome of all human maladies, is often contracted through a friendly hand shake or handling the clothing or some other article used by one afflicted with this disease. The deadly virus finds its way into the blood through the skin, and the body is soon covered with deep and offensive ulcers and sores, red eruptions and blotches.

WORKERS IN LEAD, BRASS AND OTHER METALS—The use of chemicals and acids in the polishing of brass and other metals is attended sometimes with fearful consequences; the acids entering through the pores of the skin are taken into the general circulation, and frightful sores break out, and the general health and system are affected by these dangerous chemicals. The air is filled with invisible atoms and dust in foundries and factories that settle upon the skin and produce irritating eruptions which harrass and torture by their intense burning, followed by painful boils and obstinate sores.

The diseases that enter the blood and system through the skin are as real, deep-seated and dangerous as those brought on by internal causes, and require the same thorough and radical treatment. You cannot reach them with washes, salves, soaps or other external remedies. The poison must be antidoted or counteracted and the blood purified before the sores and eruptions disappear, and S. S. S. cures by ridding the blood and system of the original poison, and not an atom or taint is left to re-ferment and bring on a fresh outbreak.

POISONED BY ACID.

While engaged in cleaning a piece of brass machinery, for which a powerful acid was used, my blood, became poisoned, and before long I was one mass of sores. I tried everything that the best physicians prescribed, all to no purpose, and it is difficult to describe the suffering I had to endure. A friend suggested that I try S. S. S. and I improved with the first bottle and in a few months I was entirely cured, and there was not a sore on my body, although the disease left scars equal to a case of smallpox.

GEORGE A. DAVIS, Fairfield, Ark.

POISON OAK AND ITS EFFECTS.

Gentlemen:—Over fifteen years ago I was poisoned with Poison Oak. I tried remedy after remedy without getting relief. Sores broke out over my body and on my tongue, affecting the lining of my mouth. Finally about a year ago my doctor told me to try S. S. S., which I did. After taking three bottles all the sores disappeared, and I have not been bothered since,

Yours truly,

RUPTURE

Can now be positively and painlessly

CURED

The old idea that rupture cannot be cured except through an operation is exploded, and has been shown erroneous. We live now in an age of progress, and the science and practice of medicine and surgery have been influenced by the wave of progress as much as every other branch of science. Discoveries made within the last decade have entirely upset beliefs and theories which were considered positive 50 or 100 years ago. The relations existing between the medical profession and the public have also changed considerably. It used to be considered as unprofessional and against the code of ethics for a physician to make any promise to his patients as to what he could do for them, but there has been a vast change in this respect. Why should a professional man not advertise and inform the public what he can do if he has a positive remedy and cure for an ailment? He would wrong himself and the public by so doing. I believe in using the columns of the daily press—of papers of high standing—and in this way I am enabled to talk to a great number of intelligent people, a method I have always found effective.

I claim and have proven in thousands of cases that I do cure and I would like to meet you personally and convince you of my capability. You take no risk, as I expect has been perfected to your entire satisfaction. My method is free from pain or danger, and does not detain you from your occupation. If you prefer you may consult me at my residence, 4443 Morgan street, or at my downtown offices. I have lately published a valuable pamphlet on Rupture, which will be sent to all sufferers from this trouble who apply for it. I have cured over 7000 patients.

RUPTURE

AL" ADAMS GOES TO THE HOSPITAL

Policy King, Likely to Die at Any Moment, Will Be Sent to Dannemora.

OSSINING, N. Y., May 16.—Superintendent of Prisons Collins has decided to remove "Al" Adams, the former policy king, now serving a sentence in Sing Sing, to the state hospital at Dannemora. The hospital is connected with Clinton prison and all convicts who are seriously ill are sent there.

Dr. Irvine, physician of Sing Sing prison, after examining Adams on his arrival at the prison, reported that he was suffering from diabetes and consumption of the throat and that his condition was such that he might have a stroke of paralysis at any time. Adams was assigned to the mat manufacturing shop, but he has not been able to do any hard work.

Odd jobs have been given to Adams to occupy his mind and keep him from brooding over his trouble. The date for his removal to the state hospital has not been fixed, but he will probably be taken away within a very few days.

Miller, of 520 per cent syndicate fame, is also to be removed to the state hospital. He has had several hemorrhages and is confined to his bed most of the time. He is not now in condition to be moved, but will be taken to Dannemora as soon as it is thought he can stand the journey.

Happiness comes to our lot in separate detached bits, and those of us who are wise will content ourselves with the broken fragments. HARREDEN.

PREACHER KILLED BY TRAMP

Then a Posse Attacked the House in Which Tramp Was and Killed Him.

GAINSVILLE, Tex., May 16.—Rev. J. W. Powers was murdered near Burns City by a Mexican tramp, who afterward barricaded himself in a house and held a posse at bay until he was shot to death.

Mr. Powers saw the Mexican enter the house of a neighbor who was away from home and he went with a shotgun to drive the inruder away. When he opened the door the Mexican dealt him a blow with an ax and continued to strike until the preacher was dead.

The Mexican then barricaded himself in the house and held at bay a large posse. After several volleys had been fired at the house a rush was made and the door was broken in. The Mexican was found dead with five bullet holes in his body.

A letter addressed to Antonio Ramos was found on his body.

Happy Homes

One of the essentials of the happy homes of to-day is a fund of information as to right living and the best methods of promoting health and happiness. With proper knowledge, each hour of recreation, of enjoyment and of effort may be made to contribute to that end and are of not less value than the using of the most wholesome foods and the selecting of the best medicinal agents when needed. With the well-informed, medicinal agents are used only when nature needs assistance and while the importance of cleansing the system effectually, when bilious or constipated, has long been known, yet until within recent years it was necessary to resort to oils, salts, extracts of roots, barks and other cathartics which were found to be objectionable and to call for constantly increased quantities.

Then physicians having learned that the most excellent laxative and carminative principles were to be found in certain plants, principally in the leaves, the California Fig Syrup Co. discovered a method of obtaining such principles in their purest condition and of presenting them with pleasant and refreshing liquids in the form most acceptable to the system and the remedy became known as—Syrup of Figs—as figs were used, with the plants, in making it, because of their agreeable taste.

This excellent remedy is now rapidly coming into universal use as the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually without disturbing the natural functions and without unpleasant after effects and its use may be discontinued when it is no longer required.

All who would enjoy good health and its blessings should remember that it is the one remedy which physicians and parents well-informed approve and recommend and use and which they and their little ones alike enjoy, because of its pleasant flavor, its gentle action and its beneficial effects.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all reliable druggists, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, in original packages only, having the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs—and the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.

This alone ould gain for Dr. Moore the everlasting atitude of St. Louisans and everyone within reach of him, yet Dr. Moore has en performing wonderful cures right here n St. Louis for a number of years which as given him more than a national reputation. He has had 20 years' experience nd patients have visited him from more han 20 different states. He was appointed y both Governors Stephens and Dockery the position of oculist to the Missouri tate Institution for the Blind, the highest nor which can be conferred upon any ulist by the great state of Missouri.

His Great Discovery.

Dr. Moore's cure for trachoma, or granulated sore eyes, which is pronounced incurable by the medical profession, is one of the greatest discoveries in modern medicine. The United States government officials will not permit persons afflicted with this disease to enter this country. Dr. Moore can show patients who were blind four weeks ago who can now read a newspaper. This is rapidly making him worldwide fame.

Cross Eyes Straightened.

Dr. Moore's new painless method of straightening cross eyes has created wonder and astonishment. He has straightened more than three thousand cases.

A Few of His Patients.

A[illegible] the many prominent people under Dr. [illegible]re's treatment are the following: Riem[illegible] McCartney, 200 South Twenty-secon[illegible]et, St. Louis, lost his sight ten years [illegible] from atrophy of the optic nerve, [illegible]ays: "Dr. Moore improved my sight [illegible] sand per cent in one month, and m[illegible] is now almost completely restored. Ten of the most prominent oculists of St. Louis and other cities failed to help him. Dr. Moore cured his eyes and restored his sight in a short time without the use of the knife or caustics.

Leonard Schoepp, a prominent merchant of Mascoutah, Ill., suffered from trachoma or granulated sore eyes and ulcers on his eyeballs. His case was pronounced hopeless. Dr. Moore has cured his eyes and restored his sight. Hundreds of similar cases can be given.

His Elegant Offices.

Dr. Moore not only has the largest practice of any oculist in St. Louis, but probably no other oculist in the United States treats as many patients daily as he does, and everyone who calls sees Dr. Moore personally.

His elegant offices now comprise Suites 205 and 206, Odd Fellows' building, corner Ninth and Olive streets, [illegible]te the post-office, St. Louis. He wil[illegible] free consultation and his professio[illegible]inion to all who call or write

HANGED BY CROWD SUES FOR $25,000

CHARLES HERBERT WAS CALLED A FIREBUG

Matawan Men Formed a Vigilance Committee—Former State Senator One Defendant in Case.

FREEHOLD, N. J., May 16.—Dragged at midnight from his couch to a cowbarn; there surrounded by angry men, who cried, "Firebug. Lynch him!" swung up by his neck to a rafter, a plough line serving as a hangman's rope, and saved from death only by the fact that some of the mob feared lynching was a step too far in the punishment of an incendiary, Charles Herbert believes he was maltreated grossly. So he is suing for $25,000.

The case came up today before Justice Fort. Several men were defendants, one of them Henry S. Terhune, former state senator.

The alleged attack upon Herbert was the outgrowth of a series of fires in Matawan. These were plainly incendiary, and finally a vigilance committee was formed among the town's leading citizens. Somehow Herbert came under suspicion. There was a descent upon his house. In the effort of the vigilance committee to force him to confess, he says, recourse was had to hanging him.

About two years ago a series of fires in Matawan convinced residents that a firebug was at work. Bissell's block was found ablaze three separate times. On the night of February 24, 1901, the block finally was burned. Herbert's mother occupied rooms in the block. It was said one of the fires started in her rooms. That never was proved. Nevertheless, her son came under suspicion. The men of Matawan formed a committee of "regulators" in old western fashion. Then came the attack on the suspected man. He told the story of that night when he took the witness stand today.

"On the night of the big fire," said he, "I was asleep and undressed on a couch in my home, a block and a half from the fire. The fire did not awaken me. I knew nothing about it until an hour later, when Terhune came in and shook me. He told me he had something for me to do. I dressed and accompanied him to the kitchen of his father's house. There was a talk there and Terhune tried to get me to admit I knew something about the fires. He urged me to confess and warned me there was a mob waiting for me."

Herbert said he continued to deny he was guilty. He was taken to the cow shed. A crowd was there. He said Henry S. and John Terhune, "Gus" Holmes and Matthew Shoek took a prominent part in what followed.

"Senator Terhune,' said the witness, "asked Holmes if he had a rope. Holmes said he had not, but he had a pair of blow lines that would answer. The lines were brought into the shed and one end was tied about my neck while the other was passed over a beam above.

"I was raised until my toes just touced the floor. My hat fell off. I asked for it. John Terhune said, 'You'll never need it again.'"

Herbert testified the men lowered him after a brief time. He continued to protest his innocense. Then he was dealt with more severely. The lines were drawn tight and he was raised until his feet were clear of the floor.

"I would have strangled," said he, "only my hands had not been tied and I managed to reach up and seize the rope. In that way I eased the strain on my neck."

While he was in this position, he said, he heard some of the party protest he had been tortured enough and the affair was going too far. Their counsel prevailed. He was lowered and taken to the lockup. On the way he was assailed by a mob and one of his ribs was broken by a kick.

LAST EFFORT TO SAVE MURDERER

Prominent Men to Plead the Cause of William Klein Before Governor.

LINCOLN, Neb., May 16.—The friends of William Rhea, condemned for murder and sentenced to be hanged July 15, will make a last effort to save him from the gallows within the next few days, when Mayor George Adams of Lincoln and Judge George Loomis of Fremont, two of the most prominent jurists of the state, will appear befofe Gov. Mickey to plead for clemency in behalf of their youthful client.

The friends of Rhea have asked the governor to accord the attorneys a hearing and he has consented to do so, but there is little prospect that the governor's mind will be changed.

It is a strange coincidence that Judge George Loomis, who is to make the last plea for the life of the condemned man and who has fought his case through the courts for him, is the author of the bill which passed at the 1901 session of the legislature providing that all executions of the death sentence should take place within the confines of the penitentiary, and that his client is the first man sentenced to death under the new law.

William Rhea is a man of youthful appearance and apparent good education. His true name is William Klein, and he comes of a well-to-do and respected family of the state of Indiana.

It was entirely owing to the prominence of his connections in the East that Senator Beveridge interfered last summer and got Gov. Savage to grant a stay of execution of the death sentence. Since that time his friends have used every effort to get his sentence commuted to life imprisonment or to a 25-year sentence at hard labor.

William Rhea was convicted of the murder of Hermann Zahn, a Dodge County saloon keeper, in the spring of 1901.

Rhea and two others, it was alleged at the time, entered the saloon and while attempting to rob the place killed Zahn. Rhea is said to have kicked the murdered man as he lay upon the floor and the crime was a particularly brutal one. Rhea and his companions were captured after a hard chase.

The other two got sentences for burglary, but Rhea was convicted of murder and sentenced to be hanged. While at the penitentiary he has at different times been employed in the broom factory and about the yard with the other convic[illegible], but his ferocious temper and uncon[illegible]llable desire to kill, when the fury [illegible] upon him, resulted in his being [illegible] in solitary confinement sever[illegible] ago, it being feared that he [illegible] some of the guards or other [illegible]th the instruments [illegible] use in the broom

Sir Knight 4.00 Shoe

Registered Trade Mark.

When you put on the "Sir Knight" shoe, you can experience solid comfort in about two minutes—but it takes months to prove its wearing qualities.

It is a different shoe, a much better shoe than has ever before been sold for $4.00. It is the outcome of the careful experimentation of a custom shoe maker, who charged from $10.00 to $14.00 for this same shoe. It was never made in large quantities until the Clover Brand Shoe factories put a high-priced expert in charge of bench shoe makers, who make nothing but the "Sir Knight."

Briefly, the points of superiority in the "Sir Knight" are:

Style: Each last—and there are twelve different ones—is fashioned on lines of grace and ease, from anatomically correct models. There is a certain distinction and tone to the "Sir Knight," found only in the best Custom Made Shoes, and not always in them.

Comfort: It is easy enough to make a good-looking shoe—art comes in making a comfortable shoe with style. The 26 bones and 32 muscles in each foot are taken into account in making "Sir Knight" lasts. The shoe conforms without losing its shape. It is the most comfortable shoe possible to make.

Wear: The "Sir Knight" will wear as long as its prototype—the high-priced Custom Shoe. Each hide is inspected by six experts before it is turned over to the cutters. The best Calf, Velour and Vici, soles of Oak, tanned by the old-fashioned process, and the strongest linings are used exclusively in the "Sir Knight."

The shoe shown below is the Tournament Toe. There are eleven other toes, and the shoes are made in all leathers. Widths, AA to E; and all sizes. Your size and last is among them.

Chas. Hoyt, Farnsworth, Hoyt & Co., Boston, Mass., says: "I have worn these shoes for a long time, and am frank to say that they are exceedingly comfortable, and were so from the moment I put them on my feet."

Ask your Shoe Dealer for them.

If he does not carry "Sir Knight," write us and we will see that you get them. Will send you free, on application, a beautiful book of "Sir Knight" styles.

FRANCES MARIE KNOWLTON
AGE 24 MONTHS

that the growth of the hair can be influenced for the better.

Even when absolutely healthy to begin with, it can be made to grow much faster and longer than it does normally.

The above photographs of Miss Frances Marie Knowlton show what care, persistence and a good hair invigorating tonic will do in the way of producing hair. This little girl has had Danderine applied to her hair and scalp regularly ever since she was three months of age, with the result that she now has the longest and most beautiful head of hair ever possessed by a child of her age. Frances Marie is the daughter of Dr. E. W. Knowlton, one of the proprietors of Danderine. The doctor says that her hair is growing much faster than she is, and he is sure it will be long enough to touch the floor when she stands erect by the time she is four years old.

IT ASTONISHES EVERYBODY.

Miss Ella C. Schroder who has the most aristocratic patronage of any one of her profession, briefly describes her wonderful success with this great Hair Tonic in the following letter:

Chicago, June 20, 1901

THE KNOWLTON DANDERINE CO., 154 Lake St., Chicago.

Gentlemen:—It is with pleasure that I give you testimonial as to the merits of DANDERINE which I am using every day in my practice. I have not had a case where DANDERINE has failed to cure dandruff and falling hair and to start a luxurious growth, even under the most trying conditions. In some cases of long standing, results have been perfectly astonishing to both my patients and myself. I have ever a hundred persons whom I am treating regularly, and there is not one but who is enthusiastic over the wonderful work of DANDERINE. At the Chicago Beach Hotel, where I spend a great deal of time I have a large number of clients who are using DANDERINE regularly, with the most delightful results. From my experience with DANDERINE, in several hundred cases, I feel that I cannot recommend it too highly.

With sincere wishes for your unbounded success, I remain, Yours respectfully,

Ella C. Schroder

Hair Dresser and Specialist, 496 E. 47th St., Chicago

Danderine does the work; that is the reason why there is MORE OF IT USED THAN ALL OTHER HAIR TONICS COMBINED.

FREE DANDERINE is absorbed most eagerly by the scalp, and its properties are so invigorating and strengthening that it makes the hair grow unusually thick and long. When applied to the scalp it is just as sure to produce an abundance of long, glossy hair as a fertile soil is to produce vegetation. It is working wonders everywhere. We guarantee that one twenty-five cent bottle of it will do the hair more good than a gallon of any other hair tonic ever made. Be sure you get the genuine, made only by The Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, Ill., 25c. 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. All druggists keep Danderine or will order it for you if you ask them. To show how quickly Danderine acts we will send a large sample free by return mail to anyone who sends this advertisement to the Knowlton Danderine Co., Chicago, with their name and address and 10 cents in silver or stamps to pay postage.

COLONIAL FOLK BY THE MILLION

500,000,000 Persons Governed by Foreigners Who Control by Force.

AFRICA, OCEANICA AND SOUTHERN ASIA EXAMPLES

British Colonists Form by Far the Largest Part of Those So Governed From Without.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The area, population, commerce and methods of government of the colonies of the world are discussed in detail by a monograph just issued by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics, entitled Colonial Administration, 1800-1908.

It shows that the colonies, so-called, of the world, including in this term all territory not contiguous to the country by whose government it is controlled, occupy two-fifths of the land surface of the globe and contain one-third of the world's population, or about 500,000,000 people. Of this colonial population of 500,000,000 only three small groups, numbering less than 15,000,000 population, or three per cent of the whole, are composed in any considerable degree of the people of the governing country or their descendants.

The principal colonies composed of people from the governing country, or their descendants, are the English colonies of British North America, Australia and South Africa. The remaining 485,000,000 people, governed by the countries not contiguous to that which they occupy, are of different stock from that of the governing country, and less than one per cent of their population is of the nationality which administers the government.

Practically all of Africa, Oceania and southern Asia are governed by countries not contiguous to the territory in question. All of the governing countries are located in the temperate zone and practically all of the territory governed as colonies is, with the exception of Canada, southern Australia and New Zealand, tropical or subtropical.

The 485,000,000 people of stock different from that of the governing country and located in the tropics are divided into three great groups—East Indian, West Indian and Africa. The East Indian, or Oriental group includes the British colonies of India, Ceylon, the Malayan Peninsula, Fiji and Borneo, the Dutch colonies of Java and Sumatra and the French colony of Indo-China, all located comparatively near to the Philippines and having a population, climate and other conditions somewhat similar to those of the Philippines.

The second group, the West Indian, includes colonies governed by the British, French, Dutch and Danish governments. The third group, Africa and adjacent islands, includes territory governed by Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Portgual and Belgium.

The population of the British colonies is in round numbers 350,000,000; that of the French colonies 56,000,000; Netherlands' colonies, 35,000,000; Belgian colonies, 30,000,000; German colonies, 15,000,000; Portuguese colonies, 9,000,000, and Spanish colonies, 135,000, while the non-contiguous territory governed by the United States has a population of about 10,000,000. Of the population of 350,000,000 thus governed by Great Britain, nearly 300,000,000 are in the East Indian group, 35,000,000 in Africa, and less than 3,000,000 in the West Indies. Of the Dutch colonies, 35,000,000 are in the East Indian group and 50,000 in the West Indies. Of the French colonies, about 25,000,000 are in the East Indian group, 25,000,000 in Africa and 300,000 in the West Indies.

The report shows that the commerce of the colonies amounts to about $3,000,000,000, of which about one-half is imports, and a large proportion drawn from the governing country; while, in turn, the colonies supply a large proportion of the tropical and subtropical products required by the countries which administer their government.

On the question of the government of colonies, to which the study is especially devoid, the report shows that in the colonies composed of people of the governing country or their descendants the administration of government is left almost exclusively to the people of the colonies themselves; in the colonies whose population is chiefly of a race, customs and climatic conditions differing from those of the home country the governor and other executive officers are usually appointed by the home government, and these, with the aid of natives (usually in the form of a legislative body, one branch of which is elected by the people), frame the laws and regulations, which are administered by the officers appointed by the home government.

VIRGINIA VARSITY TO HAVE A HEAD

Radical Innovation to Be Introduced Into the Old Dominion Institutions.

RICHMOND, Va., May 16.—The University of Virginia is at last to undergo a radical change and have a president at the head of its faculty. The board of visitors, elected by the state legislature, will meet at the university June 13 and elect a president with powers and duties which belong to the executive heads of the other leading American universities.

For years this move has been agitated, but hitherto always defeated. The Virginia legislature, however, has voted to allow the election and given the power into the hands of the board of visitors. This action on the part of the state was necessary, since the University of Virginia is a state institution and receives annually from the state $50,000. In return for this sum any citizen of Virginia may enjoy an academic education in the university free of charge.

The need of an executive head and centralized power has become imperative to the university. At present each member of the faculty is an independent factor. Each professor arranges his own particular course in a large measure to suit himself.

Many have added so much to their courses that the student who is ambitious to take a degree must study day and night, and a great many find it impossible to gain the prize without "corking" at least once; that is, dropping back a year and finishing with the next lower class. It is hoped a president will effect improvement in the work apportioned the students.

The University of Virginia is not largely endowed, and, though the graduates have been generous in their gifts there has been no officer in the university who could give a large share of his time to stir up the enthusiasm of the graduates, as do the presidents of other universities, by traveling throughout the country to attend thee reunions of the alumni associations. To the lack of a president is attributed the fact that the University of Virginia has not kept pace in worldly goods with other and smaller universities.

Jefferson, the great Democrat, was the patron saint of the University of Virginia. He it was who laid out the plans for the university buildings, who advocated a democratic faculty in which each member should have an equal voice, and who inaugurated the honor system among the students in examination. He was practically president of the university.

Convulsed With Grief the Widow of the Assassinated Man, the Last Victim of the Hargis-Cockrill-Marcum Feud Tells of Her Heart-Breaking Hours and Days of Suspense.

From a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Ky., May 16.—"Bloody Breathitt" County's Hargis-Cockrill-Marcum feud is one of the most pathetic, the most dramatic chapters of Kentucky history now told for the first time by Mrs. J. B. Marcum, widow of the last victim.

For years she and her husband made a special study of the feud and no one is better qualified to describe it. Her narrative was often interrupted with convulsions of grief and when after a four-hour recital she concluded, she said she would never repeat the account except in court or as an inspiration to her sons if the law fails to punish her husband's assassin.

These feudists are not ignorant mountaineers. Four scions of leading Kentucky families lie in newly made graves and the blades of the bluegrass that grows above them are not more numerous than the vows taken to avenge their deaths. One hundred men have dipped their handkerchiefs in blood and sworn anew a bloody oath.

The causes which led up to the deaths of the four men are so germane to each other that an understanding of all is necessary to a comprehension of any one of the homicides.

Sin Lurks in Peaceful Valley.

The stranger coming to Jackson might fancy he had arrived in Altruria. The scene is pastorial. The little town is so devoid of noise that it seems to be a veritable Peaceful Valley. Surrounded by the green Kentucky hills Jackson lies on undulating ground. The business houses and a few residences are on a small hill. Most of the dwellings are on the flats near the river.

This stream is full of big bass and before the recent killings many fishermen came here each summer. The river skirts the town. The one bridge is private property and a penny toll is exacted from each one who passes over it.

Pretty women and children are seen in almost every doorway. Flowers bloom in the front yards and the church spires are the first objects one sees from the railroad. Jackson has no open saloons, but illicit liquor shops called "blind tigers" abound. In them moonshine and vile "boughten" whisky are dispensed. The effect of this combination is often fatal, but not to the person who drinks it unless he is dilatory in handling his gun.

The courthouse, the most dangerous spot in all Jackson, is not a pretentious structure. It is in the center of the town and is one of the few brick buildings.

Amid such scenes as this Mrs. Marcum, surrounded by her orphan children, told the story of the feud. It seemed more like an extract from a historical novel than a series of modern events happening within the pale of civilization in one of the oldest states in the union. The environment was so incongruous with her accounts of conspiracies, assassinations and hair-breadth escapes it was difficult to realize she was not scaring her children into obedience by tales of bogie men.

Darness Means Added Terror.

The actors in Breathitt County's vendettas are real, if incomprehensible. Appearances here are deceptive. Strangers may call the town monotonous. For the majority of citizens there is daily excitement.

The coming of darkness is an event fraught with solemnity. Each departure of the head of the househald is an occurrence watched by the entire family, who assemble to bid him good-by.

Peril makes affection strong. Scenes common everywhere during the civil war have never become obsolete in Jackson. More Breathitt County citizens have met violent deaths during the past year and a half than during the entire civil war.

The wife watches her husband until he disappears on his way to his place of business and if he is late in returning she is wild with anxiety. Men relatives kiss each other on the lips whenever they part. Jackson is full of husbands and wives who are sweethearts yet. Divorce is most uncommon, not one case having been filed in Breathitt County during the past year. Domestic scenes are common in the daytime, but after nightfall the blinds are closely drawn and few lamps are lighted. No one is ever seen through the windows and only women and children are in the front yards.

Crickets chirped and whippoorwills gave forth their doleful call in the middle of the afternoon. All her children, except the babe in her arms, listened attentively to every word. Her son's cheeks were flushed, his fists were clenched and his lips closed tight as his mother described the cowardly act by which he was made an orphan.

Life for a Life Is the Maxim.

If the law fails to this boy is left the heritage to make the assassin atone.

A life for a life is still a maxim in practice in Breathitt County. The life of the assassin is preferable, but if that cannot be had the life of his nearest male relative will suffice.

Mrs. Marcum is a comely matron, 35 years of age. She spoke slowly and was most painstaking in detail. She told how her husband's life had often depended upon the sagacity and courage of his children and looked at them proudly as she described how each one of the three older children had at one time or another circumvented the plans of assassins.

Imogine Marcum, 17 years old, on a dark night, when sleet was falling, went from their home to his office to tell him not to come home that night. Men who were afraid to go to Marcum's office made their way to the house after nightfall and told of plots to kill him.

Nellie Marcum, aged 11, has often done duty as sentinel. With a shotgun by her side, this child kept a tireless vigil during the night while the others slept. Until Marcum's death there had been no time for two years that all members of the family had been asleep at the same time. Some one was always on guard.

Even the babe in arms had been instrumental in saving its father's life. For six weeks when assassins were lying in wait for him he carried the child back and forth and the murderers did not shoot. They do not kill women and children, except accidentally, but they make women widows and children orphans.

There is no record of the homicides of Breathitt County.

Victims are buried without the formality [illegible] an inquest, for there is no coroner. That official recently resigned to accept another position. Magistrates have power to hold inquests, but they never do so.

The assassin leaves the body lying in the street. Relatives hurry the funeral arrangements, and, after taking an oath to [illegible] the killing, the body is buried with scant ceremony.

No other spot in the United States is so frau[illegible] with [illegible] to its inhabitants. The worst points on the frontier are peaceful compared with Breathitt County. The Coeur d'Alenes of Idaho during the miners' strike were not productive of nearly so many fatalities.

Mrs. Marcum herself tells in the following words how for years her husband managed to evade persons who desired to kill him:

By MRS. J. B. MARCUM.

The deaths of Marshal James Cockrill, Ben Hargis, Dr. J. B. Cox and Attorney J. B. Marcum have all been caused by the same feud. The circumstances leading up to them are so similar that I shall begin with a brief recapitulation of the four killings.

My husband, Attorney James B. Marcum, was one of the brightest attorneys in the State of Kentucky. He invariably had the opportunity to become engaged on one side or the other of every case tried in this county. He was a believer in justice and never forgot his oath to uphold the law. It is true he was a nephew of Capt. Bill Strong, who fought on the side of the federals during the civil war, and who was at the head of a mighty clan of feudists after the war was ended. Capt. Bill Strong was a half-Indian. Mr. Marcum early learned how unjust and cruel these feuds are and determined to avoid them.

Marcum Prophesied His Assassination.

Although he did not know personal fear, he preferred to retreat rather than stain his hands with human blood. When we insisted upon his carrying a weapon he said:

"Of what use is it to give my enemies the satisfaction of showing that a gun was found on me. They will say I was not quick enough to draw, when as a matter of fact I would not draw it at all. The reason is this: My assassin will never give me a chance of seeing him. He is the only person I would shoot and I shall never get a chance to shoot at him. When he kills me I shall be killed while I am looking the other way."

This prediction was wonderfully accurate. While he was standing on the courthouse steps at 8:15 Monday morning, May 4, the assassin sneaked up behind and while Mr. Marcum was watching Tom White, whom he feared, the murderer held his pistol within two feet of my husband's head and fired. Then after Deputy Sheriff Ewen, who was standing beside my husband had, sought shelter the assassin fired another shot into Mr. Marcum's head as he lay on the sidewalk. Either wound would have been fatal.

Ewen and a number of others could not help seeing and identifying the assassin. Before the body had been removed my niece, Nora Patrick, dipped her handkerchief in my husband's blood, saying: "The Hargises shall not gloat over a Marcum. The assassin shall pay for this." The report that I also did the same thing is erroneous.

The killing preceding this was last June when Dr. J. B. Cox was wantonly murdered. That crime was as cruel and unnecessary as the murder of my husband.

Dr. Cox was about 38 years of age and the most skillful physician in Breathitt County. He was the guardian and a special friend of the Cockrill boys, one of whom killed Ben Hargis. Dr. Cox, just before he left his office, said to a friend:

Assasisnation of Dr Cox.

"I don't like the looks of things tonight. I feel as if some one was to be killed, I do not know that it will not be I."

Ten minutes afterward he knew. While he was on his way to attend a patient he was riddled with buckshot before he had gone 50 yards from his office.

The assassin fired the first barrel into his back and, then bending over him, discharged the contents of the other barrel into his body. Twenty-four buckshot were found in his body. No one was arrested.

Dr. Cox was buried without any inquest and the matter allowed to drop. Many say Curtis Jett killed him.

A month prior to Dr. Cox's death Ben Hargis, a young man who was the son of County Judge James Hargis, sent for Tom Cockrill to come to a "blind tiger." Hargis promised to kill Cockrill if he went. When the two men met they began firing. Ben Hargis was killed and Tom Cockrill wounded in the arm. Young Hargis died on the floor of the "blind tiger." Tom Cockrill took a change of venue and was acquitted, but he has never returned to Jackson.

April, 1902, Town Marshal James Cockrill was killed. A short time prior to his death he and Curtis Jett met in the dining room of the Arlington Hotel and began shooting at each other, but neither was wounded.

The only grievance anyone had against James Hargis grew out of an affair that took place in my husband's office. Mr. Marcum was taking some testimony in a contested election case. His former law partner, Judge Pollard, and County Judge Hargis were on opposing sides. During the proceedings a dispute arose. Afterward warrants were issued by the police magistrate for Mr. Marcum and Judge Hargis. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

Mr. Marcum paid his fine, but Judge Hargis felt his dignity was outraged and that a county judge should not be subject to fine by an inferior judge. He finally paid the fine, however, but Marshal James Cockrill was compelled to take him into custody before he did so.

Hargis never forgave Cockrill. If the assassination of Cockrill had been punished or Dr. Cox's murder had been avenged, I feel certain my husband would not have been killed. He was outspoken in his denunciations of these crimes and deplored the failure of justice.

Actions of this kind did much to antagonize those who were already his enemies. Mr. Marcum was a Republican and when he took up the contested election cases he knew he took his own life in his hands, but he felt it to be his duty.

First Plot to Kill Marcum.

His many escapes and his clear conscience made him less sensible to the danger of being killed than he should have been. He was preparing to leave Jackson, however, and if he had lived until fall we would have left the place forever. My husband drew $2000 a year a scounsel for corporations and some coal lands he owned were just becoming valuable. He felt he could not abandon these at this time.

Again peaceable as he was his proud nature could not brook the thought that the last of the Marcums should be driven into exile by their hereditary enemies.

We came to Jackson 17 years ago and had borrowed $50 to pay our way here. My husband acquired a good practice almost immediately. His success excited jealousy and he always championed the cause of right. Consequently he made a number of enemies. We became more or less accustomed to danger, but about two years ago my husband was engaged by Moses Feltner to defend him for having killed Stephen Fields.

Feltner had all along associated with my husband's enemies, but he had confidence in Mr. Marcum' ability to clear him hence he chose him for his lawyer. Meanwhile Feltner was released on $2000 bail.

After he had employed my husband Feltner one night was drinking in a "blind tiger" when certain persons came to him and told him he should have a pardon if he would kill Mr. Marcum.

Feltner knew that [illegible] was as much as his own life [illegible] and fell in with the plan [illegible] My [illegible] describ[illegible] to feudi[illegible] age makes them infirm, but I never saw an instance of it until Feltner came to us.

He told us the whole plot and said he had done enough killing, and come what might, he could not shoot down his own lawyer in cold blood.

Although the man had been known to be allied with our enemies, his manner impressed us and we gave him full confidence.

The offer of a pardon to Feltner was not a boast, for Breathitt County has scarcely a citizen in the penitentiary. Curtis Jett had been pardoned time and again before he was convicted, and so have others.

I once said to District Judge Redwine that he could not point out one man whose pardon had been requested by certain interests here in Jackson and who was still in the penitentiary. Judge Redwine practically made Gov. Beckham and he did think of one case, but only one case where a pardon had been refused. He himself admitted that it was inexplicable why this one petition had not been granted.

Another Plot That Failed.

Feltner continued to play fast and loose with the men who wanted him to kill my husband. Meanwhile Mr. Marcum was collecting evidence which he finally embodied in an affidavit filed before Judge Redwine asking protection. At this time Judge Redwine said:

"You can use my head for a football if Jim Marcum is assassinated."

The Hargises also made an offer to insure Mr. Marcum's life. These things had the effect of reassuring Mr. Marcum and to lull him into a false sense of security.

Feltner had left the country, forfeiting a bond of $3000, which was all he had in the world. His associates had found out that he had told Mr. Marcum the entire plot and they would have killed him on sight and will kill him yet if his whereabouts ever become known.

Another warning then came to us. We were told that two men were to come to Jackson and engage quarters in a house near where we live and that they were to take the first opportunity to kill Mr. Marcum.

This message was delivered to Nellie, our 11-year-old daughter, and knowing the rest of the family were away the child went to the telephone and called up her father, who was at a village a short distance away.

She feared they might meet him as he returned home on horseback. Nellie merely said to her father that he must not go out of his hotel there until he was met by a messenger she would send to him. Mr. Marcum knew what it meant and did not quiz the child for things told by phone often become public hereabouts.

How His Daughter Saved His Life.

Then she went to a young man she knew was our friend and sent him to Mr. Marcum with a warning. We learned afterward they had lain in wait along the road until they became tired.

They rented a room in a house close to us and when Mr. Marcum made his way home by a round about route he did not stir from the house except [illegible] his women folks on both sides of [illegible] and the [illegible] in his arms [illegible] his shoulder.

Marcum Had Prophesied His Violent End a Few Moments Before the Assassin Shot Him in the Back, Even Though He Had Been Deceived by Treacherous Promises of Immunity.

He was a tall man and the assassins who are good marksmen, might have risked shooting over our heads but with the infant on his shoulder he knew they would not shoot.

At another time Mr. Marcum was detained at his office until a late hour. Things were going along smoothly and he thought he was in no danger. A man came to the house where my oldest daughter, Imogene, was the one chosen to act as sentinel that night. He tapped on the panes at the back of the house and Imogene let him in. He quickly apprised her of a plan that had been formed to assassinate Mr. Marcum as he left his office. The assassins, he said, were lying in wait at that very moment. There was no telephone in Mr. Marcum's office at that time.

My daughter did not stop to wake up any of the family, but bade the man stay until she returned.

Without a thing on her head she ran through the sleet and storm at the top of her speed. She had a steep hill to climb and was nearly exhausted when she reached the office. Her father had on his hat and was about to put on his overcoat to come home. He remained in his office all that night.

The Suspense Was Heart-Breaking.

On such narrow chances as this his life often depended. It was a hreat-breaking suspense and time and again we determined to go away. Mr. Marcum did leave town to hunt another home, but when he got away he changed his mind. He did not dare return openly at this time, but he hid in the woods in the hills and at night would come to the house to counsel with us.

Once when we had decided to go he had sent us across the river so we could catch the morning train at the tunnel, but before he himself left the house there came a warning his plans had become public and that he would be killed if we left the house. He sent us word to come back and for 10 days our household was conducted as a military camp might be.

In the door of our former residence which we sold recently there are a number of bullet holes.

Often at night some one passing by would fire a shot into the door just by way of reminder that our foes were active.

The morning Mr. Marcum went to his death he had become more reassured by the trend events had taken. He had not the slightest presentment of his impending fate nor had I, although we both knew he was constantly in danger.

He kissed me and the children goodby and said he would be back soon. A quarter of an hour afterward I was informed he was dead.

I attribute his death to the fear that he would eventually prove the conspiracy to kill him and that the conspirators would be dragged down from their high positions in the community and proved to be mere cowardly assassins.

He was insistent in his demands that the assassins of Dr. Cox and Marshal Cockrill be punished and doubtless the persons who killed these two men felt the only way to protect themselves was to kill my husband.

My husband's murderer will never be punished by the district court of Breathitt County. Unless Gov. Beckham appoints a special judge or the United States courts interpose because he was a United States commissioner, the only vengeance will be, that exacted by Mr. Marcum's heirs.

We have two sons—Alfred Thomas, 15, and Alfred, 9. If the law fails they must be taught that their father's murder must be avenged.

NEW ORLEANS IS READY FOR VETS

NEW ORLEANS, May 16.—Everything is now practically in shape for the reunion. Auditorium quarters for the veterans, and arrangement for feeding them are all in shape. The great betting ring at the Fair Grounds will be their dining room, and the tents in the infield will be provided with plan floors and ecelsior mattresses. The committee has bought [illegible] blankets and an equal number of cots, which will be put into the Gasquet building and the Hotel Royal, which will accommodate 5000 to 6000 men with sleeping qaurters.

The entertainment of the veterans who are to be fed will begin with breakfast Tuesday morning, the 18th. Amply provisions have been ordered to supply every want.

SENATORS AS FINANCIERS.

According to advices from Dallas, Senator Bailey of Texas has "financed" a Texas railroad in New York and as his fee and percentages has received the neat sum of $200,000.

Mr. Bailey may be expected to correct these figures. Corrections in such cases as this nearly always follow the first estimates of the rewards of successful financiering.

It is not doubtful, however, that Mr. Bailey is acquiring an increasing reputation as a financier. As for back as 1898, the most reliable newspapers of the country began publishing reliable reports, indicating the development of his financial genius.

Let us suppose that every enterprise Mr. Bailey helps to "finance" is wholly worthy both of his talents and his benevolence, regardless of either fees or percentages. What then? Is it certain to remain so? Is Mr. Bailey sure, are his constituents sure, that in such an age of financiering politics as ours, he will not be called on to pass as a United States senator on questions involving his own past relations as a financier on the one hand and the future of the country on the other?

This is certainly a possibility. It is not an improbability, because there have been senatorial financiers before Mr. Bailey to whom this has happened. At times it has been exceedingly awkward for them and more awkward still for the future of the country.

Let Mr. Bailey consider this possibility. Let his constituents consider it. They are welcome in doing so to all the evidence St. Louis and Missouri are now developing of the possible connection between financiering and politics.

The recent Illinois legislature is charged with failing to provide for the care of the insane, deaf and dumb, blind, feebleminded and soldiers' orphans, while voting to increase its pay. The vote for increased pay may have been an effort to prevent boodling, but Gov. Yates has vetoed the bill for the change. The salary of $1000 will therefore not be $2000.

LIBERTY OUTSIDE AND INSIDE.

The Declaration of Independence is fading. The text is still fairly legible, but the signatures have almost entirely disappeared.

Is this fact the shadow of what is taking place in the hearts of the American people?

The truths of equality, declared in the great instrument—are they still accepted as truths? Is the sentiment of justice cherished with characteristic American ardor or have Americans forsaken the paths of their fathers and wandered away after false gods? What is now the controlling political motive as reflected in American policy—justice, equality, humanity, or that cynical, ill favored, mocking doctrine, philanthropy and five per cent?

If the facts of the visible world are supported, as wise men tell us, by the truths of the invisible universe, the fading of this fact from the parchment made sacred by the hands of Jefferson, Hancock, Adams, Franklin and their companions in glory must signify a corresponding process in the heart of the people.

Let us hope that it is temporary. Indeed it cannot be but temporary, a fleeting fancy, the whimsical diversion of a too strenuous people. The writing will come back on the tablets of the heart, just as Liberty's torch, neglected for so long, was relighted when the people of the country knew what was going on.

Meanwhile, when our Filipino subject comes to see us in 1904 and questions concerning the great Americanisms we shall be compelled to change the subject. But he may be assured that it is not a surly spirit that prompts us to ignore his interest. It will be because our Americanism after all was not quite big enough to cover the whole of humanity, and the fact will make us ashamed. But it will grow, because Americanism is like the mustard seed. It will grow to a tree and the whole world will find shelter under its principles. The symbol on the parchment fades away, the truth in humanity is eternal and beyond the reach of change. Let the Filipino be comforted.

If Mrs. Roosevelt's strenuous social career has brought nearly every woman of the Cabinet to the verge of nervous prostration it is a matter for alarm. If the members of the Cabinet are to be made widowers through strenuosity how are they to do their part in the preservation of the race?

THE COST OF A STRENUOUS BRAIN.

A man with one of the most strenuous brains in the country has recently used it to write (or dictate) a really noble article for the instruction of the public. It tells of the life of the great "captains of industry" of modern times as higher and nobler than that of the crusaders "but just as strenuous."

Having dictated this he signed it. The signature shows that he must have dictated it. An inconsiderate editor prints the signature in photographic fac simile. Described accurately after close examination and actual count, the signature consists of five irregular jags, a quaver and three final curvilinear jerks. The expert in handwriting never lived who, with previous information of its significance, could attach a definite idea to it.

Anyone who wishes to know how such a signature became possible and to get also a suggestion of the cost of a persistently strenuous brain, can try the experiment of using the brain strenuously without sleep, forty-eight hours at a time, for four or five consecutive weeks. Then at the end of the last forty-eight hours of actual and uninterrupted cerebral strenuousity, let him try to sign his name with a common steel pen!

If he will compare the result with the signature of Napoleon Bonaparte just before the battle of Waterloo he may get a fairly comprehensive idea of what it may cost to become a Napoleon of Finance or of anything else.

After having tried the experiments he will not consult a nerve specialist if he is wise. On the contrary, he will set himself to gain the sound sleep, the steady and reasonable method of work, the persistence of effort, the firm purposes and the clear judgment of values which enable a man to put the signature of his mind, clearly and unmistakably without a tremor of hand, brain or conscience to the last line of a life work that will endure.

Dun reports that industrial conditions would be exceptionally encouraging were it not for the vast array of men voluntarily idle. Bradstreet reports railroad operations very profitable, there having been a gain of 14 per cent in gross receipts in April. "Steel is coming in from abroad in enormous volume but reports for the fiscal year are the largest, with one exception, in the country's history."

NEWSPAPER INFLUENCE

An interesting symposium of opinions on the power of the press has been made public through the World's twentieth anniversary number.

Mr. Cleveland, on the first page of "The World's Own Story for 20 years," expresses the belief that "as a general rule the influence of newspapers in leading the judgments and determining the conduct of readers has greatly diminished in recent years."

On the last page of the same section Justice Brewer testifies to the great power of the press in determining popular judgment and conduct on three main lines: (1) forming a more perfect union "by bringing the American people into a more intimate acquaintance"; (2) in grappling with social conditions and questions "the press informs and inspires every effort"; (3) in the evolution of the court of public opinion "the press does mighty work. It collects the universal opinion, announces its conclusions and whirls them against all, for gloo mor glory. These facts speak most for the uplift of the nation, and in each the press has been one if not the great factor." Justice Brewer could as justly have credited the press with similar influential work in promoting international amity and progress.

Following Mr. Cleveland's trend of thought, President Butler of Columbia University expresses the same conclusion, while former President Gilman of Johns Hopkins University asserts that "the power of the newspapers was never so great as now; it will never be less."

This difference of opinion arises from differing standpoints. Mr. Cleveland views the newspaper as the partisan leader of unquestioning followers, in which sense the newspaper has manifestly lost influence. But taking Justice Brewer's broader view and clearer analysis of the newspaper as a factor in human progress its influence has increased vastly in recent years.

Conditions have changed and the newspaper has changed with them, having, in fact, largely contributed to the change. The people are more enlightened, more capable of forming judgments on the facts. The newspapers must present the facts and appeal to reason. The best type of newspaper does not aspire to lead blind judgment, but to enlighten popular judgment and to attain its ends not by the force of mere personality, skill in fence or appeals to passion and prejudice, but by a campaign of education, by publicity and a rational discussion of facts.

The difference between old and new journalism is the difference between the feudal baron who commanded obedience and the modern statesman who appeals to reason and enlightened public opinion. The power of the modern press was indicated by Joseph Pulitzer when he said, "Publicity is the greatest moral factor and force in the universe." Publicity and rational discussion are the levers that move the civilized world.

With its more enlightened and independent readers multiplying rapidly in numbers, its increasing facilities for gathering and distributing news, the modern independent press as a factor in human progress is growing steadily in power and in comparison with the old partisan press is as an electric searchlight to a tallow dip. Its influence is measured by its truthfulness, courage, independence and reasonableness.

Nor is it without conspicuous examples of achievements in leading popular judgment and determining the conduct of the public, tremendous in effect and vast in the field and mass affected. For instance, the possibility of a newspaper's exerting such influence as the World exerted in averting war and restoring good feeling between England and America in the Venezuelan crisis, was undreamt of 40 years ago and would have been impossible.

Capt. William F. Norton, the Kentucky millionaire who set aside Friday of every week for the hearing of hard luck stories, is dead. His death is not merely of importance to Kentuckians in hard luck. He will be greatly missed by thousands of admirers who never had occasion to borrow money from him. He was called eccentric, but he was a man of good sense and other good qualities.

Mr. Gardner's Criticism.

From the St. Joseph (Mo.) Press.

In so far as these criticisms were inspired by a spirit of envy they were unequivocally wrong. But there is a sort of criticism that has its rise in a spirit of friendly interest; and such criticism is surely needed by St. Louis and the Exposition management, if this costly and significant enterprise is to be saved from failure.

Mr. Gardner is a man of trained observation and conservative judgment. He has watched the course of events at the national capital for years, and he is not likely to be carried away by either personal prejudices on his part or temporary embarrassments on the part of the management. When he says that the management is bungling, too much given to personal aggrandisement and dress-suit parade, near-sighted and negligent of the contingencies that are sure to accompany the gathering of such immense assemblages of people as inevitably attend international fairs, his words are deserving of [illegible] consideration.

Restraining Woman.

A judge in Omaha has issued an injunction to restrain a woman from talking.

The judiciary has attempted many difficult feats of late. It has granted injunctions against corporations, injunctions against employes and injunctions of almost every character, most of them unheard-of until within the last few months. We have been expecting to hear of some rabid jurist issuing an injunction against the wind to prevent its blowing. This would be remarkable—unprecedented, in fact—but the mind stands aghast at the idea of a judge having the effrontery to attempt an injunction against a woman's tongue.

It is not to a woman's discredit that she has a predilection for language. She is not to be condemned that verbosity is her forte—and it must be admitted that the ladies have a strong leaning toward verbal gymnastics—because it is a natural characteristic.

Let dogs delight to bark and fight, for God hath made them so, and let the ladies take pleasure in a surplus of conversation, because it is her natural right and not a privilege.

What judge shall dare to attempt to restrain her? Shall the rose be restrained from blooming or the birds from singing? Shall the apple tree be restrained from bearing fruit or the honeysuckle from giving forth its pleasing odor? Shall woman be restrained from conversation? Well, not if the court knows herself; and she think she do!

LIFE IS NOT BARREN.

The world is bright, if we but view
With calm and loving eye
Its countless beauties, ever new,
Beneath a smiling sky.

Life is not barren. We may find
Cool shades and quiet dells,
Where fragrance dances on the wind
And sorrow's sigh repels.

In sunshine there is beauty; in
The hearts of men is love,
Which hearts that seek for love may win,
And all its fullness prove.

THE REVIVAL OF IRISH.

From Harper's Weekly.

That the language movement has "come to stay," or, rather, to go forward, there is no longer any reasonable doubt. It has not only been taken up by the cultured classes—some we know who have abandoned Dante to pore over Middle Irish; the people themselves, and in the cities, have taken to it warmly. In O'Connell street the classrooms are crowded, hundreds of young men and women spending their evenings after hours over over Irish grammars and reading books; surely better there than in bars or music halls. London has 2000 Gaelic-Leaguers. The classes are conducted in a cheery, informal way. Many of the teachers work "with the zeal of those who labor for love," and not in imparting Irish only as a language. Irish songs are taught, and at a given signal the desks and chairs are cleared away and Irish dancing begins.

All over the length and breadth of Ireland this work is going on. The language, the history, the music and the dancing that belong to them are being revived among the most impressionable people in the world. The growth of the Gaelic League is phenomenal. Last year, the number of affiliated branches almost doubled itself; so did the entries in the literary section of the annual eiractas, or meeting, last May. But most striking of all is the output of Irish books, of which, during 1902, 213,000 were issued by the Gaelic League committee, in addition to 40,000 copies of propagandist pamphlets and leaflets. Irish music is also being issued, both new music and new arrangements of old airs; a stirring of the dry bones.

WHAT THE EYES TELL.

From the London Express.

The color of the eyes has hitherto chiefly concerned the novelist and the poet, but lately the cold-blooded statistician has been looking into them.

It is announced, taking the average of Europe and America, 44.6 per cent of men have light eyes, including blue and gray. The proportion of women having blue or gray eyes is 32.2 per cent.

In other words, blue eyes are decidedly rarer among women than among men.

Men have light eyes oftener than women, but in the intermediate shades between light and dark the percentage of the two sexes is very nearly the same. In this intermediate category are brown and hazel eyes. The percentage of these among men is 43.1, among women 45.1.

The percentage of black eyes is larger among women than among men, being 20.7 per cent for the women, while among men it is 12.3.

Blue eyes are considered to possess great attractions. This was the case among the Greeks and Romans of classic times. Upon the Goddess Minerva was bestowed a surname to signify the blueness of her eyes.

Gray eyes have ever been the ideal of all great novelists; among the number Charlotte Bronte, George Eliot, Wilkie Collins and Charles Reade. Most of the heroines in up-to-date fiction are gray-eyed maidens.

Of the living great, as well as the famous dead, most have eyes of gray or blue.

Shakspeare had eyes of gray; so had nearly all the English poets. Coleridge's eyes were large, light gray, prominent and of liquid brilliancy. Byron's eyes were gray, fringed with long black lashes.

Charles Lamb's glittering eyes were strangely dissimilar in color, one being hazel, the other having specks of gray in the iris. Chatterton's brilliant gray eyes were his most remarkable feature. Under strong excitement one appeared brighter and larger than the other.

As to green eyes, they are for glory. The Empress Catharine of Russia had eyes of this hue.

CAN'T BEAT THE DUTCH.

W. T. Stead in Booklovers Magazine.

The Dutch are better men on the land than the English. Mr. Rhodes affirmed it as strongly as Benjamin Kidd. Not only are they better men, but they are much cleverer politicians. Dr. Gordon Sprigg, the present premier of Cape Colony, told me last year that the rough Dutch farmers from the back country had such a natural intuitive genius for politics that, after three weeks in parliament, they could give points to any British member who had been in the House for months.

Not only are they better men all round on the land, not only are they abler politicians all round in the houses of parliament, but, what is far more important, they are better breeders of men. The British colonist, following the example of the Frenchman and the New Englander, shrinks from the primal task of multiplying and increasing and replenishing the earth. The Dutch cradle is never empty. If the hand that rocks the cradle sways the world, it is not less true that the race that fills the cradle will possess the world. Hence the destiny of South Africa seems tolerably certain to be that of a federation of self-governing states, pre-eminently Dutch, which will or will not be sheltered by the union jack, according to the readiness of the imperial government to recognize that it has no authority over Africanders.

THE LONGEST HIT.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The longest hit on record was one which carried the ball from Staten Island to Liverpool, though all the wide Atlantic rolled between.

Chicago was playing New York one day in 1880. The 110th street park of the New York team had been ruined by the opening of a street, and temporarily a park had been built on Staten Island, right on the shore of the bay. The center field, in fact, was built out on boards over the water, and the man who fell out of the center field bleachers had nothing before him but an ignominious death in the ocean.

With the score a tie in the last innning, "Jimmy" Ryan came to the bat. He hit the ball a ponderous swipe, and it went sailing out over the center field fence into the vasty deep.

Ryan's hit and his ensuing home run were forgotten when one day, a month later, he got a letter and a small package by mail from Liverpool. The writer said he had sailed for Europe the day of the ball game and had been struck by the ball as he stood on the deck of the liner. After he got to Liverpool he read an account of the game in the New York papers, and concluded that he had found the missing ball. "Jimmy" still has the much traveled sphere to show as proof of his holding the record on long hits.

THE KAISER GETS AN ALP.

The German Emperor has come into possession of another windfall, says the London Mail. A German merchant named Hilderbrand of Dresden who for many years has been established at Berne, recently died, and, having no heirs, bequeathed a considerable fortune and a quantity of land to the Emperor.

The Kaiser becomes the proprietor of the Iffigen Alp, which is situated between the Weisshorn and Dildhorn, the Nissen Horn and the beautiful waterfall of Iffigen, situated in the Canton of Berne. To give an idea of the extent of the property which his majesty inherits it is said that it takes five hours' hard working to cross it. Many chalets are dotted over the land, which is rich in pasture and in woods.

The Emperor of Austria is also a Swiss proprietor, having lately come into the possession of the historical castle of the Hapsburgs in the Canton of Thurgovie.

THERE ARE OTHERS.

ONE MORE CHANCE.

Poet: Good news, dear! That poem of mine—

Wife: Has some one accepted it?

Poet: [illegible] but I've discovered there's a new magazine that I have never sent it to yet.—Philadelphia Press.

WOMAN.

The London Express prints this poem with a double reading. Read it as it stands, and woman is highly flattered, but read alternate lines (one and three, two and four of each verse), and the sentiment is very much the reverse:

Happy a man may pass his life
If he's directed by a wife;
If free from matrimonial chains
He's sure to suffer for his pains.

No tongue is able to unfold
The virtues in woman you behold;
The falsehoods that in woman dwell
Are almost inperceptible.

In woman's heart you'll see appear
Truth, darling, of a heart sincere;
Hypocrisy, deceit and pride,
In woman never can abide.

THE "TREE OF LIFE."

The expression "tree of life" has more than a biblical or a symbolic meaning, according to modern science. All animal life upon this planet is dependent upon the green iron-containing substance called "chlorophyll," which gives their summer colorings to trees, grass and shrubs. Green, not blood-red, is the life-color.

English scientists have figured out that such schemes as Sir Oliver Lodge's proposed reforesting of the English Black Country would help to eke out the three millions of years for which astronomers tell us the sun will continue to make animal life possible.

Disastrous forest fires in the Adirondacks are, upon this view of the matter, a species of "race suicide," and the proposed new undertaking of the United States government to study the prevention of forest waste is the most direct work of self-preservation.

STOCKINGS FOR THE CZAR.

From the Chicago Daily News.

Recently there was on sale in Edinburgh an old eight-day clock which has a very interesting history. About a century ago there lived at Bannockburn, Betty Wilcox, the widow of an English soldier who had fought at Culloden. Her only son, a sailor, lay in a Russian prison, the crew of his ship having been captured by a cruiser of Czar Alexander I. She knitted three pairs of fine stockings and sent them as a present to the Czar along with a letter praying for her son's release. The parcel was intrusted to the captain of a ship sailing from Alloa to the Baltic, and the captain succeeded in getting it presented to the Czar through a Scottish physician, Sir James Wylie, a favorite at court. The Czar was greatly moved at the mother's petition, and at once set the sailor free, dispatching to the widow a handsome sum of money. With part of the money she bought the clock and had painted on it scenes illustrating her son's captivity.

SOLID WITH MORGAN.

At the Lotus club Charles W. Price told this story about J. Pierpont Morgan, says the New York Times. A young reporter was sent to Mr. Morgan's residence to ask an important question.

"Mr. Morgan is out," said the butler.

The reporter, noticing a carriage in waiting, lingered near the entrance to the Madison avenue residence, and in a few moments was not exactly astonished to see Mr. Morgan come out and start for the carriage. He dared approach and ask the question, as he had been instructed.

"Young man," said Mr. Morgan, "didn't my butler tell you I was out?"

"Yes," was the reply; "but you should change your butler for one who can speak the truth!"

Mr. Morgan turned his penetrating eyes on the questioner for a moment and then said, as he entered his carriage: "Call at my office in the morning and suggest any other changes in my establishment you deem advisable."

The reporter did call and has possessed fairly pleasant relations with the eminent financier ever since.

LITTLE THOUGHTS.

Man regards human nature as a pack-mule on which to pile his sins.

Fearfulness burns its bridges behind; fear, the bridges before.

No man was ever discontented with the world if he did his duty in it.

Man thinks more of the cigar thrown in than of the box he pays for.

Some things that are received as gifts are really intended as investments.

Every wise man has a parachute of prudence attached to his balloon of enthusiasm.

The foundation of self-respect is work. Work is the parent of enterprise; idleness is the parent of vice.

OUR NATIONAL CASH BOX.

When Hamilton Fish, the new assistant United states treasurer at New York, signs a receipt for the cash in the subtreasury, which it has taken seven weeks to count, he will have made himself responsible for the care of $383,471,256, or just about the total wealth of Andrew Carnegie.

In this amount is included $300,774,007 in gold, weighing 370 tons—enough to load a train of a dozen heavy freight cars, with part of a carload left over. This gold is equal to the entire product of the Klondike and all the mines in Alaska put together for eight years.

Mr. Fish will also have to take care of $86,912,066 in silver, weighing 1968 tons—the load of a train of 66 30-ton freight cars.

In addition there is some odd change to the amount of about $19,000,000 in paper and minor coin.

The gold and silver alone weigh in all 2338 tons, or about enough to make a cargo for a moderate-sized ship.

If a burglar should have free access to the subtreasury, and should work the union time of eight hours a day six days a week, carrying money to his apartments in the Waldorf at the rate of a hundred pounds a trip, it would take him three years to get away with all the gold and 16 years to dispose of the silver, by which time there would be a fresh supply of [illegible]

NEW WONDERS OF ELECTRICITY.

Here are a few of the latest discoveries about electrical energy and its allied forces, as collected by Mr. E. G. Fournier d'Albe for the Electrician.

R. Blondlot has discovered a new kind of radiation, produced by Xray tubes, but entirely different from Xrays, Becquerel rays, cathode rays, ultra-violet light or common light. Like the Xrays it penetrates aluminum, black paper and wood, but it can be polarized, refracted, reflected and diffused, has no effect on a photographic plate, and does not produce fluorescence.

Electricity at a pressure of 10 to 30 volts, with currents interrupted from 150 to 200 times per second, will put animals painlessly into a quiet and regular sleep, with complete anesthesia.

Electro-magnesia dark rays can be used in wireless telegraphy by means of lenses of resin, glass or paraffin. The system may be called heliographing with invisible light.

A. Heydweiller thinks he has discovered that the energy of radium is due to conversion of the potential energy of gravitation into radio activity. Becquerel thought that a radio-active substance would lose about one milligramme (say the one-thirty-thousandth part of an ounce) in a thousand million years, but Heydweiller finds that a concentrated radium preparation in a sealed glass tube loses a milligramme in 50 days.

Most light-colored metallic powders are bad conductors of electricity under pressure, and most dark powders are good conductors. The rule is not invariable, however.

A body made active by a radium compound loses half its activity in half an hour in the open air, but the interior of a closed vessel similarly "activated" takes four days to suffer an equal loss. The difference is caused by the presence of radio-active air in the vessel. When this air is changed the loss of activity goes on at the same rate as outside.

MACHINES AND THE NAVY.

In a speech recently before the House of Commons, dealing with the education of naval officers, Arnold Foster quoted a distinguished naval officer in the lines below, which, as Cassell's Magazine considers, admirably present the naval engineer's claim to appreciation:

"Everything in the modern fleet is done by machinery, be it steam, hydraulic, compressed air, electricity, to which will probably be added in the near future explosive oil and liquid air. Not only are the ships propelled solely by machinery, but they are steered by machinery. Their principal arms—gun and torpedo—are worked by machinery. They are lit by machinery; the water used by those on board for drinking, cooking, washing is produced by machinery; messages which were formerly transmitted by voice pipe now go by telephone.

"The orders which the admiral wishes to give to the fleet could formerly only be made by flags in the day and by lamps at night; they are now made by electricity—that is, wireless telegraphy and electric flashing lamps. Orders which were formerly written out by hand are now produced by the typewriter or by the printing machine. Formerly the admiral visited another ship in his pulling barge; now he goes in a steamboat; the anchor, formerly hove up by hand, is now worked by an engine. The live bullocks which were formerly taken to sea are now replaced by frozen carcasses, maintained in that condition by machinery. If a fire breaks out in the ship, the steam pumps drown it; if the ship springs a leak, steam pumps keep down the water. The very air that those on board between decks breathe is provided by a fan driven by machinery.

STORY FROM THE SUNNY SOUTH.

From the Adams (Ga.) Enterprise.

Mr. Bud Spinks was awakened the other morning by a strange grunting noise in his room, which proved to be the voice of a medium-sized alligator, that was warming itself by the smoldering ashes of his fireplace, and incidentally trying to swallow his boots, which he had placed there to dry, and which he had bought on the installment plan, and had only made one payment on them. The saurian had succeeded in swallowing one boot, and had the other down—clear to the straps, which Mr. Spinks seized and pulled it out. The 'gator is now on exhibition at Minche's drug store, but will soon be slain, in order that Mr. Spinks, who is going around with one boot and one slipper, may recover the other boot.

BROTHER OF HIS MOTHER.

From the Philadelphia North American.

An adoption of a child granted by the Berks County court caused an unusual change in relationship. Judge Endlish made a decree allowing James H. Angstadt to adopt Earl Wesley Helms as his son and heir. The child's name will be changed to Angstadt. He is a son of Charles and Amanda Helms and his father's whereabouts has been unknown since August, 1901. The mother joined in the petition for adoption. Mr. Angstadt is the father of Mrs. Helms and the grandfather of the boy he now adopts as his own child. By the adoption the child becomes the brother of his mother, and instead of being a nephew to aunts and uncles, is now their brother, and instead of being a cousin to cousins is an uncle to them.

WAY OF THE WORLD.

From the New York Herald.

'Tis not the tallest tree that bears
The fruit whose taste is sweetest;
The horse that holds the highest head
But seldom is the fleetest;
The girl who giggles may not have
The keenest sense of humor;
It chances oft that little truth
Is in the loudest rumor.

Whose forehead is the tallest;
She may possess but little grace
Whose waist is squeezed the smallest,
And she who weeps beside his grave
The bitterest may let her

HUMILIATING.

"It's a confounded shame," said the one most interested. "I never in my life was more humiliated than when that ignorant policeman when on the stand and swore that I was going 20 miles an hour."

"How fast were you really going?" another asked.

"Not an inch less than 30 miles an hour."—Brooklyn Eagle.

AVAST THERE! AND CASTILE RODS WITH SPANISH LAKE FISHERMEN

Just Laugh to Scorn Anyone Who Says There Are No Fish in Spanish Lake, and Ask Him Why, Then, Does the Sunfish There All Day---There Are Old Galleons With Goldfish in Them in the Pretty Lake Where the Real St. Louis Fishermen Go.

They're fishing there this very minute—
Spanish Lake. No fishes in it?
Come off the perch! What then, I pray,
Would make the sunfish there all day?

They are just getting their lines out up at Spanish Lake. Don't you wish you were with them? How much better than lounging around the house, half-dressed, to be up there on the pretty green banks of Spanish Lake, your basket full of lunch, your worms sticking their heads over the edge of the can, and your reel clicking like a grasshopper in dog days?

Where did they come from? St. Louis. St. Louis is just full of them. They would rather fish than be president. They go every Sunday in season. They march into Union Station more than a thousand strong. They rattle their rods on the Midway pavement. They light up the dark trainshed with the glow of their pipes. There is a swish of water—that's minnows. There is a rattle of tin—that's worms. There is a rush into the Midway saloon with the basket—that's beer.

"O, the bullfrog on the bank,
Little Moses in the pool!
O, the bullfrog on the bank,
Little Mo-o-o-ses in the pool!"

Singing! You bet. Makes a man sing to go fishing.

"Same place, Joe?"

"Yep."

"Same here. Got my wife and the kids in the back coach this morning.

He's a fan. You can see that. A fan cant help being a little windy in the smoker. It's only enthusiasm. No, there isn't anything strange about them—fishing fans. They even have fan fish nowadays.

Around on the Old Elevated.

The train runs around on the old elevated, and a moment later it is running up the river front. They all crane their necks to look at the river—the fishermen. The river has a great fascination for them. Think! It is full of fish.

There are a few boats along the levee, mostly big sidewheelers, waiting to take people out for a ride at 25 cents per. That's what little catfish will be selling at when the fishermen come home—25 cents purr.

The train stops at the foot of Washington avenue. Ever read about the battle of Austerlitz, where the cooks rushed around the hill rattling their pans? They fight it all over again when the train stops at Washington avenue. Bim! Bim! "Look out there, huskie, you're telescopin' my minnow bucket!"

Is that a bear running wild in a cane brake? Dear no; they're putting the poles in the baggage coach.

The big Eads bridge frowns down on the train and reaches off toward East St. Louis. As the train starts up the fishermen fill the windows with heads and intently regard it. It has a wonderful fascination for them. Think! It spans a place that is just full of fish.

Many of the fishermen are singing as the train leaves the elevated and rattles up through the yards toward the north end. The fishermen peer from the windows into furniture factories, stove factories, planing mills, lumber yards, glue factories, etc., and suddenly become intent in their contemplation of something.

What is it?

A pair of wagon scales.

It has a wonderful fascination for them. Think! Fishes have scales.

Reinforcements at North Market Street.

Boom!

The train staggers and creaks. There is a frightful rattle at the ends of the coach.

Are we struck by a cyclone?

Goodness, no! It is the North Market street crowd getting on.

Of course the leader of the North Market street crowd is a big Ajax who probably works up in the upper yards as a switch engine for the Terminal company. But no! He is a wee bit of a fellow. It was his lunch that staggered the car. He works it behind the stove and sits on it.

"Pretty hard seat, John?" asks one of the men in the crowded aisle.

"Nope; had my eggs soft boiled today."

Ha! ha! Let's laugh with them. See how big and strong and fat they are. Laughing did that. There is a roar in the coach. The train lurches under the Merchants' bridge. The fishermen fairly hang from the windows and look down at the river.

It has a wonderful fascination for them. Think! It is full of fish.

We are speeding now to the last stop for fishermen. It is North St. Louis, so called on the big sign at the depot. The fishermen who get on at North St. Louis can get no further than the coach platforms. So there they stand, hanging on, each with his poles and his can of worms.

Think of a man laughing when he has worms and no place to sit down!

We are going it now through the fertile fields of the Columbia bottom. The river is within a toss on the right. Over on the left is O'Fallon Park, with its eastern slope just as green as its name. North of it are Bellefontaine and Calvary Cemeteries and Baden. Baden has a brewery. The fishermen on that side of the train regard it intently.

It has a wonderful fascination for them. Think! It is full of beer.

The train thunders over the Columbia road and flirts around the end of Prospect Hill. In a moment it has stopped at the Field Club. A couple of golf players get off. The fishermen looks at them with pitying eyes. Just think! They are on an outing and are not going to fish! They can't be seine!

The Bright Waters of Spanish Lake.

The waters of Spanish Lake are as bright as a mirror. Why not? They are full of sunfish.

From the train the lake is so beautiful, nestling in the lap of green and wooded hills.

But the trees are not there for beauty. They are there so the kingfisher can find his perch.

There is a rush for the lake. Men, women and children race like mad over the green side hill. They are getting their lines ready as they run. In a moment a hundred lines go swish! and chullup! and they are in. There are screams of delight and the whole lakeside quivers with excitement and laughter. The train has no more than pulled out than every passenger it left at Spanish Lake stands there with baited hook and bated breath.

They are of many kinds—these anglers who go down to the lake to fish. Some among them are old men in whose feeble frames there is yet a glow of the spark of youth. Others are young people. Some are children. There goes a fine-looking, good-natured, happy fellow with his wife and seven little Teddies. What is that—a clothes hamper? Yes, with the lunch in it. Papa himself can eat half of it. He is a blacksmith six days in the week and a banker the seventh. You see him now at his bank—the bank of Spanish Lake. He is a good fisherman. Why shouldn't he be, when he has horns on the palms of his hands and can hold an eel?

When all the morning trains are in at Spanish Lake the fishermen stand upon one foot to make room. What are they catching? Spanish mackerel, of course. It is great fun to Castile rods with these merry fellows.

There is a shout all along the bank whenever any one catches a fish. The fishermen are not envious of each other.

Hello! There goes a little old man you know. He's the gardener who brings vegetables to the house every day. What is he fishing for? O, of course, for pumpkin seed! How stupid of me.

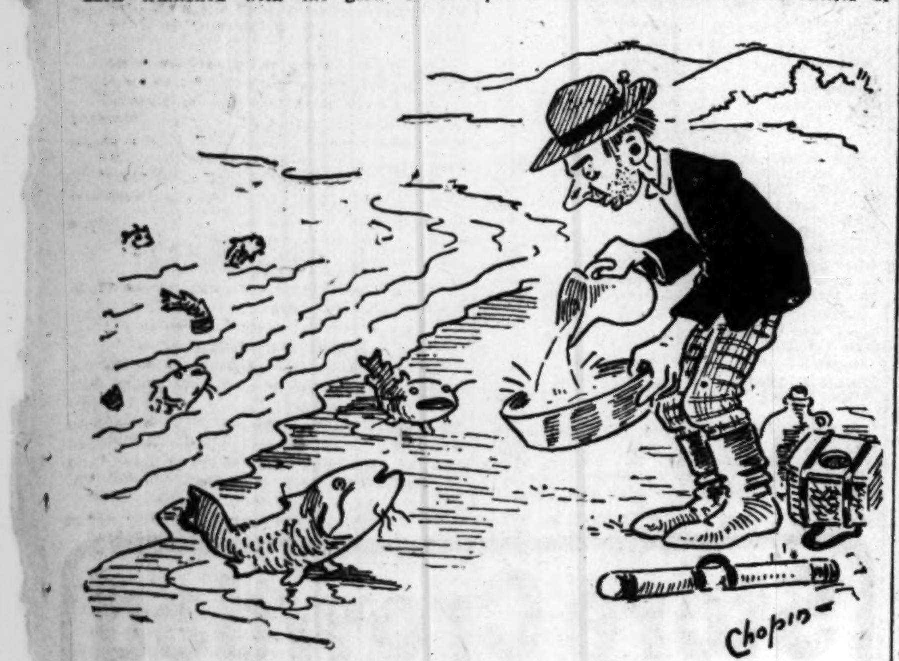
Fishermen Are Very Ingenious.

There are some very ingenious fishermen along the banks of Spanish lake this Sunday morning. Let us watch this man by the tree. Ah! Isn't it simple? He has a gold brick there in that open basket which he sets near the edge of the water. That's why the suckers are jumping into the basket.

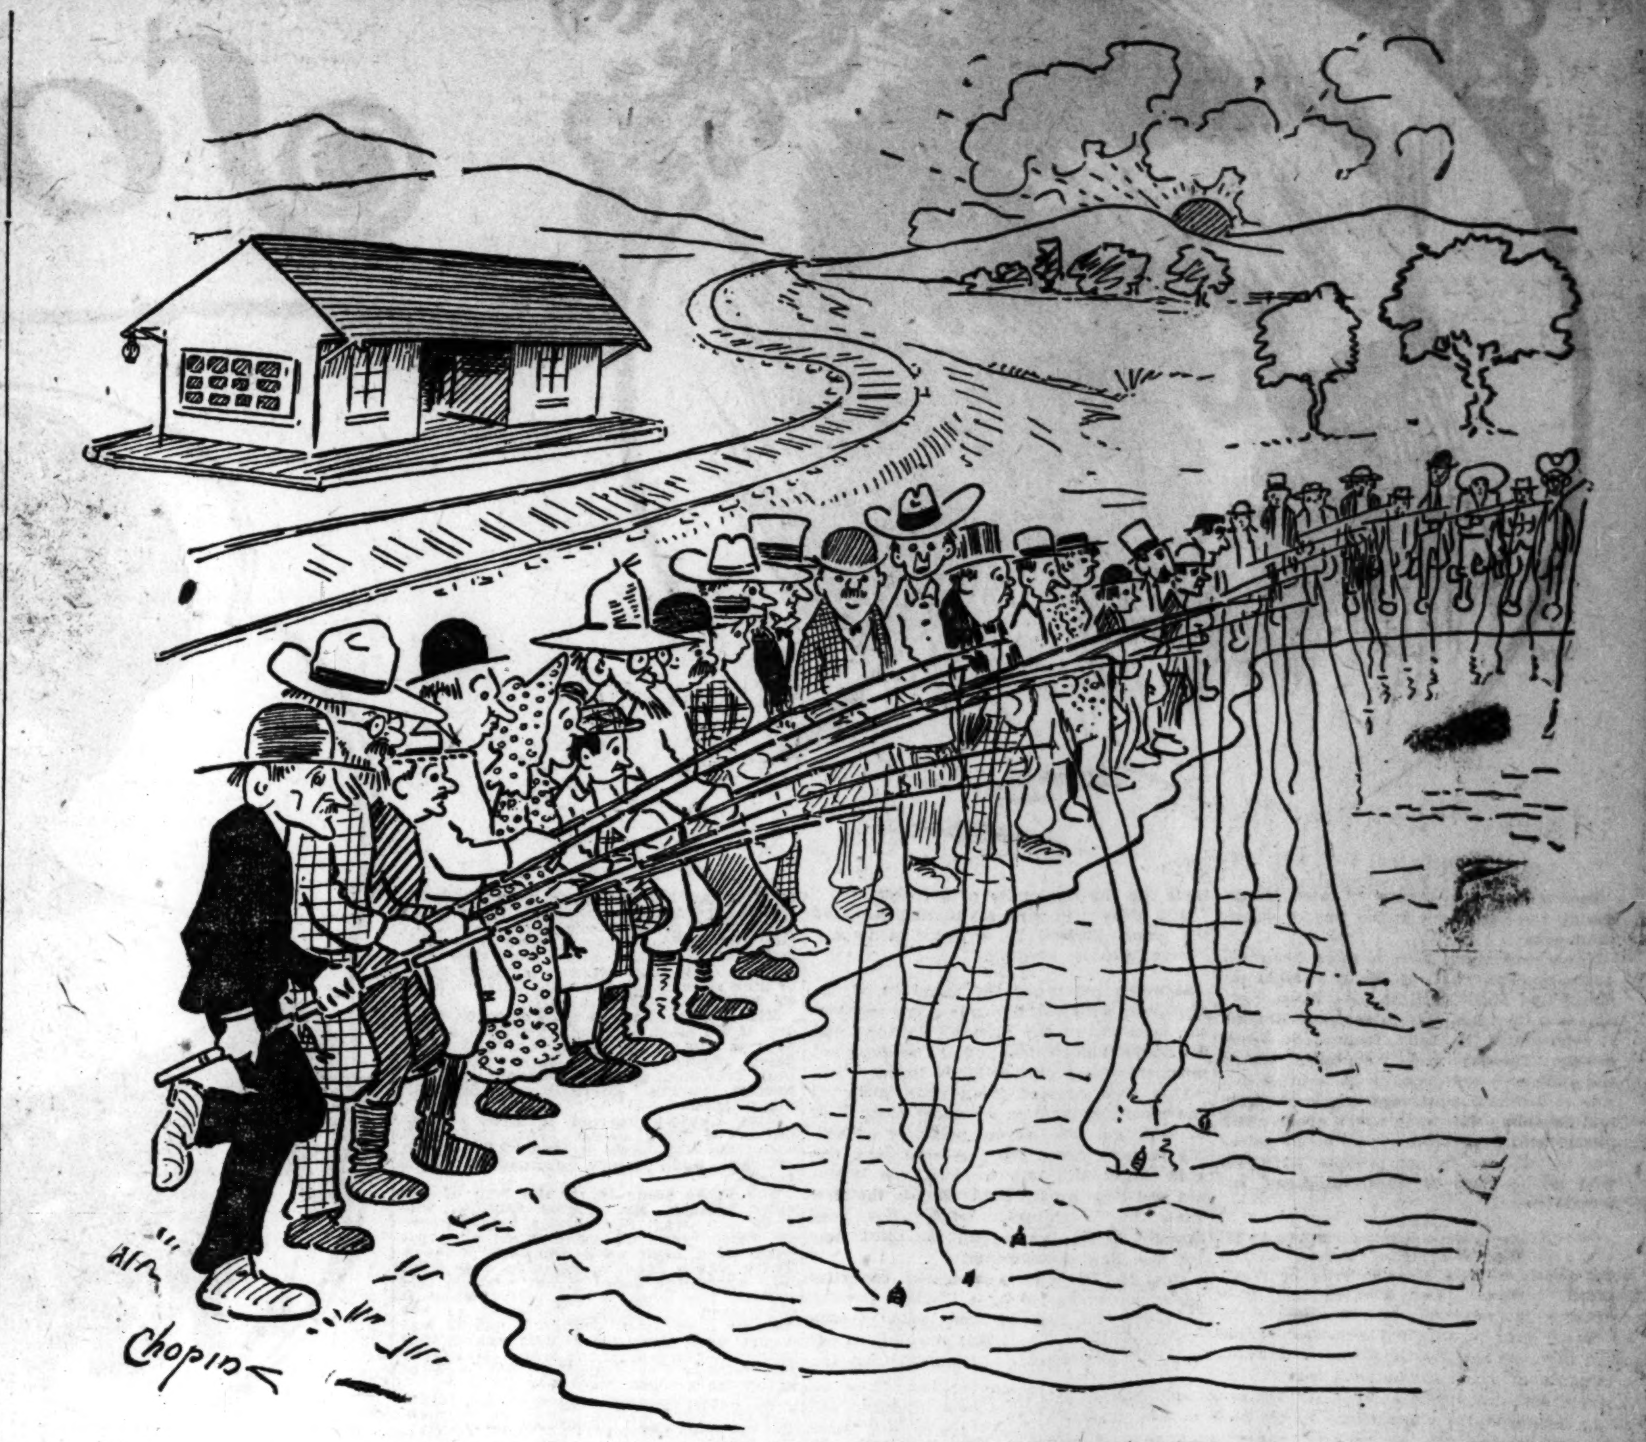
That's pretty clever over there by the willows. That man knows the lake is full of catfish. All you have to do is what he is doing—setting a little milk out in a pan and calling "Kitty! Kitty! Kitty!"

Have you noticed that man up there where the children are dancing? He has hit upon something very ingenious. He has shot a sand piper and put it in a basket with a drum fish and a fiddler. That makes an orchestra. The children are dancing to the music.

The student-looking fellow over by the yellow bank is smoking bark. I saw him getting it. He put a dog fish in his basket and the dog fish filled the basket full of bark.



Spanish Lake is full of catfish. All you have to do is to pour a little milk in a pan and say, "Kitty! Kitty! Kitty!"



When all the Sunday morning trains are in at Spanish Lake the fishermen stand on one foot to make room. What are they catching? Spanish mackerel, of course. It is great fun to Castile rods with these merry anglers.

Let us walk down to the south end of the lake. By George! That's pretty clever. See what they're doing? The water is up over that barbed wire fence and they're baiting the barbs and catching more fish than they can carry.

Now it is noon. How patiently have they awaited the coming of this dear hour. O, blest oasis in the desert of day! O, perfumed zephyr from Araby, let me smell that coffee again! O, heavenly harp, thrill the drums of mine ears with the music of frittering bacon! O, rhapsodical rhomboid, give me one of those lop-sided sandwiches!

O, Life, what ecstacy so sweet
As Hunger just about to eat?
O, Isle of Bliss, I fancy this
Is where our fates adhere:
A chicken wing to gnaw and sing—
"Give me my share of beer!"

There is a pop! pop! all around the shore of the lake. No, they are not shooting frogs. Boom! Boom! Hearken the hosts of hungry shelling the boiled eggs!

Almost all the men on our side of the lake have their wives and children with them. Some of them are merry as old King Cole, but others, alas! are not. They move about with an air of subjection that compels pity. They bring water, build fires, bait hooks and untangle lines. They get a bite, and must get the nod from their wives before they pull in their fish. They peer down into the cool ooze of the Spanish Lake as though they were thinking of something. Fishwives?

But look on the other side, under the trees! No women there. Sturdy fellows from the North End, as independent as the republic.

"Hello, over there! Why didn't you bring your wives?"

"No vimmens goes."

At which there is a salvo of applause from his fellows. (Hurrah for you, unhenpecked and unterrified men from the shadow of the water tower.)

Spanish Lake—A Name to Conjure With.

Spanish Lake is a name to conjure with. It is not far from the old Spanish town of Florissant. It is suggestive of everything romantic in the history of Spain.

Nobody would think of washing his hands in Spanish Lake with anything but Castile soap.

There is a bridge over the lake. It is a narrow footbridge leading out to a little pagoda. You can walk out on that bridge and easily imagine you are in Spain.

There is a man out there now watching the bull cats fight.

There is quite a fleet of boats. One of them runs out in the lake and stands there with the lines hanging about it like a torpedo netting.

Many a boy is rowing on Spanish Lake today in full confidence that he is the scourge of the Spanish Main. Just think of the galleons that went down there in the days when the black-whiskered conquistidore held the lake in the hollow of his hand.

Mercy, what hands those old Spaniards had!

But, most of all, think of the goldfish in those wrecks!

Isn't it strange how such a big name attached itself to such a little lake? Spanish Lake. It has always been called by that name. It was named when Spain held almost all of the New World. Must have been some significance in that. It is a mighty fine lake to sit and contemplate. That's what all those people over there on the bridge are doing.

The lake has a wonderful fascination for them.

Just think! It is full of fish.

Yes, you can find silver perch in those wrecked galleons.

In the afternoon they fish less, sleep more and have a good time. The press of feet on the banks of the lake is no more. If a fish is taken and put on a string, the other fishes there give him the ha! ha! for getting in late.

Thousands of People Spend Days a Fishing.

There are thousands of fishermen in St. Louis. Spanish Lake is but one of the places where they delight to cast their hooks. The east side of the river abounds in them. The Alton slough is a favorite place. Creve Coeur Lake, the Gasconade and a hundred other streams, lakes and ponds, to say nothing of the Mississippi, are visited by the fishermen in fishing season. Sunday, of course, is the big day.

Not every fisherman catches fish. Few of them do. But that isn't the point. It is the fun and the recreation they seek, and of such there is no lack, whitherso'er they may be sought. The fish are killed by drouth and freeze and may even be caught until few are left. But fun swims eternal wherever the water runs, and recreation is an evergreen whose luster never dims.

The St. Louis fishermen catch bass and crapple for game fish. Of other fishes there are catfish, which probably predominate in the great number of strings brought in; sunfish, perch, eels, a few pike, a jack salmon now and then, and a few buffalo and carp.

They fish with the handline, trotline and pole. They are for the most part good sportsmen, having a high regard for the law. You might do worse than be with them this morning instead of laying around home. Maybe you wouldn't feel so soggy.

At 6 o'clock the fishermen are beginning to return to the city. They stream in as they streamed out—from whatever direction in which lieth a stream. Here comes the train from Spanish Lake—the one we went up on. As it swings on the elevated there is a row of heads at the windows on the river side. The fishermen are once more, the last time for today, contemplating the river.

It has a wonderful fascination for them. Think—it is full of fish.

COTTON KING'S RAPID RISE IN LIFE

W. H. Brown Becomes Rich and Famous Within the Space of Eight Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, May 16.—Sitting on his porch William H. Brown, the new cotton king, declared to a Post-Dispatch correspondent that for five years he had been a bull and that prices would have to go higher in the future as they had in the past.

The new power in the market is the chief of the firm of W. H. Brown & Co., one of the largest cotton exporting houses in this country. He has been in the cotton business all his life, although until eight years ago his operations were confined to the small town of Columbus, Miss. Eight years ago he moved to New Orleans and married into one of the city's most prominent families. Within these eight years his fortune has grown from a mere nothing to millions and his name, from one known only locally, to one famous on two continents.

Mr. Brown is 40 years of age, moral in his habits, cool at all times and democratic in bearing. He is at work every morning by 8:30 o'clock and rarely stops until 7 p. m., his dinner hour. At home with his wife and three boys he lays aside all cares and enjoys his evenings, rarely going out. He takes the best care of himself physically.

Became a Bull at the Right Time.

Mr. Brown started bulling the market when cotton was 4¾ cents. He believes in higher prices, based on supply and demand. Consumption, he says, has overtaken production. While a great deal has been said about manipulation, he says cotton has really bulled itself.

"The market now," he says, "is perfectly healthy and we will see prices go even higher yet. The whole thing in a nutshell is that there is not enough cotton to go around; manipulation did not advance cotton. A scarcity of actual cotton has forced prices where they are."

Mrs. Brown, wife of the cotton king, is [illegible] years old, and is one of four or five sisters who at various times have been social leaders. One of her sisters, Louise Braughn, was queen of the carnival and Mrs. Brown, before her marriage, when she was beautiful Julia Braughn, was several times maid of honor at carnival functions. Her marriage to Mr. Brown took place almost simultaneously with her debut. The affair was one of the social features of the season and was attended by all the social leaders of the city. Mrs. Brown was the daughter of Judge George H. Braughn, a prominent lawyer who died 12 years ago. With the exception of that of President Jefferson Davis no funeral in the city was ever more largely attended.

Since her marriage Mrs. Brown has not taken a prominent part socially. She is devoted to her friends and entirely wrapped up in her husband's business. Before her marriage she was anxious to study law and contemplated entering the Tullane law school. Since then she has no time for anything except cotton. Her husband daily explains to her the condition of the market and his plans. She is not his adviser, but is as well informed as Mr. Brown himself. He keeps nothing from her except his troubles, which he is able to throw off as soon as he reaches his home on St. Charles avenue.

Mrs. Brown told the Post-Dispatch correspondent today of Mr. Brown's plans in erecting a stone palace on the magnificent site of the present frame residence. She says that these plans have recently occupied Mr. Brown's mind as much as the markets.

Mrs. Brown is entirely devoted to her three little boys, each one of whom has an old negro mammy as his guardian. They are all bright little fellows and are as democratic as their father and mother.

Society

V. VanNortwick

Society had a potpourri of good things during the past week in the way of entertainments.

Never has there been a more beauitful audience than that of Monday night at Exposition Music Hall to hear Mme. Nordica and the inimitable Edouard de Reszke. It represented la belle fleur of St. Louis society. Tuesday and Wednesday nights the audiences were equally as large—but it was so different, both regarding performers and listeners. The week which opens today has several interesting events on its calendar is still not full of promise for those who love a rush of entertaining and entertainment.

One of the most charming visitors in St. Louis is Miss Whiting of Boston, who is the guest of Miss Mozells Price of Westminster place. Miss Whiting and Miss Price have been class and roommates the past winter at a New York fashionable finishing school. Miss Whiting is a beautiful young girl with roseleaf complexion and hair of the color made famous by Titian. She has a rarely beautiful soprano voice of superb quality and range. A number of affairs have been given in honor of this fair visitor, and still more are on the tapis for the remainder of her visit.

Miss Price will give a yachting party on the Annie Russell to a party of twenty guests Monday evening.

Saturday afternoon the members of the Hamilton Whist Club in gala array received the members of the Pioneer, Cabanne and St. Louis Whist Clubs and all whisters not members of any club at Hotel Beers.

This club covered itself with glory at the recent convention of whist clubs held in Chicago. The seven members attending brought home ten top-score pins, one gold medal and two trophies, the Washton and New Amsterdam. This is the first time the Washington trophy has been brought to St. Louis, and the third time for the New Amsterdam.

Mrs. M. B. Shelley won the beautiful silver cup presented by a Chicago jewelry house for the highest score made during the convention. The prizes were all on exhibition, and were duly admired by the guests.

The members of the Hamilton club were all in beautiful afternoon toilettes and received without hats. The members are Mrs. M. B. Shelley, Mrs. Fred P. Kaiser, Miss Anna Meyer, Mrs. James Barker, Mrs. Lily Ayler, C. D. T. Hamilton, Mrs. F. H. Garrett, Mrs. Charles L. Moss, Mrs. Richard Mills, Mrs. Byron Nugent, Mrs. J. L. Phelps, Mrs. Silas Wright, Mrs. A. B. Bowman, Mrs. H. B. Davis, Mrs. L. H. Haynes, Mrs. T. C. Witherspoon.

The receiving hours were from 2 until 3, after which there was a short game.

Miss Mildred Bells and Mr. Alexander D. O'Gorham of New York have selected Tuesday, June 8, as their wedding day.

This will be one of the pretty home weddings of the month of roses. The ceremony will be performed at 8 o'clock and be followed by a large reception.

Miss Bell will be attended as matron of honor by Mrs. Hall of Little Rock, Ark. Mrs. Hall was Miss Emily Roots and she has frequently been the guest of Miss Bell.

Mr. O'Gorham will have Dr. Otho Ball as his best man.

Mr. O'Gorham and his bride will depart immediately for a long bridal trip before taking up their residence in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bond Lambert, who are at present in Paris, have been charmingly entertained by Santos-Dumont at un dejeuner at his home on the Champs d'Elysees.

Mr. and Mrs. Lambert met the noted aeronaut on his visit to St. Louis last fall.

Interest naturally centers this week, so far as weddings are concerned, in that of Miss Emily Catlin and Mr. Arthur Shepley.

Miss Catlin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ephron Catlin of Vandeventer place. She is a charming young girl of queenly presence, tall, with beautiful face and a wealth of chestnut hair.

The bride-elect has chosen her cousins, Miss Irene Catlin and Miss Emily Catlin Wickham to attend her.

Mr. Shepley will be served as best man by Mr. Allen C. Orrick. Messrs. Walter McKittrick, Tom Wright and Dan Kirby and a nmber of eastern men will usher.

Mr. Shepley is the son of Mrs. John R. Shepley. He is a prominent young attorney and represents one of St. Louis' most aristocratic families.

The ceremony will be performed by Dean Carroll M. Davis at Christ Church Cathedral Wednesday afternoon, and will be followed by a large reception at the Catlin home.

Cards were issued Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Edgar Kauffman of Washington boulevard for the marriage of their daughter, Myrtle, to Mr. Daniel Augustine Hill on Tuesday, June 2, at 8 o'clock, at Lindell Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church. The ceremony will be followed by a small reception at the bride's parents' home.

Miss Laura Keisker of 2715 Spring avenue and Charles E. Boehm were married last Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock at St. Theresa's Church. The attendants were: Miss Elizabeth Cronin, Mr. A. J. Madden, Miss Lulu Keisker, Mr. James Boehm. A reception was held at the residence of the bride's parents. They will go to housekeeping at 2719 Spring avenue.

St. Peter's Episcopal Church never presented a more beautiful picture than it did Saturday afternoon, when Miss Gerda Luyties, youngest daughter of Mrs. Louise Luyties, became the bride of Mr. Marshal Prevost of Washington, D. C. The church was simply but artistically decorated with greenery and great clusters of pink hydrangeas in the chancel and pink roses on the altar. Long before the hour appointed for the ceremony the church was thronged with friends of the beautiful bride, and it presented a pretty picture, with the delicately tinted toilets, white picture hats with waving plumes and bright-hued flowers.

Mr. Galloway, who presided at the organ, gave a delightful program of nuptual music before the arrival of the bridal party at half after four, when the wedding march by Mendelssohn announced their coming.

The procession was led by Mr. Rutherford Corbin of Washington and Mr. Robert Richmond, followed by Mrs. J. C. Bunting of New York and Mr. Herman Luyties, brother of the bride.

Then came Miss Lucy May Goodbar and Miss Beatrice Lodge walking together and preceding Miss Mary Orr of South Carolina and Miss Mar[illegible] Porter.

Their gow[illegible] of the same hue, a perfect [illegible] over taffeta of the sam[illegible] bride, who is a firm belie[illegible] had each fair maid design her own gown as most pleasing and becoming to herself. These creations were prettily combined with flimy lace and ribbon. They all wore large picture hats of pink chiffon and tulle and flowers, and their shower bouquets were of pink sweet peas, tied with illusion. They all wore long lacy pink mitts.

Miss Lily Luyties, as maid of honor, wore one of the most effectively beautiful gowns seen at any of the spring weddings. The fleecy, delicately tinted, flecked net was built over shell pink silk and was made in narrow panels, alternating with deep cream lace.

Miss Luyties carried a large round bunch of pink sweet peas, tied with countless tiny bows of pink ribbons with pendant ends, which formed a deep fringe.

The bride came in on the arm of her elder brother, Mr. August Luyties, who gave her away. She wore a bridal gown of white crepe de chine made en princess, with high neck and long sleeves. There was a panel of beautiful rose point lace extending from throat to hem and around the foot of the train, when it graduated in width. Fastened to her hair by a spray of orange blossoms was a priceless rose point veil, which fell hquite to the end of the train. Her flowers were valley lillies, with fringe of maidenhair ferns.

Mr. Prevost was attended by Mr. James Lawrence Orr of New York as best man. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Short.

A bridal dinner at the Luyties home on Lindell boulevard to the bridal party and immediate families followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Prevost departed the same evening for an extended eastern honeymoon trip before going to their future home in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Luyties, the bride's mother, wore a black Ottman silk with thread lace, and Mrs. Orr, the mother of the bridegroom, was in a magnificent all black lace toilette with hat to match.

Mrs. August Luyties wore white panne velvet combined with crepe de chine and chiffon applique, and Mrs. Herman Luyties wore a Parisian gown of white Louisine inset with immense circular medallions of black tulle embroidered in cut steel. Over this beautiful gown she wore a long princess coat of white antique lace in grape and foliage design. Her chapeau was of white chiffon and pink aigrette. The Mmes. Luyties were accompanied by their small sons, Masters William and Herman Luyties, both in English blouse suits of white serge.

Mrs. Don Carlin looked especially well in nile green crepe with pink and white hat.

Miss Nederhut, one of the prettiest South Side girls, wore a gown of sheer white organdy over blue and large picture hat to correspond.

Mrs. John Loader was in champagne crepe with deep tucked coat and black tulle turban.

Mrs. Fred C. Gardner and Mrs. Ed Pretorius came together, Mrs. Gardner in China blue linen and heavy lace with an artistic hat of pale blue chiffon and rim and crown of shaded pansies; Mrs. Pretorius in chantung with same toned lace and navy blue toque.

Mrs. J. G. Butler wore royal blue silk and black picture hat.

Miss Gertrude Ballard was in bisque crepe elaborately shirred and displaying some rich Persian embroidery. Some of the other guests were Mrs. George Willard Teasdale, Mrs. F. X. Barada, Mrs. Moores Ball, Mrs. T. F. G. Comstock, Misses Rena and Flora Dula, Mr. Louis Tune, Mrs. Tel Edgar, Jr.; Mr. Barney Eagan, Miss Daisy Medley, Miss Mathilda Anderson, Mr. Al Lereman, Mrs. Walter Averill, Miss Wise, Mrs. George McGrew, Mr. and Mrs. R. TEXAS CATTLE ON THE BLUE OCEAN

Report From the First Shipment Consigned From Galveston to South Africa.

GALVESTON, May 16.—Maj. Maud of the British army, who has charge of the shipments of cattle that are being made by the British government to South Africa, is in the city and will remain here until the Cranley sails. The first of the cattle for the cargo of the Cranley arrived here last night and consists of three cars of 2-year-old heifers. The bulk of the cattle to be shipped will not arrive here until Wednesday.

Maj. Maud says the Atlantean, the ship that carried the first cargo of cattle from Galveston, has not yet arrived at Delagoa bay. The Atlantean has been reported only once since she left this port, and that was at Barbadoes. Up to that time only six head of cattle had died and the death of these was caused by injuries received in loading and not from incidents of the voyage.

SIGNOR LIBERATI FOREST PARK HIGHLANDS

AT VARIOUS AL FRESCO RESORTS

The summer gardens will be in full swing from today on. There will be, to be sure, some new features, but for the most part we will have the same old shows, the same old players and the same old crowd which haunts the gardens nightly in search of something new.

Suburban patrons will miss the vaudeville bill which has been a feature for so many seasons and in its place will be entertained with good music with good musicians. Delmar Garden will—after a couple of weeks—offer the greatest novelty in the way of a run of Weber & Fields attractions by three good companies. If the business done by Weber & Fields themselves at Music Hall is any criterion, Delmar should have a winning card. When Weber & Fields can draw at $2, certainly a good company with the same sort of attractions ought to draw at one-third the price and less.

Forest Park Highlands, West End Garden and the park places in North and South St. Louis will have their regular doings and their regular crowds.

The increased population of the city, the growing popularity of outdoor amusement and the deserved fame of St. Louis' al fresco resorts augur to the astute managerial mind a season flowing with nothing but money.

Theirs is the indelible smile. Theaters after a season and in a time of balmy atmosphere have a habit of getting stuffy. Despite the most improved and elaborate scheme of electric fanning and ventilation they fall behind as an attraction, and the hot tired seeker for entertainment does his share of packing the cars and gets to a summer garden where there is fresh air, pretty women, music that sometimes is not so pretty and cold steins that are always good and soothing.

Out in the park everything is new or newly painted, and there is a freshness and crispness about the places that one finds very satisfying to his jaded mentality. For the summer garden is a strange place. Here there is nothing to remember or forget.

A fair young creature trips to the footlights, says "Hello, Charlie; you're just as handsome as ever. Do you still love me?" She gets her laugh, uncorks a song, shows her newest lingerie in a dance, kisses her hand and is gone from the stage and your mind.

The public is delighted. For three hours it listens to these songs, interspersed, it is true, with trained animals, human and otherwise, acrobats and probably a short sketch in the more pretentious establishments, but always songs and more songs.

But everything is done to amuse you and to give you rest, so you go out night after night, see the show, move about, smoke, rink and flirt. Half the time you don't now what the bill is and care less. If the girls are pretty you find the show good, advise the man on the outside to take it in the next night, then promptly forget it yourself.

FOREST PARK HIGHLANDS.

Variety—the spice of life, is the motto of Forest Park Highlands this season. Vaudeville is in itself variety, and new and unique vaudeville, presented by performers who have never been seen here before, is mised for the entire season. Of course, re are always old favorites, who can ver come too often, nor do the same ing over too many times. To pick these favorites out judiciously has been the m of Col. SUBURBAN PARK.

F. N. Innes has laid out for himself a busy summer at Suburban Garden. Facing the management of a big summer garden, the direction of a band of 55 and making flying trips is the advance campaign which he has laid out for himself, and in doing this arduous work he represents not only his own interests, but those of St. Louis and Chicago capitalists who are associated with him in these enterprises.

May is the busy time with Directer Innes. It is the month of fulfillment.

The band direction involves much correspondence. Its routing, hotel stops, concerts and transportation as well as the supply of music and avoidance of clashing of dates with other bands add to the worry of the advance work. Within a few days the band will start on its western tour, taking in St. Louis for a period of three weeks, and day by day its progress is a matter of interest and solicitude. It is a costly guidance—this long-distance management—but it has proven possible and profitable. St. Louis is geographically the h[illegible]

Diavolo I. the man who o[illegible]ated the cycle loop-the-loop, is at the [illegible] Suburban Park superintending th[illegible]ion of the apparatus which is his [illegible] fame and fortune and his source [illegible] as well. Skilled men are constr[illegible] affair, with its forty-foot start, its climb of twenty-three feet and its new run-off. A few practice spins will be made before the opening time, Saturday evening, May 30.

Diavalo is a New Yorker, 26 years old, who conceived the idea of the whirl inside of a big loop and nearly broke his neck the first time he tried it. Some years ago the accident happened in front of a committee of the New York police board and the health board. These experts had been sent to Madison Square Garden to see if the act, which they considered suicidal, was really practicable. It wasn't on a three-and-one-foot strip of loop, and Diavolo steered off the runway, landed on the concrete flooring, broke his nose, ribs and generally shook himself up. It kept him in the hospital for several months.

The men who were backing him insisted that the feat must be as dangerous looking as possible, and they figured that a narrow apparatus would give the desired effect regardless of the trying experience of riding a wheel upside down in a periphery with centrifugal motion—sure, of course, but deceptive looking—as the factor of safety.

And so Diavolo earned his right to be called game and spoiled the Madison Garden show. But he hasn't fallen since and he will show Missourians at the Suburban.

HASHAGEN'S PARK.

Hashagen's Park, at Grand avenue and Meramec street, will open this afternoon. Many dollars have been expended in extensive alterations and improvements and it will present a better appearance in every respect than heretofore. Here are located the only shoot the chutes in the city with a lake at the finish which is large enough to be used for boating purposes. On the banks of this lake is a splendid dancing pavilion.

The program this afternoon is loaded with good things. Chief among the principal acts are those of the Gillen Trio, in expert Indian club juggling, introducing Miss Maybelle Fonda. Manvro, the contortionist, is booked for a lot of silence and fun and aerial athletics; May and Miles, comedy sketch artists, have a travesty act, "Seeing Things;" Roy and Roberts will be transferred from the Auditorium to show some color harmony in an illuminated act and pictorial specialty.

Prof. Scanlan will see what he can do in the way of parachute drops every afternoon.

MANNION'S PARK.

Mannion's Park, the garden spot of South St. Louis amusement resorts, will throw open its gates for the current summer season today, but patrons of the old Mannion's Park of the past seven years will hardly recognize it in this newly enlarged and improved al fresco resort ready to receive them. It is safe to say that at none of the numerous summer gardens in [illegible] radical changes been [illegible] with a firm faith in the future of St. Louis, as a growing center, the owners of the park have purchased and included in their already roomy resort 10 acres of adjoining property, and with the advent of spring, graders, carpenters, painters and gardeners worked assiduously transforming the uneven, broken land into a perfect park, so prettily laid out that one can but admire it all.

Several blocks of new walks have been laid out, encircling the newly added outdoor attractins, so that one may enjoy themselves at random on pleasant evenings, while for damp or rainy evenings the new pavilion, as well as the summer theater building, have been fully provided for and protected. Prominent among the outside attractions will be found the large gypsy camp of Roving Ned, who with his large band will make Mannion's their summer home. Roving Ned has been a prominet figure at the leading expositions with his gypsy camps, and their quaint ways of living, and mannerisms, will prove interesting to all.

Refined vaudeville, but of a higher order than ever before given at Mannion's, will be the program this year. Today the bill offered will be an especially pleasing one, including Ellsworth and Burt, leaders as farcical sketch artists, who will present their charming playet, "Domestic Pets." Cooke and Clinton, two lady sharpshooters, will create much interest. Baby Lund, who is the idol of the ladies and children, will appear in new songs. Lew Wells, who is today one of the best musical comedians on the vaudeville stage, will offer an act new to St. Louisans, while Raimund and Vauk, a pair of German comedians of the better type, complete the long list of entertainers.

ECLIPSE PARK.

For its attraction today the stock company at Eclipse Park will offer "The Twin Brothers," one of the strongest of the familiar melodramas. It will be given in first-class shape, as all plays at Eclipse are.

During the three weeks that the company has been together it has shown that it contains any amount of good material and already it has become decidedly popular with the patrons of the place.

Mr. Lee Begg, the leading man, has completely captivated the matinee girls, and Louise Dunbar, the leading woman, has won the hearts of all the matrons, as well as the male contingent.

Manager Pemberton is arranging for an original production next Sunday. The new play, which is by Hiram W. Hayes, is called "Beneath the Red Cross," and is a story of the civil war, although it is not what is commonly termed a war drama. The part of the heroine, who appears in the last act as a Red Cross nurse, was written especially for Miss Dunbar and will give her an excellent opportunity to display her histrionic talents to their fullest. If the play makes the success predicted for it by Manager Pemberton, Miss Dunbar will be starred in it next season by E. J. Carpenter, the New York manager with whom Miss Dunbar was engaged during the season just closed.

KOERNER'S GARDEN.

Koerner's Garden will open May 31 with Lawrence Hanley in "Hamlet." Mr. Hanley has been for the last year at Las Hugeler, Cal., where he has done but little acting, devoting most of his time to his physical welfare. The result is that his condition greatly pleases his St. Louis admirers. F. E. Rice, who will manage Mr. Hanley this season, has also in the Koerner stock company Lee Starrett, well known to South St. Louis audiences. The leading woman will be Miss Rachel Acton, who made a decided success during the season just closed in "The Stain of Guilt," a new piece put on by Messrs. Havlin and Garen.

WEST END HEIGHTS.

West End Heights will open its second season today. Many improvements have been made during the winter. A new scenic railway, a gigantic Ferris wheel and a trip through the earth have been added. The main entrance will be more beautiful than ever, as 1000 extra lights have been added. The opening bill for the theater has been carefully selected from the best of European and American talent, and includes Conn and Condon, direct from Europe, in their sensational novelty, "Fun on the Barber's Pole;" Mong Myo, Burmese foot juggler. First appearance of the lilliputian wonders, Robinson and Grant. Christo Bros., comedy acrobats; Way and Maitland, travesty artists, and May Estelle Belmont, high-class vocalist.

CREVE COEUR LAKE.

Creve Coeur Lake is now fully in the ring of summer garden resorts in St. Louis. Having natural beauty to start with, which is enhanced by a ride to and from this pretty spot through a long stretch of country, it needs much less than the other gardens in artificial devices to make things hum. The lover of fishing, boating, lolling under the great old shade trees and picnicking in a rowboat all day long, can find all these idyllic pleasures the same as ever, with new ones added. First of all, Prof. William Weil and his orchestra will play in concert every night and twice on Sunday afternoon and evening. Mr. Weil's reputation as the best local band leader is not of this year. He established it some years ago, when he began his Sunday concerts at the Olympic, afterwards at the Exposition and lately at the Odeon.

A handsome pier with a pavilion at the end of it and built "ocean-like," 200 feet out into the water, is not the least of the attractions; but the main one is the new scenic railway. It is a railway built on trestles that are sunk into the hillside, high enough and deep enough to make gentle inclines; but there are no other obstructions, no tunnels, no artificial caves with hair-splitting scenes of the nether-world population. All is serene and lovely in traversing this railroad, for nature alone furnished the scenery. It is just 130 feet from the crest of the hill to the bank of the lake, but that drop is imperceptible as one skirts downward in the "scenic," and only impressive, as one gazes at the "pull-up."

FOREST PARK COTTAGE.

The popular band concerts at the Cottage in Forest Park are to be resumed for the summer season this afternoon. Prof. Seymour and his men will present a nightly change of program and there are to be Saturday and Sunday matinees. The band is made up of the best local bandsmen, many of whom have been identified with these concerts for several years. Prof. Seymour has always made it a rule to play the latest music and his programs are specially suitable to the delightful outings which the famous pleasure ground of St. Louis affords in the summer time.

Manager Schweickardt will, as usual, be the ideal al fresco host of the World's Fair city. The evening concerts begin at 8 and last with little intermission until late in the evening.

Mr. Edwin L. McDowell and his pupils will celebrate the 22d anniversary of the St. Louis School of Elocution and Dramatic Art at the Century Theater Thursday, May 21, at 8 p. m. The program will consist of three very happy one-act plays interspersed with good music and a short serio-comic lecture by Mr. McDowell himself. One feature, the closing one, will be an original mixture labeled "Fifteen Happy Minutes With an Elocutionist and His Pupils."

Incidental to the closing number Mr. McDowell, assisted by a well-trained corps of his pupils, will give the audience a good idea of the practical working of the McDowell system of phonetic gesture drill.

Miss Amelia Bingham will return to the Olympic Theater for a special spring season of two weeks, beginning Sunday night, May 24, when she will present Clyde Fitch's brilliant play of social life, "The Climbers."

CLOSING DAYS AT THE PLAYHOUSES

"The Little Princess," with Millie James in the leading role, will begin its second week at the Olympic Theater tonight.

At any time the continuance of a piece beyond the regulation one week at the Olympic is a matter of some wonderment, since a week's visit is supposed to exhaust the popularity of any play in St. Louis. Not so, however, with "The Little Princess," since the audiences that have witnessed the play have testified to a sagacious management the wisdom of prolonging the engagement one week.

The simplicity of the theme of "The Little Princess" is its chief charm. Criticism is disarmed and a feeling of admiration is generated at the skill with which Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett has dealt with her subject and presented to young and old alike a graceful picture of what might be commonplaces, but in her hands become romance of the highest order.

Miss Millie James won all hearts on Sunday night last when she presented her deliciously fresh and lifelike portrait of a little girl of 12 years. Her simulation of childhood is probably one of the most remarkable effects to be seen upon our stage, and the success of "Little Princess" undoubtedly owes much to her skillful efforts, aided as she is by several clever children and such well-known artists as Miss Helen Tracy, Mrs. Felix Morris, Mr. Tully Marshall and Mr. Charles Poor.

During the last week of the engagement in this city there is not to be any matinee on Wednesday, but in place of it the management announce an extra special matinee on Friday next, to be followed by the last matinee on Saturday.

"A Royal Slave," a play of Old Mexico of the time of Maximilian and the period following that unfortunate monarch's execution, is to be the attraction of the week at Havlin's. Manager Garen's information is that it is one of the most realistic of the dramas of the season, being set with scenery painted from original photographs, and being in the hands of actors who have established their reputations in former productions. The opening performance will be with the matinee of today.

Most of the characters are historical. Three of them are prominent in the pages of the history of Mexico at that period. The cast is headed by Clarence Bennett, an actor of merit, who gained his first prominence as one of the principals of the support of Booth and Barrett. Among the others are the well-known names of Margaret Neville and Odette Tyler. The story is said to be one of the most interesting type, romantic in the extreme, well connected from the beginning to the end, and full of incident.

The Columbia promises another good bill for this week. Milton Royle and company in "Capt. Impudence," a very clever comedy, are headliners. Mr. Royle's supporting company is said to be excellently balanced. Dooley and Tim Brook offer a nonsensical piece of work entitled, "The Handy Man and the Postmaster." Other good numbers of the bill are: Genaro and Bailey, singing and dancing comedians; James H. Cullen, monologist; Monroe, Mack and Lawrence, in a farcical sketch, "How to Get Rid of Your Mother-in-Law," and Leo Kronan Trio. The complete bill includes Goggin and Davis, sketch artists; Charles W. Young, offering new songs and stories; Burden and Rehan, dancing and singing comedians, and Kitty Stephens, transformation dancer.

For its attraction today the Standard Theater announces "Miss New York, Jr.," an extravaganza of the most up-to-date character. It is said to be clean and bright, and full of catchy lines and music. It would be difficult to describe the show, and the best way to find out just what it is is to go and see. The eastern papers give it a lot of space.

Mr. Fred Brownold has just published a new set of waltzes caled the Cavalier waltzes, which he has dedicated to Miss Julia Marlowe. He is in receipt of a letter from Miss Marlowe accepting the dedication and complimenting him upon his [illegible] melodies.

POST-DISPATCH REVIEW OF THE GRAIN MARKETS AND FINANCE

CONTROLLED BY BULL SPECULATION

Were the Grain Markets of This Country During Most of Last Week.

GOOD ADVANCES MADE IN WHEAT, CORN AND OATS

Condition of the Crops the Principal Influence—Increased World's Consumption of Breadstuffs—Situation in Corn and Oats.

BY GEORGE D. L. KELLEY.

Bullish conditions and bullish sentiment and speculation have been strongly featured in all grain this past week, with the natural result that higher prices have been made. It can be stated that bearish speculation was also very much in evidence, but it was bearish speculation with the "reverse English" on, as the people who had been playing that side were very busy buying in the short sales they had made, and this buying went a long way towards elevating prices to the higher level they attained. Mixed in with the stimulating information was news that shaped up bearish, but this had no standing and but fleeting effect while the buying craze was on. Some of the "stimulating information," by the way, had the appearance of what the sports would call "dope," but it got there just the same. Really the weakest feature in the speculative situation was the lack of strong outside support. The outsider may have been in the market as a good buyer, but he was not in the market where it would do the buying side most good, and that is in the markets where the "market" is actually made—in the grain pits of the speculative centers. Running and maintaining a bull movement on professional speculation is a difficult undertaking, especially after the short end is eliminated. So that the "man in the air"—the buyer who shuts his eyes and keeps on loading up unaffected by adverse conditions that crop out every now and then, and which usually call a halt in professional speculation—is badly needed in grain speculation in the regular markets. Setbacks may be expected under present speculative conditions for this reason, but these setbacks should be taken advantage of by investors to take on wheat, corn and oats.

• • •

As the season draws near its close and the new crop draws nearer the harvest, the wonderful consumption of wheat and the lowered crop conditions in this country and in Europe more and more assert themselves. What has become of the two great world's wheat crops of 1901 and of 1902? In 1901 the reputed yield the world over was 2,857,000,000 bu, of which North America raised nearly a third, besides carrying into the new crop 142,000,000 bu in the world's visible. When July 1, 1902 was reached and a new crop year entered 165,000,000 bu was in sight in Europe and in North and South America. In North America, where a crop of 838,000,000 bu had been harvested, the finish of the season found 47,831,000 bu in available supplies, which was 14,000,000 bu less than when the 1901 crop year opened, and in the United States but 52,000,000 bu held on the farms. In 1902 the world's crop was 2,959,000,000 bu in Europe exceeding the previous year by 215,000,000 bu and in North America 53,000,000 bu short of the year before. The world's available supply on July 1, 1902, was 105,000,000 bu, making a total supply the world over, without counting the farm reserves, of 3,094,000,000 bu, which nearly 100,000,000 bu larger than the preceding season. As on May 1, 1903 the world's visible was down to 135,000,000 bu, or about 22,000,000 bu smaller than on same date last year, it is safe to claim that the amount of wheat that will go out of sight this season will be much larger than during the preceding season. Without taking into account farm reserves, the above figures indicate a consumption of about 2,900,000,000 bu during 1901-02 and that the probable [illegible]ion for 1902-03 will be over 3,0[illegible] bu. These are large figures and by indicating the steadily great increase the world over in the consumption of breadstuffs are worthy of serious consideration.

• • •

They are especially worthy of attention when the crop situation at home and abroad is considered. The prospects at home are for a record-breaker in winter wheat, though whether it will prove to be as large as the May report of the government indicated is very much to be doubted. Latest testimony from the fields goes to show that serious deterioration has taken place in several of the principal states of the central valleys, the greatest complaints coming from Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee, and also in that great wheat producer of the Pacific coast—California. It is claimed that a plague of Hessian fly has appeared in Kansas, which if so, increases the probable damaged area. So far no improvement of consequence has been reported in the sections from whence came the first complaints of deterioration. The spring wheat crop was put in well and has progressed favorably, but it is a far cry to that crop's harvest, and predictions are the merest guesswork. That several countries of Europe will harvest short crops is now certain, and the United Kingdom, the greatest importer of breadstuffs, will have to compete with increased requirements from several Continental countries for foreign wheat and flour. The outcome of the Russian crop is still very much in doubt, with the chances favoring a decreased yield. The large crop of the Argentine has so far not exported within 7,500,000 bu of that shipped during the same period in 1900, nor has India come up to its promises. Foreign shipments to Europe continue large in the aggregate, but European supplies melt away steadily and keep the importing trade abroad on the anxious seat regarding the question of supplies. These on May 1 were 56,200,000 bu, which only 300,000 bu larger than the amount afloat for and in European stocks on that same date in 1897. And it was their unusually small supplies and short crops in 1897 that started such strong demands from Europe that year, resulting in bull markets that culminated in the Leiter deal.

• • •

The late advance in American markets has cut down foreign buying in this country materially, and practically entirely so for immediate shipment, as cash offerings are not alone extremely scarce, but also high-priced. For new-crop shipment there is something doing right along, though not anywhere to the extent of the business consummated in April. There is where the St. Louis trade becomes interested; as New York exporters bought a large amount of July in this market, besides that bought by St. Louis exporters, against sales for August shipment abroad. As present conditions of the winter wheat crop may mean a short yield and a late harvest—prospects point to a harvest two weeks late—the question is, will all these July sales to exporters be filled, besides meeting domestic requirements?

• • •

So little wheat has been for sale in the St. Louis market this past week that "six bits" has been paid for the best samples of soft winter. This, too, with all the local mills shut down on account of their labor strike, consequently no buying for them, and the entire demand coming from near by and southeastern mills. The latter were keen after supplies, as their own country practically exhausted, but public elevators here were in the same fix, and private houses held their stock above the limit. This condition of supply places the May shorts in a bad box, and it looks like "six bits" or more for them. Cash No. 2 red has lately sold by sample delivered ½c to 1½c above May for local to destination weights, No. 3 red ranging about 1c below the No. 2.

• • •

If the present spell of settled and warmer weather continues long enough we are liable to see claimants starting up with the assertion that all the drawbacks that have attended the seeding and progress of the corn and oat crops have been overcome. These claimants will principally hail from the markets and enunciate their statements from the standpoint of a line of short sales or of "puts." But such claims may have their effect upon the speculative markets just the same. After such a siege of cold weather and drenching rains, with occasional freezing spells, that undoubtedly hurt the tender plant where it was up, a late crop appears to be a certainty for both these coarse grains and a late crop is usually an uncertain one to bet upon, especially for the fellow who bets it will be a good one. Consequently the speculative markets in corn and oats promise good action from now on for the men who make the markets and those who back them.

• • •

So far the country holders show no disposition to turn loose their corn. Farmers are too busy planting, but the owners of stocks at country stations or the smaller markets of the West fail to meet the strong bids the accumulating markets make them, or yield to the attraction of the still stronger prices paid in these markets. None of them are offering such inducements in the shape of prices and most of them not as good as has and does St. Louis, yet only the merest trickle of a stream of the actual corn has been coming here, as compared with the requirements that call for this grain. The price of the May option has gone here to 2½c above July, yet car lots of No. 2 mixed have been selling 2c and of No. 3 1c to 2c above the May price. Considering this difference between the price that speculation has been paying for the option and that legitimate demands have been paying for the contract grade, talk of manipulation doesn't sound right. It may, though, if the shorts do not hasten to bring the corn here from the country to fill their contracts. Only 6500 bu contract grade is in store here and that is sold to go out.

• • •

In oats there has not been the strong cash situation that was so prominent in corn. Offerings were generally too large for the actual cash demand. Not that receipts were heavy, though they showed an increase over those of the week before, but that the demands were lacking. Most shippers were barred out by the prices asked, though occasionally the buyers for order houses dipped in and picked up a line where the price got low enough. Local requirements were also limited and no stocking up save as stated by a few order houses, was seen. Yet prices had lost most their late high premiums, so that the only explanation was that outside markets were underselling St. Louis.

LOVE LORN WOMEN ON CONVICT FARM

They Are All Dusky Amazons and They All Fight Like Tigers.

OAKLEY, Miss., May 16.—A curious sort of lovemaking is that indulged by the female prisoners on the convict farm here. While they never get a chance to hear a word of love from the men they admire, among themselves they discuss their swains and are as jealous of them as though they had been affianced for weeks.

The farm is also an infirmary farm. It is isolated and affords the state plenty of opportunity to care for prisoners, and discipline them, too, if necessary, without their walls reaching the public ear. Here thirteen women work side by side with the seventeen men in the fields—regular field hands. All are colored. They only cultivate 300 acres, most of which is in cotton. There are 1800 acres used for pasture and hog lots for state cattle and hogs and 1000 are rented out to private individuals. Corn, peas, barley and sugar corn are also grown.

The farm is superintended by Maj. W. C. Chatham, a former member of Quantrell's band. He is a strict disciplinarian, but the convicts all like him.

"The women make really the better field hands," said Maj. Cheatham. "They do not plow, but they do everything else. They need punishment, like the men, sometimes, and they get it like the rest of them, but we do not whip so hard nor give so many blows. Only one woman ever tried to get away. We turned the dogs loose, and she was not able to even get off the plantation. Sometimes they get lovesick and we have to haul them up with a round turn. When they get the blues they are hard to handle for a little while, but we bring them around all right. The greatest trouble is the gossiping. In spite of everything they will gossip, and then there is trouble. They will fight among themselves. They fight desperately, too.

"They see the men on the other side, and each picks her sweetheart and they talk about them and discuss their looks. If one says something about a man that another does not like, then there is trouble, and we have to discipline them with the 'beaver tail.' No, there is Lulu O'Neil and Frances May. The latter killed her own child, and has a life sentence. They quarreled over one of the men, and each has a scar on her face. They fought a duel with their table knives, and each slashed the other in the face. I reckon that they would have cut each other to pieces had they not been separated. O, yes, they each got a taste of the 'beaver tail.'"

A big, fat, greasy-looking convict, who weighs about 300, seems to be the favorite of the lot. He looks after the affairs in the men's "yard," and he is seen oftener than the rest. He is lame now and says he has dropsy. He killed another man in a fight over a woman and was sent up for life.

ORE PRICES UNCHANGED.

Sellers Holding Their Products Waiting for Better Figures.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., May 16.—Zinc ore in the Joplin district sold on a $37 basis the past week. Prices were generally reported the same as last week, with sellers inclined to hold the ore. Several lots of high grade ore brought $38.50 and $40 per ton on straight bids. Sellers are in no hurry to sell their product and prefer holding it rather than permit it to enter into competition on a weaker market. The rumored weaker tendency in the metal market which has been steadily reported as quiet, is said to be caused by the backwardness of consumers in the buying market. It is thought they are holding aloof expecting a lower metal market.

There is much new prospecting going on at present in the Joplin district. Many of the old abandoned mines are being cleaned out and are producing pay dirt in paying quantities.

All Gone.

"Did Johnson's purchase include also the good will of the business?"

"There wasn't any good will to it. It was a coal dealer that Johnson bought out!"

TRANSIT SALES A FEATURE

Actions of Missouri and Commonwealth Take Secondary Place.

INACTIVE INDUSTRIALS DURING THE WEEK

The Local Market Seems to be Drifting Into Professional Lines, With the Public Uninformed On Operations.

The past week in local stocks had three features: the weakness in the Traction issues and the erratic actions of both Missouri and Commonwealth Trust. The first was probably the most important, as Transit is the supposed barometer of the local market.

Starting the week at $29, the stock rapidly declined during the period to $26.12½ as a low point, the reason for the decline being strike talk. There was considerable disappointment on the part of the general speculative public when there was no evident inside support to the stock, recognized Transit brokers making but a feeble effort to keep up the price by bidding for small lots when large blocks were on the market for sale. The majority of the low priced stock which was handled during the week went at $26.25, and it looked on Friday as though all of the floating stock had been absorbed, but Saturday showed that there were still some holders left who were willing to part with their stock at the prevailing figures.

The United Railways preferred was in line with the Transit stock and suffered a loss from $80 a week ago to $78 at the short session yesterday. The volume of business transacted in both of these stocks was greater than for some time past. The United Railways 4s had but fairly established themselves as a staple article around $85.50, when the weakness in the junior issues carried the bonds down to $84.50 towards the close of the week.

On Saturday the statement of the officers of one of the labor organizations embracing a branch of the transit employes was printed stating that there was no danger of a strike under the present circumstances. This would have naturally caused a rise in the stock, but it did not do so. Under ordinary conditions this stock, which was selling around $32 a year ago should be worth more now in the face of largely increased earnings, but the lack of authentic information concerning the company's operations and plans has made the speculators wary in handling the stock for speculative purposes. The new bond issue, in connection with the strike talk, did not give increased confidence, and the liberal offerings when there was a weak market scared small holders into parting with their stock. Should the strike rumors prove groundless and the bond issue be shown conclusively to be advantageous to the company, it seems quite reasonable to suppose that the stock should sell for more than present prices.

Well circulated reports that there was an inside pool in Missouri Trust to lift the price had an immediate and short-lived effect in raising the price. The sharp advance from $128 a week ago to $132.25 looked as though some one was interested in "boosting" the price and some of the trades had some evidences of what are technically termed "matched orders." The close of the week showed both less activity and a smaller volume of trading in the stock. The officials of the company state that they have no knowledge of any manipulation of the stock and assign no reason for its activity other than the old story of profitable operations.

Commonwealth Trust had a checkered career. A week ago at $305 and from that figure down to $293 and then back again to $300, with a close yesterday at $299, the reason for the range is hard to account for. Those that claim to know the intrinsic value of the stock say that $297 is it real worth, without counting on its earning value, and with the consolidation with the Colonial an accomplished fact it is hard to surmise what was the cause of the wide range in prices.

Colonial Trust, after the consolidation, showed but little change in price, $197 being the ruling quotation during the early part of the week, with sales at $199 yesterday.

Other trust company issues were not notably active, Germania being but little changed, while the demand for Lincoln Trust around $255 was continued throughout the week.

Banking stocks were but little in evidence, National Bank of Commerce at varying prices being about the only issue that showed any signs of life.

Industrial and miscellaneous stocks were not at all prominent, either from a selling or buying standpoint. Central Coal & Coke had some trading, the majority of the sales being around $64.50, with some bidding for the preferred stock which did not bring forth an offer. A little Missouri-Edison common and preferred changed hands at a small advance for the common. Occasional bids and offers were made for the mercantile stocks, without coming to terms with the exception of some trading in National Candy stock.

Mining stocks showed no life and the bids and offers were made more apparently for the purpose of establishing a quotation than on the expectation of doing business.

If the Transit strike is definitely disposed of, as the indications at present show, there should be a good movement in this stock during the coming week. A fuller statement from the company as to the exact nature of its new bond issue, with a statement of net earnings as well as gross receipts might do a great deal to re-establish this stock in the confidence of the speculators. There is plenty of money in St. Louis to put into any stock that will show reasonable reasons for advance, and the companies that will make their operations more public will undoubtedly see their securities quoted at an advance. New York is now suffering from a period of strictly professional trading, with the outsiders taking little interest, because they do not know what the insiders are doing, and the St. Louis market seems to be drifting into the same rut.

THOUSANDS SEEKING MISSOURI ROBBER

Millersburg Store Raided and Burglar Escaped From Citizens' Posse.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FULTON, Mo., May 16.—A posse with bloodhounds are scouring the country surrounding Millersburg, a village 12 miles north of this city, in search of a man who last night raided the general store belonging to Waters & Coons, and wounded Taylor Carr, one of the men who surrounded the store, and demanded the surrender of the robber.

The shot took effect in the leg, and is not serious. The robber also fired three shots through a window at William Kennell, but none took effect. He then made a dash for liberty through a door, escaping bullets that followed him.

The man was traced a mile, when he took refuge in a barn, from which he afterwards again escaped. Hounds from this city were put on his trail at daylight, and followed him three miles to the farm of Reuben Shyrock, where the man stole a valuable horse and disappeared, the dogs being unable to follow the trail. When discovered in the store the robber was breaking open a money drawer.

The Alabama Suffrage Decision.

From the New Orleans Times-Democrat (Dem.).

It is natural that the extreme pro-negro papers of the North should receive with great sadness of spirit the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Alabama suffrage case, which is against the assault on the suffrage clauses of the new Alabama constitution, whereby the bulk of the negro vote in that state is disfranchised. But it is more in sadness than in anger that they discuss it. The action of the supreme court cannot be criticised, much less attacked. The court wisely kept within its jurisdiction, refused to have anything to do with matters not confided to it, or to be led into the bog and wilderness of politics. The decision states clearly that the question is a political one, for Congress, not the courts, to decide; and what most excites the radical press is that there is no probability that Congress will take up the question. Mr. Crumpacker and his followers may propose to do so, but a majority of the Republicans fight shy of this troublesome negro question.

Hat Etiquette.

From the New York Press.

Tipping the hat is a rare thing among men when there are no women around. A few fine old fellows cherish the habit of tipping to each other and to strangers when introduced, but ordinarily the hand never touches the brim. In business offices there is no sort of etiquette. Men in the sweep and rush of business have no time to give thought to hats. But certain decencies should prevail. On entering a private office look at the head of the occupant. If he has his hat on, keep yours on; if his hat is off, remove yours. The removal of your hat is a compliment and a courtesy, and does not indicate that you are inferior or subservient. Henry H. Rogers, one of the most active of men, being a Standard Oiler, always takes off his hat when he enters a business office.

BANK STATEMENT IS DISCONCERTING

Last Week Was One of Continuous Liquidation in New York.

HEAVY DRAINS ON CREDIT FUND YET CONTEMPLATED

Continued Loan Expansion Sharply Distinguishes This May From Any Corresponding Month of Recent Years.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.—The Evening Post in its Wall street review today says:

After a week of continuous liquidation on the Stock Exchange it is perhaps somewhat disconcerting to find an increase of $5,859,000 in loans on the bank return. That part of the showing cannot, however, be called mysterious. To pay off our foreign borrowings of two months ago, and at the same time provide for various capital issues which were in contemplation, New York's credit fund must be drawn upon substantially.

If, as estimated at the time, our Berlin borrowings of the spring footed up $50,000,000, and if they are being all paid off with money raised in Wall street, then that demand alone might account for the $45,000,000 increase in New York's loans, during the three past weeks.

There is reason for such shifting, even if the New York loans were placed on time. Our Berlin loans paid 6 per cent and could hardly be renewed at a very much lower figure. That market itself lately paid 4½ per cent for two weeks advance of capital. As to the part played in the loan expansion by such local operations as the steel bond underwriting, the approaching Pennsylvania subscriptions, and the "Rock Island-Frisco deal," that is more difficult to determine. They all draw more or less on bank credits.

May Will Prove a Hard Month.

Whatever its cause, the continued loan expansion sharply distinguishes this month of May from any corresponding month of recent years.

Little or nothing happened on stock exchange values until the bank statement, with its $1,037,000 decrease in the surplus, appeared upon the tape. Prices then yielded rather rapidly for a few active stocks, among them St. Paul, Atchison, Louisville and Southern Pacific. The weakness on this occasion was rather obviously a result of professional "bear" operations. St. Paul in particular touched the lowest price since December, 1901. In general prices were little changed.

Pretty much all of what has occurred to disturb Wall street's equanimity this week has been something that was clearly foreshadowed before hand.

All things considered, it may be said that if some incidents of the period are disliked, it is because the remedy for unpleasant conditions are themselves unpleasant.

Much of the same thing may be said of the weakness in the stock market. Six weeks ago Wall street was talking of nothing but undigested securities and agreeing that only the fixing of more inviting prices such as should call foth buying from the general public, would solve the difficulty.

The Public Still Must Stand Aloof.

Such a decline, very tentative in character, occurred. It was not sufficient. The market halted; the public stood aloof, and the deadlock reappeared, varied only by the daily gymnastics of the professional speculator.

After a decent period of fruitless waiting for outside buyers, prices have been put down again, and another test of the public's attitude must be had. It may very profitably be recalled, however, that the would-be sellers of these securities are now at last pursuing their ends on the lines of common sense. If customers desert these people, and goods are left unapplied for in their warehouses, they know well enough what must be done. They must mark down prices until the customer comes back.

They would undoubtedly prefer another recourse, but they know there is no other. The mischief which came to a head last March, in the Wall street market, was caused by deliberate adoption of the plan of keeping up prices arbitrarily on a level where the public certainly would not buy. The natural consequence has been witnessed.

WALL STREET BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK, May 16.—The illness of E. H. Harriman made its influence felt in today's stock market, and this was supplemented by the showing made by the banks, which was interpreted as poor by the trading element.

The weakness of Southern Pacific was directly traceable to the condition of the health of the president of the company.

The stock declined an extreme 1¼, touching a new level for the year. This weakness had some sympathetic effect elsewhere in the market. St. Paul and New York Central also made low record prices for the year. A light demand from the bears to cover shorts made an impression just at the close, which was, in consequence, steady. The nominal increase in the cash item of the banks was as much as was expected.

The fact that today's gold export of $1,250,000 to South America was withdrawn only yesterday and so figured for only one day in the weekly averages, upon which the bank statements are computed, left the probability that some effect of the transaction would be thrown over into next week's showing. The increase in loans was generally regarded as reflecting the further transfer of obligations from foreign to domestic lenders.

London Showed a Hardening.

Today's London discount market showed a hardening tendency, resulting from the paying off of the market's heavy obligation to the Bank of England, and the bank lost over a million dollars in gold, withdrawn for export to South America. This increases the likelihood of further gold exports from New York next week.

The current of prices of stocks has shifted constantly within a narrow range during the whole of the week, but the market has gravitated towards a lower level. There is an occasional spilling out of long stock by tired holders, grown disgusted with the long lethargy of the market. But the professional traders, who do the bulk of the business, show as much hesitation in extending their commitments on one side as on the other. The whole attitude of the speculation is a waiting one, and it is not generally clear what is awaited.

Money continues seasonably easy, and there is no apparent bar to the use of credits in speculation, but speculation still halts.

Influence of West on Wall Street.

Claims are made in the names of Western bankers that the present large loans of Western banks are in part placed in Eastern money markets, and are to mature in the fall periods, when the largest demands for funds to move the crops are expected. It is argued that this will leave them in good position to supply needs for moving crops, without calling on their Eastern correspondents' banks for funds. But the experience of last fall proved that the withdrawing of eastern loans placed directly by Western banks and demands for renewals upon the Eastern banks, were fully equivalent to the usual withdrawal of deposits from Wall street banks.

The course of foreign money markets following the flotation of the $10,000,000 Transvaal loan is not yet clearly defined. It is evident from the week's enormous loan expansion of the Bank of England that its credits were largely relied upon by the subscribers to the loan.

The light export demand for cotton, owing to the high price resulting from the furious cotton speculation, adds to the perplexity of the exchange's situation. The belated completion of the Rock Island absorption of the St. Louis & San Francisco, with its accompanying issue of new Rock Island stock and collateral bonds, calls attention to the fact that various suspended financial projects overhang the situation, which may be announced upon any relaxation in the money market.

The offer on behalf of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy to extend for two years, the maturity of a $20,000,000 bond issue, is regarded as significant for the inopportuneness of the recent time for large financial transactions. Decided influence upon speculative opinion has been caused by the large question which has been a subject of much discussion.

United States 2s declined ⅛ per cent as compared with the closing call of last week.

INCREASED SALE IN RARE STONES

Instalment Plan Idea Largely Responsible for the Greater Demand.

NEW YORK, May 16.—There is to be a strong concentrated effort made by the government, acting in unison with the Diamond Cutters and Importers' Protective Association of America, to stop smuggling into this country of gems, not only by dealers, but by passengers who have bought diamonds and other stones abroad for their own use.

According to the official report just made for the United States Geological Survey of the department of the interior by its expert, Mr. George F. Kunz of this city, there were imported into the United States for the fiscal year precious stones to the value of $26,412,775.

This was 12 times the amount imported during 1868, and 20 times as much as came in during 1888. In conversation on the subject, Mr. Kunz confessed he was at a loss to explain where all this absolutely imperishable property, which was being added to constantly, went. In March, for instance, there was a record importation of $2,871,645 for that month.

Americans, he added, in gems and jewelry, as in all else, now insisted on having the best of everything. There was a market here, therefore, for expensive jewelry and fine stones, and that added to the large amount to which the yearly total grew. The general prosperity of the country helped to their purchase and distributed this detail of luxury over a much wider area here than formerly. In 1897 the importations were $6,276,729; 1898, $10,163,941; 1899, $17,3[illegible],681; 1900, $112,561,588. These values were further enhanced by the setting of these stones when they were put on the market here and the work necessary to make them thus wearable.

In the wholesale jewelry district downtown these large importations make special activity. Mr. Joseph Forsheim, Maiden lane, agreed with Mr. Kunz that the general prosperity and the cultivation of a finer taste among the American buying public were contributing factors to the large importations. This was in regard to the finest grades.

"Men of nice taste nowadays," said he, "do not always buy diamonds, which are from forty to fifty per cent higher in price than they were two years ago. Pearls have doubled in value, and so have emeralds. Rubies are very rare; the demand for fine pearls is very active this year. Now, in the medium grade stones a curious evolution of an American way of doing business has brought about a curious change in the trade and opened up a new and very important avenue of distribution.

"This is the instalment plan. Few outside trade circles can realize to what enormous proportions this has grown and is affecting business to the extent of millions all over the country. It has wiped out the old fashioned fake 'pawnbroker's unredeemed pledge sale' idea. They can no longer do business against it. It brings expensive jewelry within the means of men of moderate income and resources everywhere. In the old time when a man bought a $200 diamond, say, for his wife or sweetheart, it was an event in his life for which he saved and toiled for long. Now if he has any standing or credit in the community in which he lives he can buy the same piece of jewelry on the instalment plan and pay for it by degrees. As I say, no one can realize how widespread this is now. People have come to know that this is a good sort of property to have around. It is a quick asset that can be turned into cash."

STOCKS.

Those interested at present or who contemplate future market operations, write or wire us at once. Remember our prediction that Erie stocks will be the market sensation of 1903.

Only six years ago Union Pacific was selling at $5 per share, Atchison $10, Southern Pacific $14, St. Paul $70. Those who bought at those prices and held them were made independently wealthy. There are several stocks selling today below 50 that we predict will advance as rapidly as those mentioned above. Send at once for our "Bulletin" and "Letters," also our book on trading methods.

Express Messenger Confessed to Theft and Told Where the Money Was Hid.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, May 16.—The mystery surrounding the theft of $20,000 from a safe of the United States Express Co. while being brought from Pottsville to Philadelphia has been cleared up. All the money except $200 was recovered, and a confession was wrung from William Murphy, the suspected messenger. On Saturday night last the robbery was reported to Captain of Detectives Miller, and Detectives Donaghy and McKenty were put on the case.

The detectives traced Murphy's movements from the time he left the express company's office, where he had delivered the safe last Wednesday, up to the time of his arrest on Friday morning. They left not an inch of ground uncovered and then, believing he would confess, they procured a discharge for the prisoner from Magistrate Harrison, who had committed him to Moyamensing prison on Friday in default of bail.

Accompanied by Constable O'Neil of the magistrate's office the detectives took Murphy from the prison to a hotel uptown. He was asked to tell of his movements on the night of the robbery. His story did not tally with the invesigations of Donaghy and McKenty, and finally, the detectives say, he told them he would make a clean breast of the whole affair. He said he had taken the money to a house near Seventh street and Snyder avenue and gave it to a woman there on Wednesday night.

The house was then visited and the woman was confronted with Murphy's story. She readily admitted that the money was there and said it was buried in the cellar. Donaghy and McKenty made a search of the cellar and dug up the treasure. It had been buried two feet under ground and was in an iron kettle.

The money was in the original package, but the seals had been broken, and when the detectives counted it they found it $200 short. Murphy is said to have explained that he had been hard pressed by creditors and used the missing money to pay debts.

Having secured the money the detectives took Murphy back to prison, the magistrate having provided them with the proper commitment papers. He is to have a hearing this morning.

MOTHER'S HYSTERICAL PLEA.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 16.—A most dramatic episode occurred in the criminal court while the closing speeches were being made in the murder case against Joshua and Moultrie Jones for the killing of Tom Howard in this city over a year ago.

While Gen. E. F. Mynatt, one of the attorneys for the prosecution, was making his closing appeal to the jury, the aged mother of Howard, who was present, became hysterical and cried out to the jury for justice. At the request of the judge she was led from the courtroom by her son-in-law, praying as she was half carried from the room that the defendants would be made to suffer for the murder of her son. The scene was so dramatic and the feeling so intense that Gen. Mynatt was unable to conclude his address. Tears came into the eyes of court officials, and the jurors were greatly effected.

This trial involves a Monroe County family feud of years standing, in which the Jones, Howard and McGhee families are involved. Several men have been killed in connection with the feud, Howard being the last victim. He was in the employ of Knoxville as bail bond collector, when he was killed by the two Jones men.

PERFECTLY SANE; YET IS INSANE

Novel Contention of Indiana Attorneys in Murder Case.

BRISTOW, Ind., May 16.—Not since the day that Elizabeth Barbe mixed a cocktail of whisky and corrosive sublimate for her rival in love, Nancy McGuffin, and served two years in prison for her crime, has this part of Indiana been so excited over a case of supposed poisoning it is now, at a time when Mrs. Martha Dixon is charged with the murder of her husband by feeding him arsenic.

She had been indicted for murder in the first degree, but she is not under arrest, because she is on the verge of motherhood.

The testimony before the grandjury brought another man into the case, and the doctors declare that the woman is a good woman from a moral standpoint, but a pervert from a psychological standpoint; and this view of the case will be brought out in her trial as a part of the defense.

The opinion of medical men who have seen and talked with Mrs. Dixon, is, that while it is possible that she may have committed the crime for which she is under indictment, she is not responsible to the law for it.

They say that she is not insane, but is laboring under an illusive impression from a psychological standpoint. The dead man was her second husband and the testimony shows that she was deeply in love with her first husband, and when she met the third man in the case she saw in him the incarnation of her first husband and was led to a feeling of repugnance for her second husband.

Hardest Fight Will Be Theory.

The doctors declare that the woman was in such a state that if any one had suggested that with her aged husband out of the way she and the man in whom she saw the counterpart of her first husband could be happier, it would so work upon her mind that she might commit a murder and yet not realize that she was doing a monstrous wrong.

So far as is known this defense has never been set up in a criminal trial in this state and the attorneys for the state admit that they will have more trouble to combat this theory than they will the denial of the crime.

This hamlet is 13 miles from a railroad. The country is hilly, and Bristow lies in a peaceful valley.

Martha Miles lived with her parents, respectable, well-to-do farmers, five miles from here. She won the love of Emory Dixon, and they lived happily until his death. She was a widow, handsome as ever and with some property.

Not far away lived Napoleon P. Dixon, an uncle of her dead husband. He was 62 years old. He wooed and won his dead nephew's wife, and six years ago they were married. She was a little past 24. So far as the testimony reached the grandjury room, the old man and his young wife after the first few months did not live happily.

Oil Well Driver Proved Winsome.

Some time ago an oil well driver took board at the Dixon home, and there were frequent quarrels betwen husband and wife, and the driller finally went to board with a neighbor.

About March 19 Dixon went to the barn to do some work. He returned in a few minutes suffering the greatest agony from pains in his stomach and violent vomiting. The testimony was that Mrs. Dixon did not send for a physician until the old man's son arrived two days later, and then it was too late. Dixon died March 21. The next day after his funeral Mrs. Dixon qualified as administratrix of her husband's estate, which amounted to about $6000, and at once began proceedings to have the real estate partitioned so that she could get the third allowed her by law, the dead man having left no will.

These hasty proceedings started gossip, and rumors reached the ears of the grandjurymen at the county seat, Cannelton. A large number of witnesses were summoned. The oil well driller, now working near Birdseye, in Dubois County, was sent for, but failed to respond.

Judge Cooke of the Circuit Court instructed Dr. Bennett of the board of health and Dr. Eads, one of the leading physicians, to make an investigation. They talked with Mrs. Dixon, and exhumed the body of her husband. They found indications that led them to believe that the old man had died from arsenical poison, but they took the stomach out, and it was sent to Dr. Geiss at Indianapolis. Ten days ago the grandjury returned an indictment for murder.

There is a division of sentiment and the woman has many strong partisans who do not believe her guilty. State Senator O. C. Minor has been employed to assist State's Attorney Tucker.

TWELVE YEARS FOR ROBBERY

BOLIVAR, Tenn., May 16.—George Carroll, charged with robbing the Whiteville Savings Bank, has been sentenced to 12 years in the state penitentiary. The defendant's attorneys moved for a new trial and an arrest of judgment, which the court overruled. The defendant prayed and was granted an appeal to the Supreme Court. The court ordered the defendant transferred for safe keeping to the Madison County jail, there to await the action of the Supreme Court.

When judgment was pronounced on Carroll, the court ordered him to stand and while the sentence was being passed he sat down and chatted with his attorneys. He seemed little affected at the verdict, and is said to have remarked that if guilty he did not understand why the jury did not sentence him for the full term of 15 years, and he is also said to have remarked that he never expected to go to the penitentiary.

Mrs. Christiana Simonson, who has been claiming to be Carroll's wife, but who swore on the stand that she was not his wife, sat by the defendant during the proceedings, shed tears and seemed much distressed by the verdict. The defendant's counsel insisted on the court giving 30 days to prepare and file a bill of exceptions, which Judge Woods refused, stating that to grant the request would probably prevent the case being tried at the present team of the Supreme Court and would necessitate the defendant lying in jail for 12 months at the expense of the state, and that he saw no reason why the record could [illegible] be made up this week. GREAT OUTPUT OF KLONDIKE GOLD

It Will Amount to More Than $15,000,000 This Season.

TACOMA, Wash., May 16.—Twenty-five millions will be added to the world's gold supply by the clean-ups now in progress in the Klondike, Forty Mile, Atlin and Nome districts. Water is running freely throughout the Klondike, giving miners a supply sufficient to wash out the immense dumps piled up during the winter. The yield of Gold Run, Dominion and Sulphur creeks is larger than anticipated.

Between now and August the Klondike district will ship out $15,000,000 of gold. The Atlin camp will produce $2,000,000 and Forty Mile $3,000,000. The Chicken and the Creeks of Forty Mile will yield the greatest output in their history, and Nome will produce at least $5,000,000. The output of these districts will be still greater in another year, when larger hydraulic plants, now being installed, are in full operation.

Gov. Congdon and Member of Parliament Ross of Yukon Territory are urging the Ottawa government to suspend the duty on American machinery for two years with the object of encouraging the introduction of American hydraulic and dredging machinery in British Yukon. Canadian manufacturers cannot now furnish this machinery, which is needed to increase the gold output to the maximum.

The announcement of the suspension is expected daily from Ottawa, in which event all mining machinery, which the United States can produce, will be quickly bought for shipment to Klondike, Atlin, Stewart river and other British camps.

CUT WIFE WITH AN AX

SANDERSON, Tex., May 16.—A Mexican section hand returned home about 6 o'clock this morning and found another man, also a Mexican, in the room with his wife. He returned to the wood pile, secured an ax and at once proceeded to the house. Entering, he cut his wife in seven places about the head and face, and cut the man in 15 places.

Leaving them for dead or dying, he attempted to escape, but was captured by a deputy sheriff who lodged him in jail. After remaining in jail a short time the prisoner attempted suicide by beating himself over the head with a piece of stove wood, cutting 19 deep gashes on the scalp and in one place beating the scalp into a pulp.

This evening all are doing fairly well, but doubt is expressed by the physician as to the recovery of the wife.

WAS THE WORK OF MAD MOMENT

Maryland Man Believes John Wilkes Booth Was Insane.

BALTIMORE, May 16.—The statement of a New York man to the effect that John Wilkes Booth before the assassination of President Lincoln had spoken of his intentions to James A. Corby, the late millionaire, who in turn confided his secret to Rev. John Hennessy, a well-known priest in St. Joseph, have attracted considerable attention of late. In the story of the kidnaping plot, as told by Mr. Samuel B. Arnold, one of the Lincoln conspirators, the statement was made that until the day of the actual assassination, the writer believed, the subject of the assassination had never been considered, and Mr. Arnold advanced strong reasons for his belief.

In order to learn the views of Mr. Arnold as to the story of the New York man, a clipping was sent to him at his home, near Friendship, Anne Arundel County, and the following interesting letter was received in reply:

"The clipping inclosed of the 4th inst. received. I have carefully perused the New Yorker's story. In the first place, it is not likely that John Wilkes Booth would have communicated to a perfect stranger such a startling disclosure, and, secondly, should he have done so, and Millionaire Corby failing to make known to the proper authorities the affair, makes him to all intents and purposes as guilty in the crime as Booth himself. Strange such a story remained untold for nearly 40 years before being given to the nation. The writer of the article had made it known to his friends; therefore, it was no secret, and they could have told this tale without waiting for the death of Millionaire Corby, whom probably none of them knew personally.

"I stand by the confession of those in the crime that assassination was not contemplated until sprung upon them at 8 o'clock in the evening, and carried into effect at 10 o'clock the same night. I am constrained to believe that Booth was at the time he committed his unholy crime, demented, brought about through the collapse of the southern cause, for the success of which every pulsation of his heart throbbed. He was naturally erratic and of a visionary mind, and the South being crushed crazed him at the time. This is my firm and fixed conviction. The New York story is but another George affair, the man who suicided sometime ago, pronouncing himself John Wilkes Booth. The West is productive of many starting stories.

"Sincerely yours,
"SAMUEL B. ARNOLD."

"SOME ST. LOUIS POLICEMEN CAN SHOOT"

By Rose Marion

Capt. Creecy, Who Shows Patrolmen How to Pick Off Burglars, Proves That Something More Than Aiming at Bull's Eye Is Necessary.

BY ROSE MARION.

Some St. Louis policemen can shoot.

This is a serious statement.

I do not mean by it that members of the St. Louis police force possess sufficient strength to pull the triggers of revolvers. That's discharging firearms, not shooting.

A person can shoot when he can hit the object at which he aims.

This was not always true of St. Louis policemen. They weren't trained from their babyhood with cap pistols. They weren't brought up on a course of air rifles, pop guns and blank cartridges. Some of them never even owned a revolver until they went on the force.

They didn't have to take an examination in shooting before they were given positions. They were just handed a revolver, and they knew from their manuals that they were expected "to shoot when the occasion required."

Some of them kept their revolvers for display, preferring to do extra sprinting rather than risk discharging weapons over which they had little control.

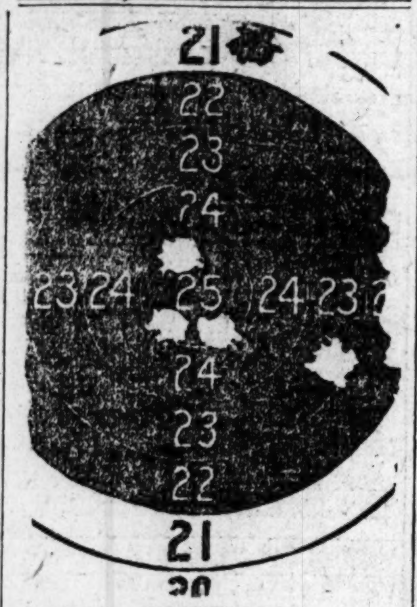
The last two paragraphs refer to past history in the police dapartment. Things are different now.

Reason—target practice.

Practice Once in Twelve Days.

Every 12 days each policeman practices target shooting at a range maintained for the use of policemen. They fire five shots at targets seven and one-quarter inches in diameter from a distance of 36 feet.

The targets are scaled. When a bullet hits within the central circle, five-eighths of an inch in diameter, the score is 25, which means perfect. Around the central circle are ten other circles.



CAPT. CREECY'S BEST SCORE

Bullets that do not strike within the central circle, but which hit somewhere within the other circles, score relatively, a point being taken off for each circle away from the center. The last circle counts 15. Shots outside of that do not count. The sum of the five shots makes the score.

When the policemen began target practice, less than two years ago, their bullets hit any place in the 225 square feet of wood back of the target. Some of them were practiced shots. Most of them were not.

Today the wood back of the target is about 120 square feet in size. It is not covered with wild shots.

St. Louis policemen have learned to shoot since their early lessons.

Their records are kept and compared. Captains and sergeants practice with the patrolmen.

Capt. Creecy believes that three things are necessary for a good revolver shot—steady nerves, good eyesight and much practice.

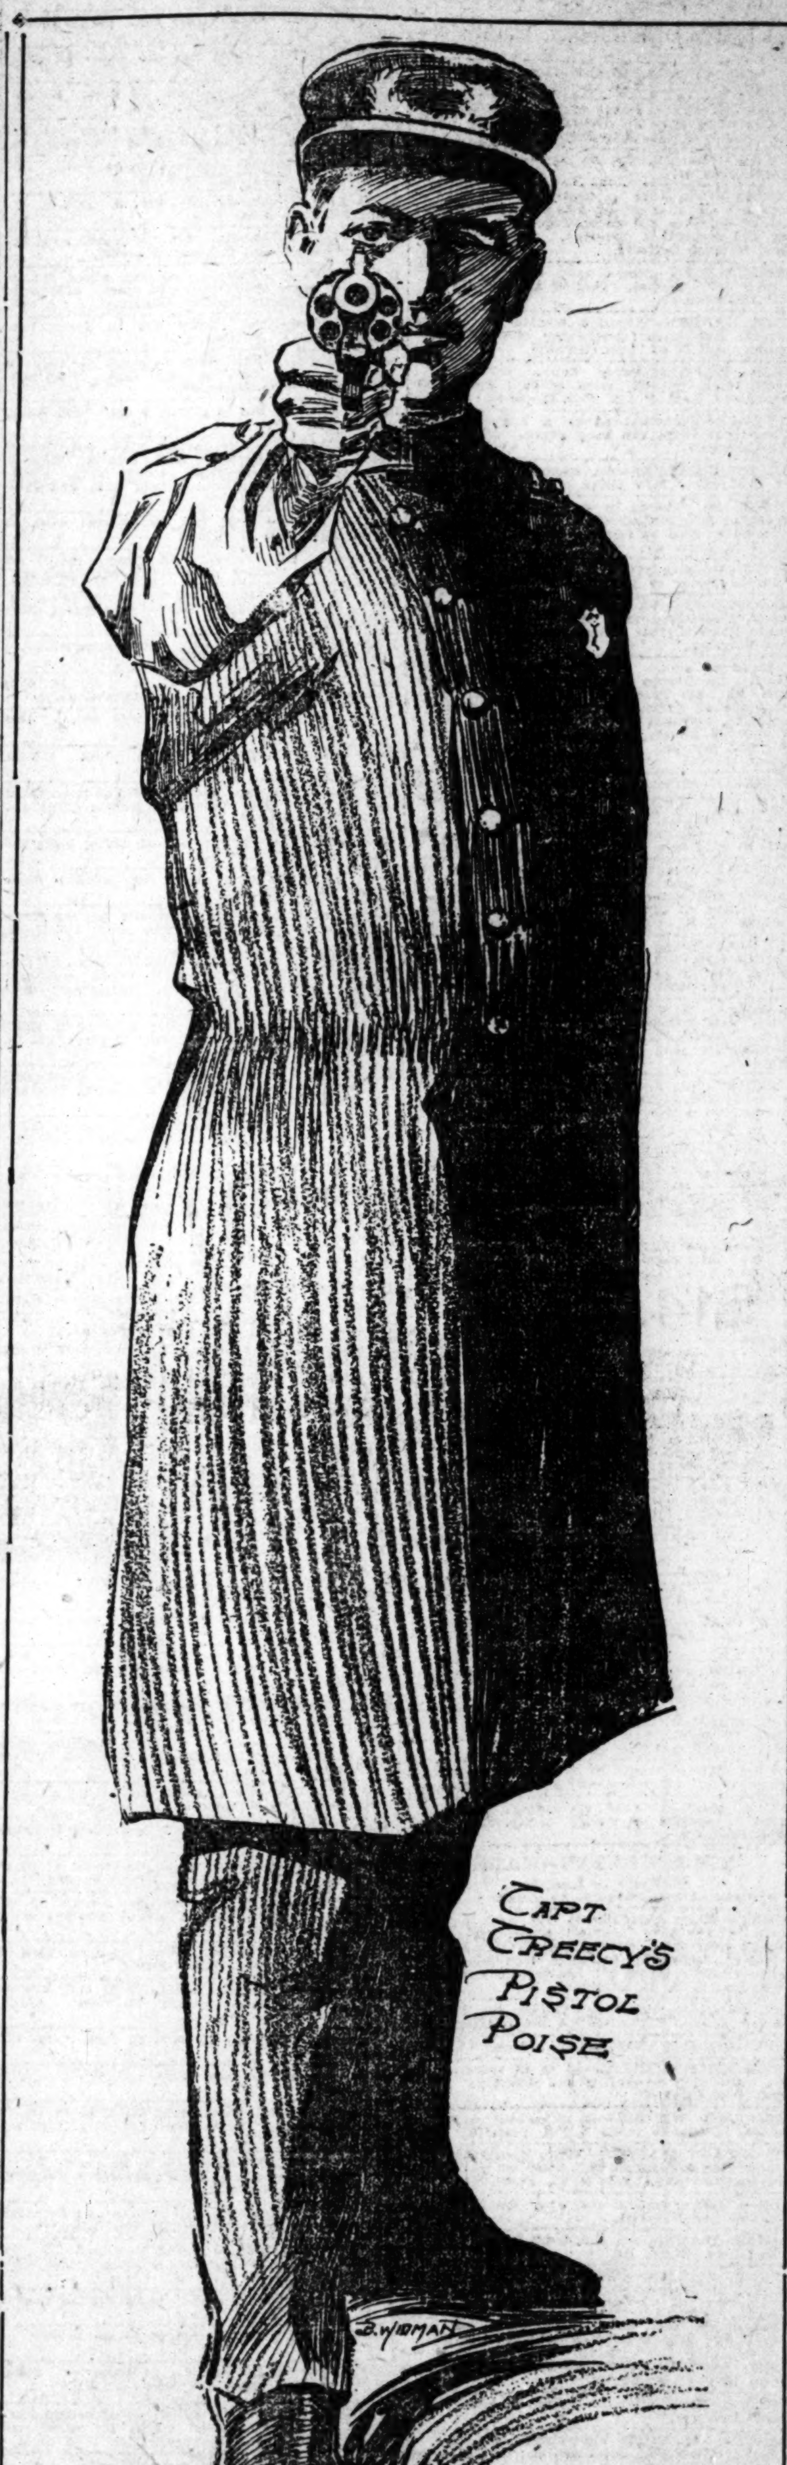
How to Face the Target.

Capt. Creecy uses a 44-caliber revolver in shooting. I begged him to tell me just what one should do in order to be a good shot. I lifted his big revolver myself and tried to aim, but I couldn't hold it out straight.

Capt. Creecy took the revolver from my hands and showed me how he stands when he faces the target.

Straight up, in ordinary position, with left eye closed and revolver held not far out from the body.

I wanted to know how to aim at targets in order to get the best results, but Capt. Creecy said there was no particular rule for such procedure.



The revolver and the kind of powder must be taken into consideration.

Then, with a target up in front of us, Capt. Creecy showed me where he had to aim with one of his revolvers in order to hit the center. Where do you think

With another revolver he must aim at the bottom of the target just below the center. The force of the powder throws the bullet up, and causes it to hit the center.

A low aim is a good thing, because it gives you a full view of the black center, and has a tendency to make your shot truer.

Capt. Creecy's record is 467 for four rounds. His close competitors are: Wells, 448; M. Gibbons, 444; Dryden, 444; Ball, 437; Sergt. Logan, 435; Hayhurst, 411; Degnan, 397; E. H. Miller, 395; Rodenbaugh, 390; Seers, 358; Hasson, 322.

Sears and Hasson have shot three times. It is expected that Sears will lead the whole squad after his fourth round.

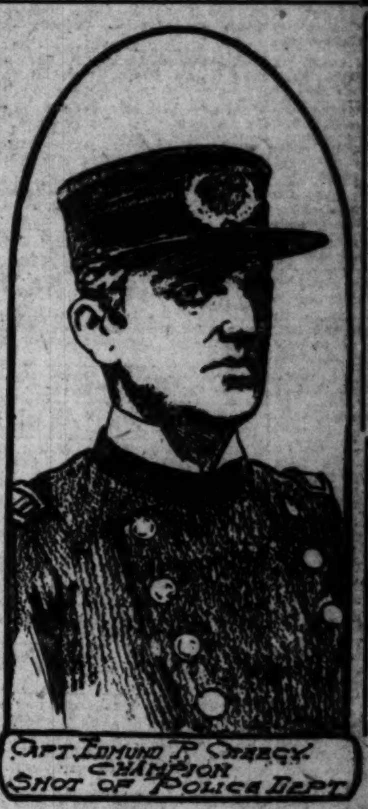
Sunshine Club's High Standard.

These men will probably be the competitors for the commissioners' medal at the close of this series of shoots.

The range is on the second floor of the Chestnut street station. In a little court at the side of the station the men practice before they go upstairs. The records made in this place are better than those made in the shoot that counts.

The members of the "Sunshine" club practice in the basement of the building. The club is composed of Sergts. Speed and Driscoll, Officers Maupin, Hagan, O'Gora, Megan, Canton.

Members must make an average of 112 in three rounds, or they are released from the club. The club range gives evidence of the accurate shooting of its members. Few shots are wide of the circle covered by the bull's eye.



CAPT. EDMUND P. CREECY. CHAMPION SHOT OF POLICE DEPT.

I shot a round at the Sunshine range Saturday afternoon. My score wouldn't look bad in print, but I had two coaches, two referees and loads of encouragement.

My revolver, borrowed for the occasion, didn't kick, and one of the coaches fixed it so it wasn't hard to fire.

I know just how hard it is to hit the bull's eye, also how the sight has a delightful habit of dancing up and down. Therefore I know whereof I speak when I say St. Louis policemen can shoot.

LABOR WAR MAY FOLLOW HAIRCUT

Barbers' Union Charged With Disloyalty in Shearing Capitalist's Head.

RUTLAND, Vt., May 16.—John N. Woodfin, president of the Lincoln Iron Works, bank director and one of the leaders of the smart set, has upset the entire community by getting his hair cut without the consent of the labor unions. The question as to who sheared Mr. Woodfin's locks is likely to cause serious trouble among the labor men.

About a year ago the employes of the iron works struck and enlisted the sympathy of every union in the city. They are still striking.

Some time after the fight started the head of the iron workers union issued an edict prohibiting any union man from doing any work for Mr. Woodfin.

Blacksmiths refused to shoe his horses, painters refused to paint his buildings and finally the barbers refused to cut his hair. The last act was a telling blow, as Mr. Woodfin is a man of much personal dignity and has not been in the habit of brooking interference with his private affairs.

Mr. Woodfin went to every barber shop in the city and offered all prices, but it was no use. He couldn't get a hair cut or a shave for love or money. Finally he was forced to go to Bellows Falls, 57 miles to the south.

When he figured up that night he found he had spent $2.28 carfare, 50 cents for his dinner and 10 cents in tips. This brought the price of the hair cut up to $2.83, and Mr. Woodfin was angry.

He determined to get his hair cut in Rutland or die in the attempt. While his wife drove to a nearby town to get the horses shod, Mr. Woodfin left his residence. An hour later he appeared with his locks shorn and wearing a triumphant smile.

James W. McIntyre, president of the Barbers' Union, got his eye on Mr. Woodfin and started an investigation.

Several excited meetings were held, and finally a man named Baker accused a certain barber. This barber proved an alibi and suggested that Mrs. Woodfin had done the job. The hair cut itself refuted this charge, and the mystery deepened.

MATCH CAUSES EXPLOSION

T. J. Malone Burned in Effort to Locate Leak in a Gas Pipe—Building Damaged.

Thomas J. Malone of 114 South Channing avenue struck a match in an effort to locate the leak in a gas pipe in the cellar occupied by Henry Brady at 2815½ Market street yesterday evening. An explosion followed and Malone was seriously burned about the face, hands and body. He was taken to the City Hospital, but refused to remain there after being treated by the physician in charge.

The building was damaged to the extent of $800, and fixtures worth $50 were ruined. The fire department was called out and extinguished the flames.

CHICAGO SOCIETY STIRRED.

Frederick L. Champlin a Leader, Suddenly Sues for Divorce.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, May 16.—Frederick L. Champlin, society leader and clubman, and one of the heirs to the $3,000,000 estate left by his father, the late George W. Champlin, board of trade operator, whose widow lives in a mansion at 4343 Drexel boulevard, has brought suit for divorce against Jennie Douglas Champlin.

The bill, which was filed last month, was suppressed and the matter did not become public until yesterday. In the bill a Dr. Kennedy, formerly of New York, is named, and the plaintiff asks leave to insert other names later. The suit will be fought to a finish, and sensational revelations are promised. The wife says it is a case of too much mother-in-law.

MISSOURI MULE, STAR OF SMOKER

Exiled Missourians in New York Honor Him at Big "Meet."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Missouri, and its mules and its other distinguished citizens were pleasingly presented tonight for the further admiration of mankind generally and particularly those Missouri aliens whom business has exiled to this city.

It was in the Myrtle Room of the Waldorf-Astoria that the Missouri Society of this city was the host at a big smoker. Nearly all the resident and visiting Missourians were present.

The affair was designated as a "mule meet." Its chief result was a fine old reunion of friends and a vociferous boosting of former Gov. David R. Francis for president.

The menu card was a poster three feet long by two and a half feet wide.

Conspicuous at the top was a mammoth mule, while the decorations thereon were notices to whom it may concern, to the effect that barley, corn and fodder were free to all who paid the entrance fee; together with the admonition that "jackasses must pay for any fancy drinks consumed."

Head hostlers and sub-head hostlers were plentiful and their orders were to see that each mule reached the trough at least once. Their work in that direction was easy money; not so when it came to preventing thirsty ones from foundering.

Dr. I. N. Love, foremerly of St. Louis, presided and Mr. Florence D. White was toastmaster. Bainbridge Colby spoke on "Bribery in Cities" and eulogized St. Louis public men as being the leaders of all America in their hercu'ean task of overturning corruption in public office.

Dr. S. G. Gant of St. Louis, Henry Wollman, Gilias Allison and others spoke.

Songs became infectious early and the inevitable "Mr. Dooley" was cleverly improvised for the occasion to boom Gov. Francis. The words ran about this way, though they sometimes strolled away and more often slipped a note or two:

The Democratic party is now somewhat at sea;
It thinks it sees a President in old man Grover C.,
Now, if Gorman, Hill or Grover find they haven't time to run,
There's a man out in the West they can put behind the gun.

REFRAIN.

And it's Francis, Mr. Francis, etc.

Henry Wollman's speech was a defense of St. Louis against the absurd charges of failure in entertaining the President, diplomats, governors and others at the dedicatory exercises of the Exposition.

He asserted, amid cheers, that a warm reception was accorded all strangers within the gates of the city, and closed his remarks with the declaration that the "East don't understand the West anyway."

Among the other Missourians present were: Henry W. Walker, Fred H. Wilson, W. H. McAllister, Sam Raglan, Sam Moffett, Hugh Corby Fox, Hamilton Gamble, Burton Thompson, C. F. Harrison, Wm. Hepburn Russell, Jos. G. Hendrix, J. H. Gwynn, George W. Daniels, William C. Chase, Ed G. Pringle, J. Stanley Todd, Jos. Garneau, Wm. H. Howe, Otto Schulenberg and Frank E. Roth.

PRESENTATION TO DR. RUNGE.

Asylum Employes Celebrate Superintendent's Reappointment.

At last Thursday evening's entertainment at the insane asylum the employes testified their appreciation of Dr. Runge's character and achievements by presenting him with a handsome diamond stud.

Dr. Greiner, assistant superintendent, made the presentation speech, in which he spoke of the asylum as second to none of its kind in the country and of Dr. Runge as one of the foremost alienists. Dr. Runge in response spoke feelingly of the great help he had received from all the employes to whose hearty co-operation was due the high reputation the institution had gained since he became superintendent, eight years ago.

The employes of the asylum are very much gratified at Dr. Runge's reappointment and confirmation.

HEARTBREAK KILLS BEREAVED MOTHER

Mrs. Mathilda Johnson Falls Dead Before Son's Coffin.

Mrs. Matilda Johnson died of a broken heart yesterday, beside the dead body of her son, Arthur Johnson.

The attachment between mother and son was strong. Each lived for the other, apparently, and when the son died Friday morning the mother drooped.

Yesterday morning, as she stood beside his dead body, silently grieving, she suddenly grasped at her heart with her hands.

Relatives in the next room saw her topple and hastened to her support. They bore her to a couch and sent a messenger for a physician.

Long before the physician arrived Mrs. Johnson was dead.

Last night two coffins lay side by side in the little parlor of the home of the late Arthur Johnson, 209 Soulard street. One bore the remains of the son; the other held the body of the old mother, whose heart strings snapped when her son died.

Ever since Arthur Johnson was a boy he was the object of his mother's deep solicitude. Until he married they were constantly together, but the son's marriage did not separate them; it only added a daughter to the family fold.

Strongest Tie Bound Them.

Friends of the family say an unusual attachment existed between mother and son. When he left her to set up a home of his own, she seemed to know when he was ill or distressed, and she was always by his side when he was in trouble. In the same manner the son felt every difficulty that assailed his mother, and whenever he felt that she was in trouble he hurried to her side.

About a week ago Arthur Johnson was taken ill. At first it seemed a case of pleurisy, but it soon developed into pneumonia, and within 24 hours he was in danger. The very night he was taken ill his mother went to his bedside. She was summoned by no human agency. She said she simply knew her boy was in need of her aid.

Mrs. Arthur Johnson, the widow of the dead man, often marveled at this strange psychological tie between mother and son.

"All during his illness," said Mrs. Johnson, "she watched over him. Even when he was otherwise unconscious he knew whether she was present or absent. When he died she closed his eyes and bade him good-by. But she seemed to die with him. She left the house in a daze. Saturday morning she came back. She went into the room where he lay, and stood looking at his face for a long time, occasionally kissing it, as if in farewell.

"The family was sitting in the adjoining room, watching her last farewell. Suddenly she put her hand to her heart and started to fall. We caught her and laid her on a sofa, and one of the men was sent for the physician who had attended my husband through his illness. He examined her, and said she had died of a broken heart."

Mrs. Johnson was 60 years of age, and lived with her husband at 2223 Osage street.

Arthur Johnson was formerly a policeman and resigned from the force last January. He was an athlete, and belonged to the Century and Western rowing clubs.

Mother and son will be buried side by side. The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon. Members of several of the moulders' unions, of which Arthur Johnson was a member, will act as pallbearers, and the remains will be followed to the grave by the members of nearly all the rowing associations in the city.

DYNAMITE IN THE RIVER

Laborer Says the Skiff Upset, Causing Loss of 1800 Pounds of the Explosive.

William Rose floated down the Mississippi river on a skiff with 1800 pounds of dynamite, and on reaching Ste. Genevieve, Mo., reported that the boat had capsized, throwing the explosive into the river.

Burke Brothers, contractors of Ste. Genevieve, by whom Rose was employed, reported the matter to the St. Louis police and requested that his story be investigated.

Rose purchased the dynamite from the Explosive Supply Co. in the Rialto building. The Burke Brothers do not believe that it was lost in the river. "WE'LL HAVE BEST SCHOOL IN WORLD"

Samuel Cupples Says Washington University Will Be Unrivalled.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 16.—"If money can do it I intend to establish in St. Louis the finest school of engineering and technology in the world."

This statement was made by Samuel Cupples, the millionaire woodenware manufacturer of St. Louis, just before he sailed for Naples on the steamship Lahn today. Mr. Cupples and Robert Brookings, his partner, have already given to Washington University, the institution they propose to develop to such a tremendous extent, at least $4,000,000.

"I think the West should be built up by western men," Mr. Cupples said in explaining the ideals toward which he is working.

"We should have an institution in St. Louis which will provide for capable men, be they rich or poor, the very highest grade of instruction in engineering, both civil, mining and electrical."

Mr. Cupples was largely instrumental in founding what is known as the Manual Training School of St. Louis, an elementary technological school. He founded 17 free scholarships there for worthy boys of poor parents, and he has established 12 free scholarships in Washington University, which he hopes will be won by young men who have been trained in the Manual School.

"Mr. Brookings is giving his entire time to the university," continued Mr. Cupples, "and he and I have made up our minds to devote the rest of our lives to its building up and development.

"We do not seek to invade the field of Chicago University, for that pays more particular attention to the academic side of instruction. We are interested in the academic and the literary, but above all things we want the best engineering school in the world.

"The best institution of the kind in the country today is the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Boston. It is just such an institution as that, only larger and more elaborately equipped, both mechanically and in its faculty, that we intend to build up at St. Louis. And we will have the best school of its kind in the world, if money can get it."

TITLE TO $72,000,000 CLEARED

Settlement of Carmen Estate in California Courts Banishes Clouds from Vast Land Holdings.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OAKLAND, Cal., May 16.—Final decrees of distribution were ordered today by Judge Hall in the estates of Benjamin R., Elizabeth and Frank Carmen, father, mother and son.

By the decrees, title to land grants around the city of Mazatlan, Mexico, valued at $72,000,000, have been cleared. On the final probate of these estates, industrial enterprises in Mazatlan, especially railroad enterprises, have been hanging as the land grants were all along the railroads, and no one could get clear title until the properties had gone through probate.

Benjamin Carmen was the American consul at Mazatlan, where he died in 1886, leaving a valuable estate, consisting mostly of land grants to his widow, his son, Frank, and his two daughters, Louise and Militia, who have since married officers in the United States navy.

In 1889 the son died, and his share of the estate went to the widow. In 1892 Mrs. Carmen died in Paris, and the daughters were left the sole heirs.

Becoming discouraged at the long litigation, the daughters deeded the Mexican lands to Mrs. Mary Louise B. Owen of Baldwinsville, N. Y., to whom the property was distributed today by Judge Hall.

EMBEZZLER BLEW HIMSELF UP.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MUSCATINE, Io., May 16.—After being detected in an embezzlement of $125 of government money, Postmaster Richard Hedges of Kossuth, Io., overcome with remorse, blew himself, his postoffice and his store building into atoms with gunpowder.

A week ago Hedges reported to his townsmen that he had been robbed, but investigation revealed the fact that he had appropriated money belonging to the government and had concocted the story of [illegible] to conceal the theft.

GYPSY'S WORDS CAUSE WEDDING

Freddie Koenig and Miss Happie Pratte Fulfilled Fortune Teller's Prophesy.

Mrs. Pauline Smith and a fortune teller are responsible for the marriage of Freddie Koenig of 1322 Olive street and Miss Happie Pratte of De Soto, Mo., in Belleville, Ill., at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

They arrived in Belleville in a carriage from St. Louis after the marriage license office had closed, and while looking about for relief meet a party of young men, who hunted up the clerk, secured them a license and saw them safely married.

The determination of the pair to be married was rather sudden. They met for the first time at the house of Mrs. Pauline Smith in St. Louis Thursday night. So deep was the impression made by each upon the other that they met again by appointment Friday evening and decided to take a car ride to Forest Park Highlands.

While wandering about the gardens there they came upon the tent of a gypsy fortune teller and decided to have the sybil read their fates in their hands. They crossed the palm of the mystic with silver. She told Miss Happie that she would be married before she was 20 years old.

Mr. Koenig entered the gypsy's tent with some trepidation, again crossed the palm with silver, and was told that he would marry before he had passed his thirtieth year.

"I will have to hurry," said Mr. Koenig, "because I will 30 Sunday."

When Mr. Koenig left the gypsy tent and joined Miss Happie, he told her of the strange message the fortune teller had given him.

"Isn't it funny," he remarked. "She said I would be married before I am 30, and do you know my thirtieth birthday will be next Saturday?"

"That is strange," replied Miss Pratte, "That fortune teller is the most remarkable person. She told me I would be married before I was 20 years old. My twentieth birthday will be next Sunday."

Before Mr. Koenig and Miss Pratte reached home that night they decided that it would be neither wise nor politic to give the lie to so perspicacious a fortune teller. So they went to Belleville to prove the gypsy true.

HURRAH FOR SUNDAY PICNICS

Weather Man Bowie Promises the Best of Conditions for Today's Outings.

Good news for those jaded with the week's work. All plans for Sunday holiday making may be carried out. This is stated with certainty by Mr. Bowie. The sun will be in jolly mood, and smile happily from a clear blue sky.

THINK THAT MAN IS TRYING TO FLIRT

"Clear. Temperature slightly higher, with fresh southerly winds," is the way it is put officially.

The western part of the state will not be so lucky. The residents out there will have to interpose umbrellas between themselves and the realms of Santos-Dumont at intervals during the day.

Showers are to be their portion.

Still farther West, in the genuine wild West, the mountaineers of western Montana and Idaho will scarcely complain of the heat. They will have a chance to pelt each other with snow which fell there Saturday.

It might be well to listen carefully on Sunday for unusual noises. The river is to rise steadily for 24 hours. It has been suggested that possibly the irrepressible shrieks of joy from the [illegible] may reach St. Louis.

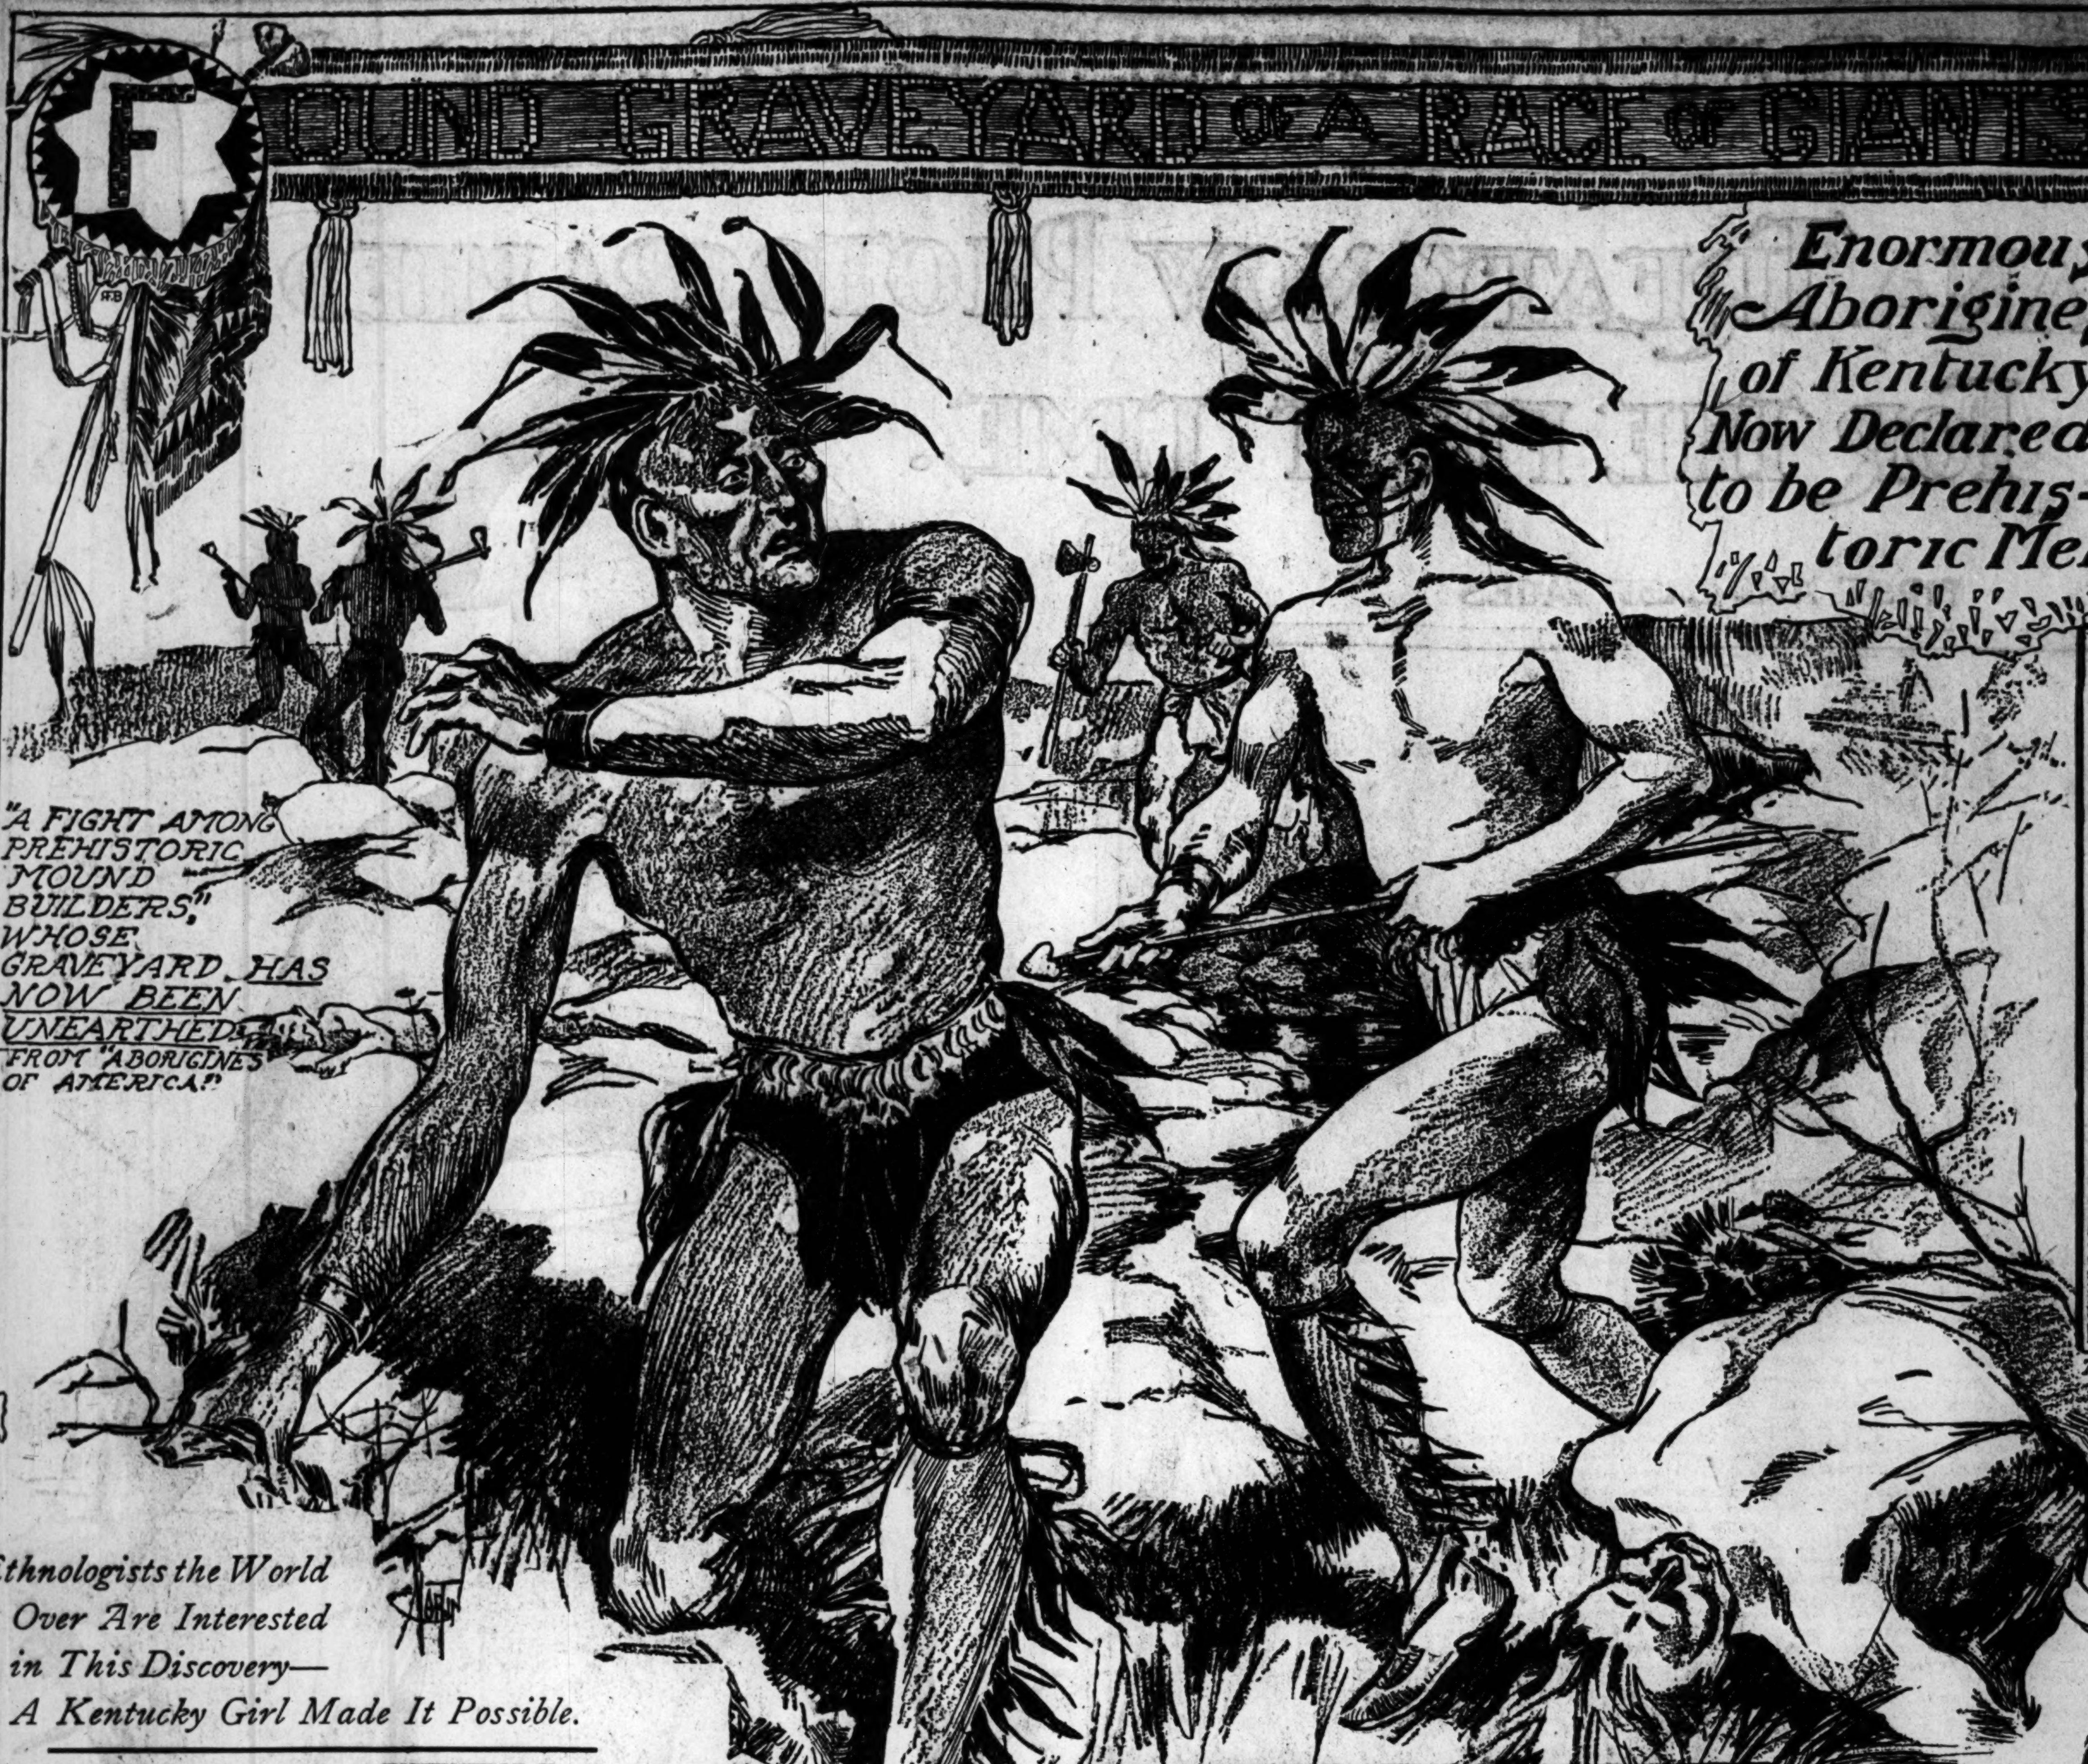
FOUND GRAVEYARD OF A RACE OF GIANTS

Enormous Aborigines of Kentucky Now Declared to be Prehistoric Men.



"A FIGHT AMONG PREHISTORIC MOUND BUILDERS," WHOSE GRAVEYARD HAS NOW BEEN UNEARTHED. FROM "ABORIGINES OF AMERICA."

SKELETONS OF TWO GIANTS FOUND SIDE BY SIDE IN A ROCK CUT GRAVE.

THIS SKELETON MEASURED 6 FEET 8 INCHES AND THE ORIGINAL GIANT WAS PROBABLY TALLER.

Ethnologists the World Over Are Interested in This Discovery—A Kentucky Girl Made It Possible.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., May 14.

SCIENTISTS the world over are astonished at the remarkable discovery in this county, a few days ago, of the graveyard of a race of prehistoric giants, whose bones, after the lapse of centuries, have been disinterred. About 150 skeletons of persons of giant size have been taken out.

An expedition led by Prof. Warren K. Morehead, curator of the Department of Archaeology in Phillips Academy at Andover, Mass., has just completed a preliminary search. The result is that now by the upturning of the sod we know that the mound-builders were like. At last prehistoric man, in his giant size, stands revealed, a monster of strength and vigor, powerful, with huge fangs in his head whereby he tore the raw flesh he feasted on and with thews and sinews of a size unknown today.

These were not the remains of Indian giants that have now been found. The queer shape of the skulls of all Indians, establishes the fact that they were of another and earlier race.

Perhaps they were white men who lived in the Mississippi valley 100,000 years ago. They may have antedated the Indians by many centuries. In their dress it is assumed that these mound-builders somewhat resembled the Indians, wearing feathers and ornamenting themselves with war paint. Their implements in many cases are like those of the Indians, although in Kentucky a few days ago, tools were found beside the giant remains whose use was unknown.

Thus a discovery has been made which has set the ethnological world agog, and when the search is prosecuted further, still more startling finds may be made.

THROUGH the enthusiasm of an intelligent young Kentucky girl, Miss Mollie Hall, this important discovery of prehistoric remains was made. Miss Hall learned some time ago that on the farm of Mr. James Willis, near Hopkinsville, the plowshare had turned up fragments of human bones. She investigated, learning that there appeared to be a very ancient cemetery on the farm. These facts she communicated to Prof. Morehead, who was so deeply interested that he immediately arranged a trip to Kentucky.

Prof. Morehead, with a corps of competent assistants, set out one morning from the hotel at Hopkinsville to begin excavation. Obtaining the consent of Mr. Willis, they dug into the new turned soil at the points where the bone fragments had been found. The picks had gone down but a few feet when one of the excavators struck a stone slab. This was strange. There was no surface stone in the vicinity. The slab rang with a hollow sound, indicating that there was an opening underneath. Prof. Morehead, with the assistance of two or three men, lifted the broad slab and found that it was the covering for a narrow cell of similar slabs, in which lay the bones of a man nearly seven feet tall.

The digging party was astounded. Care[illegible] lifting the skeleton, bone by bone, [illegible] its place, the men laid it together on the surface of the ground, each bone in its proper place. All were amazed at its size.

"That skeleton belonged to a member of a race of giants," said Prof. Morehead, "and it has lain in that grave for many centuries. I believe that we have discovered a cemetery of prehistoric man."

Digging away, nine other amazingly tall skeletons were unearthed. After a hearty meal and a discussion of the discovery, Prof. Willis and his party returned to town with their precious relics, which they handled with extreme care, some of the bones being quite crumbly.

The next morning, bright and early, the party returned to the farm and resumed the excavations. All day the diggers worked. After 12 hours of labor they had disinterred 82 more skeletons.

Day after day Prof. Morehead's party toiled on the farm, each day bringing to light more relics. Nearly 200 graves were dug up. The secrets of past ages were opened and light poured back into the centuries long dark and mysterious. History's searchlight was turned upon the prehistoric.

Many most interesting facts were learned. In some of the graves were the implements of war and peace used by the giant race. Some of the weapons were carved of flint; rude they are, to be sure, but carved with exceeding skill.

In nearly every grave a clay bowl was found. Some of these bowls have a gallon capacity whilst others will hold scarcely a quart, but all evidently had been supplied with something good to eat for the delectation of the spirit of the dead. In each bowl were several mussel shells, highly polished—the spoons of the ancient giants. Most of the bowls were provided with handles, which fact shows that the civilization of the giants had progressed beyond the mere utility stage, for a handle may be classed as a luxury.

That the ladies, likewise the gentlemen, of those prehistoric times delighted in ornamentation of their persons is proved by the discovery of various ornaments in the graves. Wooden beads were there, having withstood the lapse of centuries. Disks cut from cannel coal, with holes drilled through the center of each, probably had been strung together for ornamentation—perhaps as necklaces to grace the belles of those days. Other ornaments were found, made of stone.

There were pipes also. Much skill in carving these stone pipes was evident. The pipes always carried a figure of a man or a woman, in some position. Queer implements and ornaments intended to hold feathers were also found.

The graves were not regularly laid out. Some face one way and some another. In most graves several persons were buried, space economy being apparent. Sometimes two persons were laid with their heads in the same direction, then another placed in the same grave with his head pointing the other way.

Near the hand of each man was placed the weapon common to him in life, so that his spirit might be ready for whatsoever of conflict arose beyond the grave.

Top, bottom, sides and ends of each grave were protected by thin slabs of stone, which showed no evidence of having been cut or split, and the source of these slabs is still a mystery. Some of these grave-cells were built so short that the bones of the dead had to be broken in order to make the bodies fit into the receptacles. Several skeletons were found with bones thus broken, their legs apparently having been doubled under. All the graves are exceedingly narrow and it is evident that the bodies were crowded into the space. Earth sifting in between the seams of the slabs had filled each grave. When the top stone was lifted it was found that this earth completely covered the skeletons, and it was removed with small hand trowels.

Many of the larger bones are in a state of excellent preservation. The small bones of the hands and feet, however, crumbled to dust when exposed to the air after so many centuries. The enamel of the teeth preserved those interesting parts from decay, and the excavators were startled to find splendid rows of teeth, perfectly sound and white, gleaming from the blackened jawbones of these disinterred ancients. The teeth, unusually large, suggested the size of the men who, in past ages, used them for rending the flesh of beasts and the nuts and vegetables of the land.

HOW THE REMAINS OF THREE OF THE GIANTS WERE FOUND AND PHOTOGRAPHED.

Prof. Morehead is of the opinion that the skeletons belong to a race of ancient mound builders, perhaps contemporaneous with the men who built the great mounds of St. Louis and of Cahokia, across the river from the World's Fair city.

The scientists who were in Hopkinsville and its vicinity inspecting these relics stated that the skeletons were not those of ordinary American Indians, inasmuch as the back of the skull would have been flattened had they been Indians. It was the custom of the Indians to bind their babes to boards, to be slung on their mother's backs, and the board nearly always caused a flattening of the back of the tender skull. These Christian County skulls are all normally shaped.

It is believed by some persons that a battle was fought near the spot where the prehistoric cemetery has now been found, but there is no evidence of death-wounds on any of the skulls or other bones. There is a large spring in the neighborhood, and it is regarded as probable that this was a popular gathering place for the ancients—perhaps a picnic ground or council place.

Men of archaeological knowledge who have seen these human relics regard the discovery of the graveyard as of the highest importance. It is believed that from the study of these bones much startling information as to the prehistoric races in America may be gained. Already ten large boxes of the relics have been shipped by Prof. Morehead to his school museum at Andover, and the others are carefully guarded.

Another important discovery made during the 10 days was that of the location of a spot where the ancient inhabitants had been quarrying the flint from which they fashioned their rude weapons. This discovery was made on the farm of Mr. Cave Johnson, near Bennettstown. In a deep gully leading into a creek near by the party found a cliff of shelving limestone extending to the edge of the creek.

Imbedded in this limestone were round balls of flint varying in size from a walnut to a water bucket. When these balls were broken open the flint on the inside could be chipped into any desired shape by merely striking it with any small implement, such as a pocketknife or handle of a toothbrush.

Chips of this flint as well as weapons in various stages of completion were found scattered around the spot, in some places being several feet in depth, showing that a great deal of work had been done along this line at this point.

The work done in Christian County was only in the nature of a preliminary search, and the excavating will be extensively and thoroughly prosecuted in the near future.

THE LOUISIANA TREATY PHOTOGRAPHED AT LAST

First Publication of Picture of the Deed by Which This Great Territory Was Transferred From Napoleon.

(See Preceding Page.)

THE Louisiana treaty has at last been photographed. The ancient document which gave the vast territory of the southwest to the United States has now for the first time been exposed to the camera.

After reposing for a century in the vault in the State Department at Washington, where the originals of state documents are preserved, the famous deed, the signing of which the World's Fair is to commemorate, has been taken out and carefully examined and sheet by sheet put up before the camera.

Just what this immortal document looks like may be seen from the front color page of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine of today. Here at last is the document itself. Here is the simple piece of Irish linen paper, now dimmed and stained by time, which transferred a vast empire from one republic to another. Here in the simple letters formed more than a century ago and now much faded, are the words, the phrases and the precise form of the deed which to the inhabitants of the great southwest may outrank in importance the Declaration of Independence itself.

No more sacred or impressive document can exist than that which forms an historic treaty between two governments. When signed it disposes not merely of vast territory, but of the lives and property of countless multitudes of people. Such a document as this makes Americans out of French citizens and at the stroke of a pen extends American dominion from the Mississippi to the Pacific.

Many striking and interesting facts are revealed by an examination of the original of the Louisiana treaty, now for the first time published in this journal. The names of Napoleon and of Jefferson are and ever will be intimately associated with it. Yet neither signed it.

As will be seen from an examination of the front page of this magazine, Louisiana ceased to be French and became American when Livingston, Monroe and Marbois affixed their signatures and their seals to the treaty. Strange is it today, when the public is familiar with the appearance of important international treaties signed by presidents and secretaries of state with an ordinary steel pen just as any clerk might sign a commercial document, to scrutinize this queer old treaty simply written on an ordinary piece of note paper, yet bearing with all the dignity of Magna Charta the wax seals impressed with the armorial signet rings of the signers.

These formal plenipotentiaries would have been horrified at the thought that treaties might be typewritten and ratified without any seals. Although at the time of the signing of this document, weird and somewhat "pipy" conceptions of liberty were rampant in both countries, the original shows that international relations were ultra conservative, and that ceremonious documents were still being drawn and executed in the old-fashioned style.

The ancient document which turned over Louisiana to the United States consists of six large sheets of Irish linen paper, bound together with a green silk ribbon. The great seal of the United States, a large moon of gold, now torn in half, is affixed the World's Fair, but will send its photographed separately, and the document was then replaced in the state department safe.

The government is resolved not to take the risk of sending the treaty itself to the World's Fair, but wil send its photograph handsomely framed. This, however, because of the absence of color will not give visitors as clear an idea of what the treaty is like as will the front page of this magazine where the precise shades of the ribbon and seals are shown in addition to the quaint handwriting and the signatures.

Across the top of the treaty is written in lead pencil, which is still legible, the word "Original," and the date, "April 30, 1803."

A curious side light on history is thrown by the language of this treaty which speaks of the French republic and the "first consul." Napoleon is not mentioned in the treaty. Neither is Jefferson.

Napoleon was anxious to conclude this treaty, and surprised the representatives of the United States by his generosity to this country and his evident desire to in every way help the young republic of the New World.

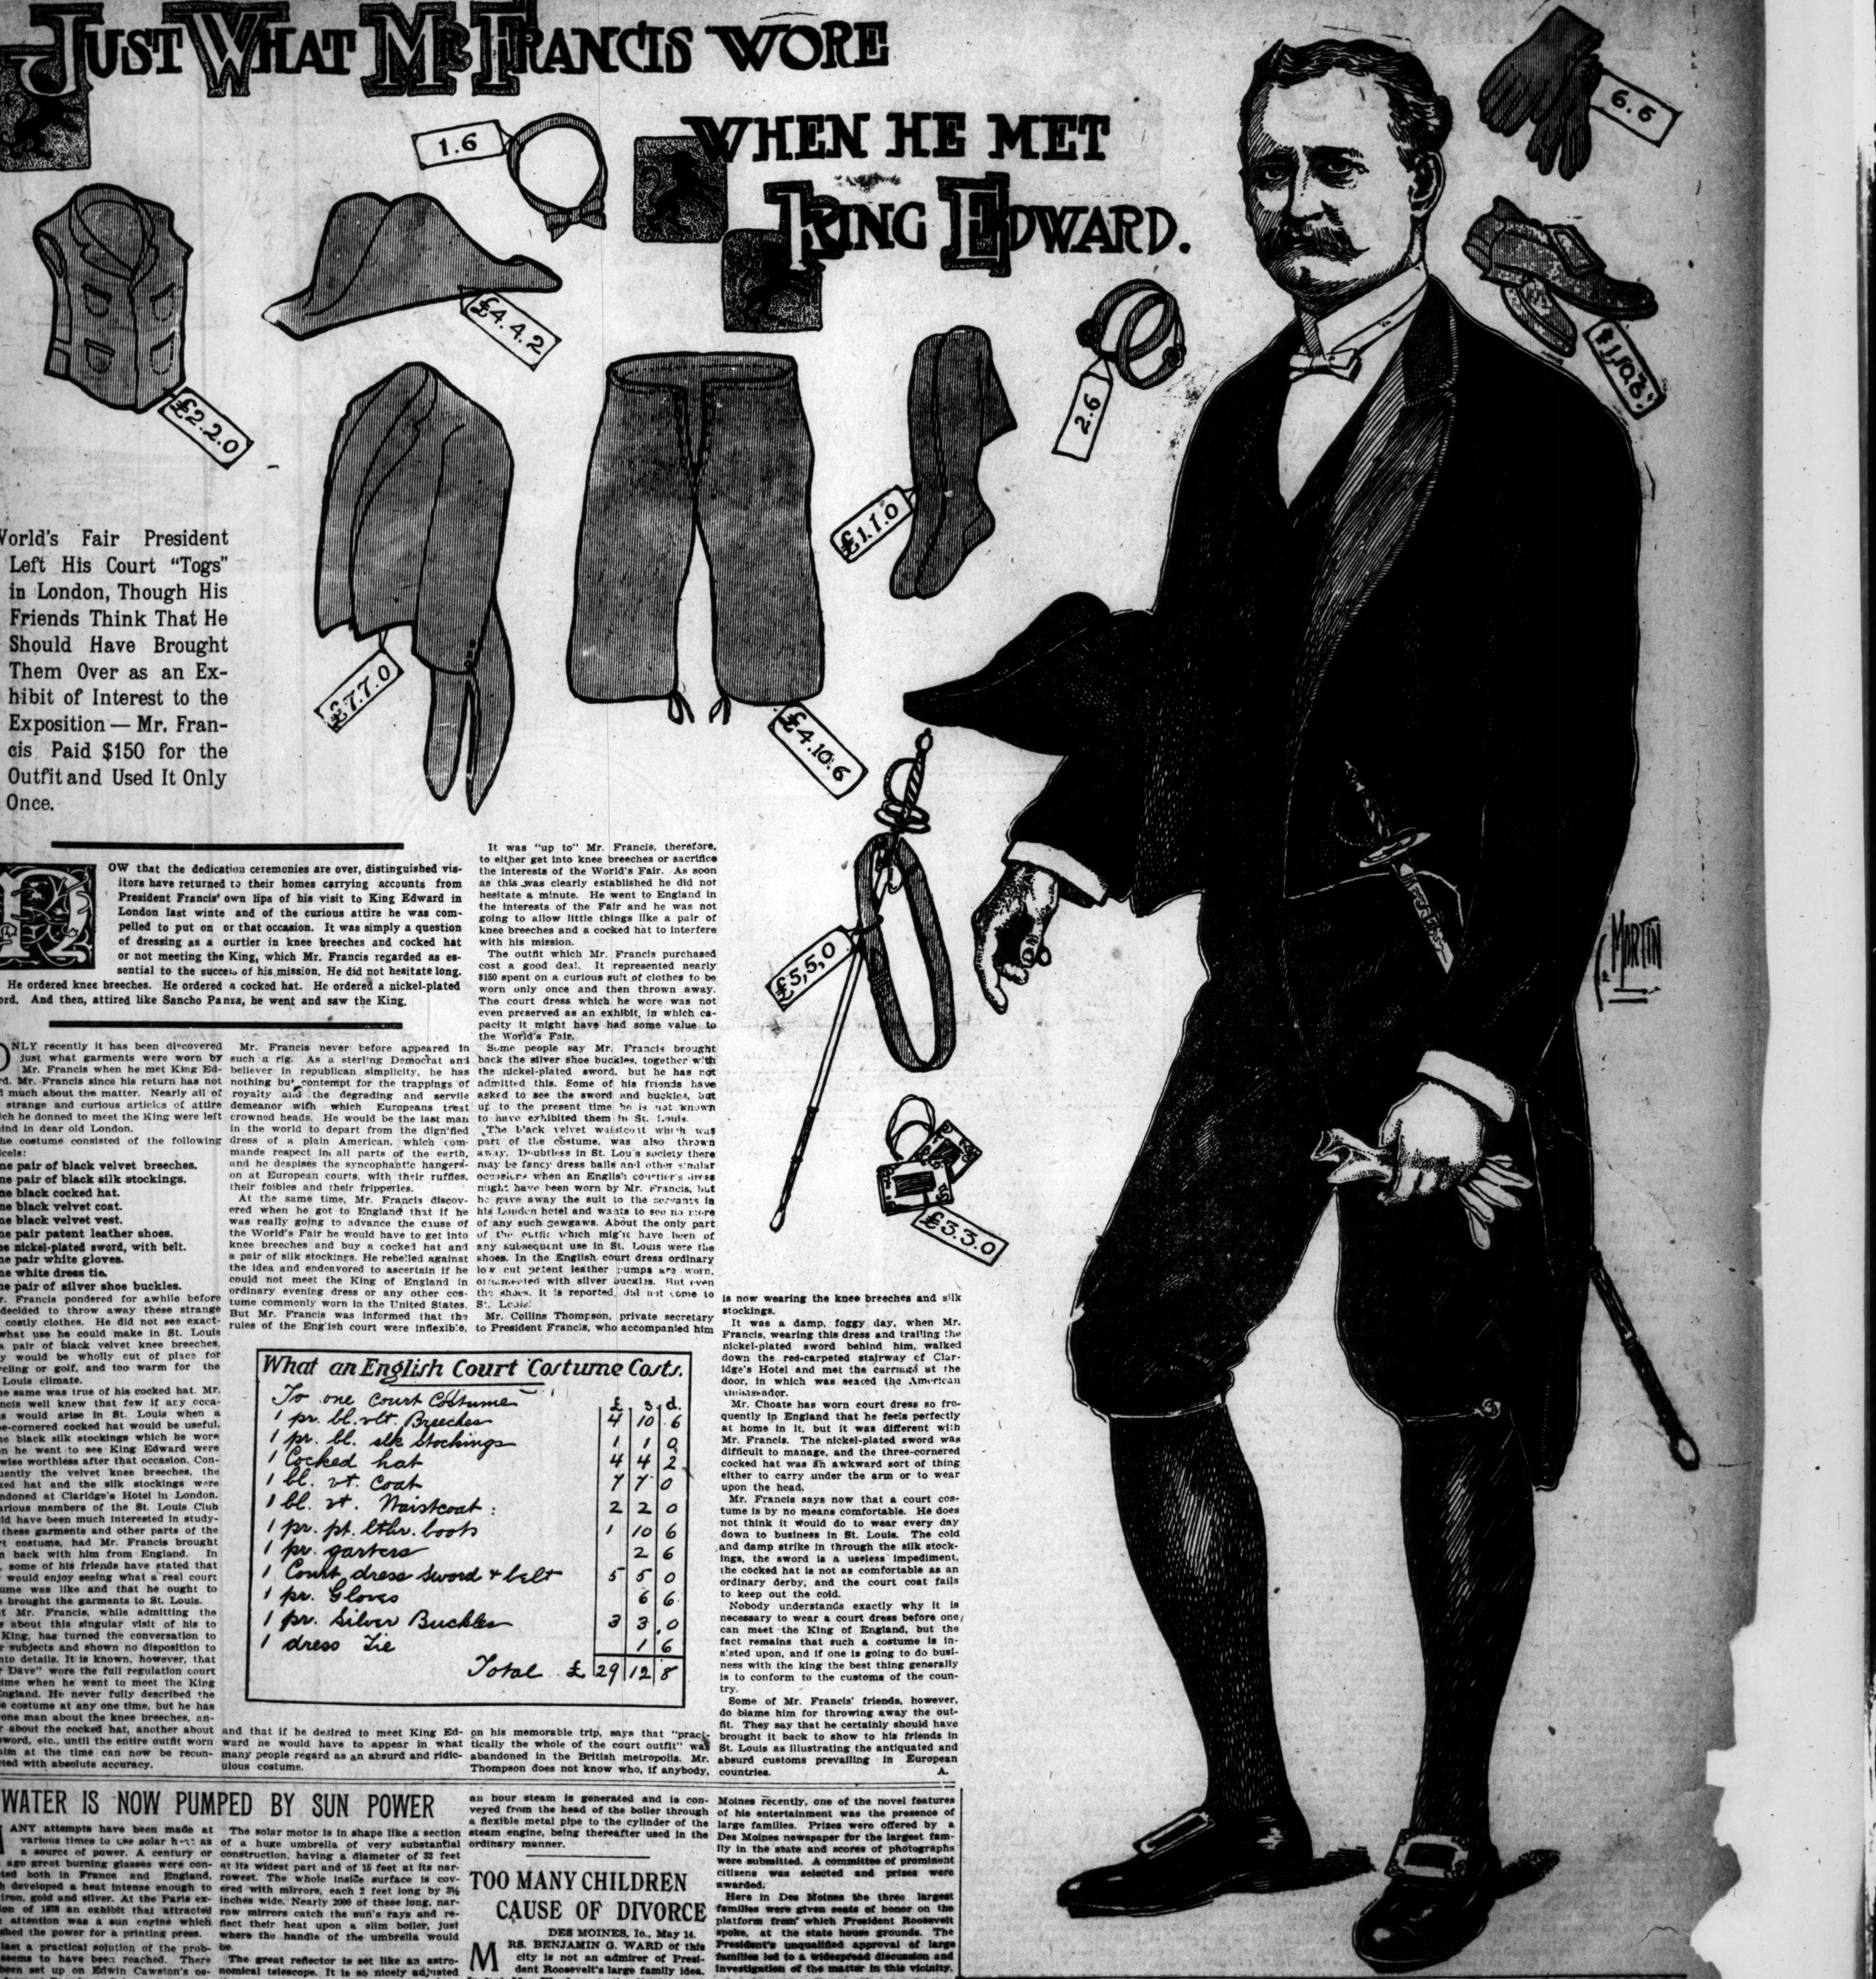
The sale of Louisiana itself was first suggested by Napoleon. Nobody in this country ever dreamed that France could be induced to sell so princely a possession. When Napoleon found that the United States government was unable to pay the price he at first demanded, he promptly knocked off a few million dollars and said in effect: "Take it at your own price." Thereafter he pushed matters eagerly.

The picture of Napoleon on the front page is one of the few good ones, showing him as first consul. Some people may be surprised to know that he at one time wore a very gaudy uniform, covered with gold lace and brass buttons, and part of which was a brilliant colored silk sash. As he grew in power he was remarkable for the simplicity of his dress, his favorite hat being black and his coat grey, and his uniform that of a colonel of chasseurs of the guard.

But in the Egyptian campaign he found it advisable to wear a very gorgeous uniform for the purpose of, as he expressed it, of "impressing the oriental mind."

Napoleon many years afterwards spoke of the wisdom he had exercised in selling Louisiana. He told Dr. O'Meara at St. Helena that it was one of the acts he looked back upon with the greatest pleasure.

JUST WHAT MR. FRANCIS WORE WHEN HE MET KING EDWARD.



World's Fair President Left His Court "Togs" in London, Though His Friends Think That He Should Have Brought Them Over as an Exhibit of Interest to the Exposition—Mr. Francis Paid $150 for the Outfit and Used It Only Once.

NOW that the dedication ceremonies are over, distinguished visitors have returned to their homes carrying accounts from President Francis' own lips of his visit to King Edward in London last winte and of the curious attire he was compelled to put on or that occasion. It was simply a question of dressing as a ourtier in knee breeches and cocked hat or not meeting the King, which Mr. Francis regarded as essential to the success of his mission. He did not hesitate long. He ordered knee breeches. He ordered a cocked hat. He ordered a nickel-plated sword. And then, attired like Sancho Panza, he went and saw the King.

ONLY recently it has been discovered just what garments were worn by Mr. Francis when he met King Edward. Mr. Francis since his return has not said much about the matter. Nearly all of the strange and curious articles of attire which he donned to meet the King were left behind in dear old London.

The costume consisted of the following articels:

One pair of black velvet breeches.
One pair of black silk stockings.
One black cocked hat.
One black velvet coat.
One black velvet vest.
One pair patent leather shoes.
One nickel-plated sword, with belt.
One pair white gloves.
One white dress tie.
One pair of silver shoe buckles.

Mr. Francis pondered for awhile before he decided to throw away these strange and costly clothes. He did not see exactly what use he could make in St. Louis of a pair of black velvet knee breeches. They would be wholly cut of place for bicycling or golf, and too warm for the St. Louis climate.

The same was true of his cocked hat. Mr. Francis well knew that few if any occasions would arise in St. Louis when a three-cornered cocked hat would be useful.

The black silk stockings which he wore when he went to see King Edward were likewise worthless after that occasion. Consequently the velvet knee breeches, the cocked hat and the silk stockings were abandoned at Claridge's Hotel in London.

Various members of the St. Louis Club would have been much interested in studying these garments and other parts of the court costume, had Mr. Francis brought them back with him from England. In fact, some of his friends have stated that they would enjoy seeing what a real court costume was like and that he ought to have brought the garments to St. Louis.

But Mr. Francis, while admitting the facts about this singular visit of his to the King, has turned the conversation to other subjects and shown no disposition to go into details. It is known, however, that "Our Dave" wore the full regulation court costume when he went to meet the King of England. He never fully described the whole costume at any one time, but he has told one man about the knee breeches, another about the cocked hat, another about the sword, etc., until the entire outfit worn by him at the time can now be reconstructed with absolute accuracy.

Mr. Francis never before appeared in such a rig. As a sterling Democrat and believer in republican simplicity, he has nothing but contempt for the trappings of royalty and the degrading and servile demeanor with which Europeans treat crowned heads. He would be the last man in the world to depart from the dignified dress of a plain American, which commands respect in all parts of the earth, and he despises the syncophantic hangers-on at European courts, with their ruffles, their foibles and their fripperies.

At the same time, Mr. Francis discovered when he got to England that if he was really going to advance the cause of the World's Fair he would have to get into knee breeches and buy a cocked hat and a pair of silk stockings. He rebelled against the idea and endeavored to ascertain if he could not meet the King of England in ordinary evening dress or any other costume commonly worn in the United States. But Mr. Francis was informed that the rules of the English court were inflexible, and that if he desired to meet King Edward he would have to appear in what many people regard as an absurd and ridiculous costume.

It was "up to" Mr. Francis, therefore, to either get into knee breeches or sacrifice the interests of the World's Fair. As soon as this was clearly established he did not hesitate a minute. He went to England in the interests of the Fair and he was not going to allow little things like a pair of knee breeches and a cocked hat to interfere with his mission.

The outfit which Mr. Francis purchased cost a good deal. It represented nearly $150 spent on a curious suit of clothes to be worn only once and then thrown away. The court dress which he wore was not even preserved as an exhibit, in which capacity it might have had some value to the World's Fair.

Some people say Mr. Francis brought back the silver shoe buckles, together with the nickel-plated sword, but he has not admitted this. Some of his friends have asked to see the sword and buckles, but up to the present time he is not known to have exhibited them in St. Louis.

The black velvet waistcoat which was part of the costume, was also thrown away. Doubtless in St. Louis society there may be fancy dress balls and other similar occasions when an English courtier's dress might have been worn by Mr. Francis, but he gave away the suit to the servants in his London hotel and wants to see no more of any such gewgaws. About the only part of the outfit which might have been of any subsequent use in St. Louis were the shoes. In the English court dress ordinary low cut patent leather pumps are worn, ornamented with silver buckles. But even the shoes, it is reported, did not come to St. Louis.

Mr. Collins Thompson, private secretary to President Francis, who accompanied him on his memorable trip, says that "practically the whole of the court outfit" was abandoned in the British metropolis. Mr. Thompson does not know who, if anybody, is now wearing the knee breeches and silk stockings.

It was a damp, foggy day, when Mr. Francis, wearing this dress and trailing the nickel-plated sword behind him, walked down the red-carpeted stairway of Claridge's Hotel and met the carriage at the door, in which was seated the American ambassador.

Mr. Choate has worn court dress so frequently in England that he feels perfectly at home in it, but it was different with Mr. Francis. The nickel-plated sword was difficult to manage, and the three-cornered cocked hat was an awkward sort of thing either to carry under the arm or to wear upon the head.

Mr. Francis says now that a court costume is by no means comfortable. He does not think it would do to wear every day down to business in St. Louis. The cold and damp strike in through the silk stockings, the sword is a useless impediment, the cocked hat is not as comfortable as an ordinary derby, and the court coat fails to keep out the cold.

Nobody understands exactly why it is necessary to wear a court dress before one can meet the King of England, but the fact remains that such a costume is insisted upon, and if one is going to do business with the king the best thing generally is to conform to the customs of the country.

Some of Mr. Francis' friends, however, do blame him for throwing away the outfit. They say that he certainly should have brought it back to show to his friends in St. Louis as illustrating the antiquated and absurd customs prevailing in European countries.

WATER IS NOW PUMPED BY SUN POWER

MANY attempts have been made at various times to use solar heat as a source of power. A century or more ago great burning glasses were constructed both in France and England, which developed a heat intense enough to melt iron, gold and silver. At the Paris exposition of 1878 an exhibit that attracted much attention was a sun engine which furnished the power for a printing press.

At last a practical solution of the problem seems to have been reached. There has been set up on Edwin Cawston's ostrich farm at Pasadena, Cal., a contrivance which performs its work regularly and with certainty. From one hour and a half after sunrise to half an hour before sunset it drives a 10-horse power engine, raising 1400 gallons of water 12 feet per minute. This is enough to irrigate about 500 acres of deciduous trees or 300 acres planted with orange trees.

The solar motor is in shape like a section of a huge umbrella of very substantial construction, having a diameter of 33 feet at its widest part and of 15 feet at its narrowest. The whole inside surface is covered with mirrors, each 2 feet long by 3½ inches wide. Nearly 2000 of these long, narrow mirrors catch the sun's rays and reflect their heat upon a slim boiler, just where the handle of the umbrella would be.

The great reflector is set like an astronomical telescope. It is so nicely adjusted that one person can easily move it in either direction. The boiler is 13½ feet long and holds 100 gallons of water. When the reflector is not working the boiler is quite inconspicuous, but when the concentrated heat from the mirrors is focused on it it gleams like polished silver. In a little while it becomes so hot that a stick held against it smokes and bursts into flame. In about an hour steam is generated and is conveyed from the head of the boiler through a flexible metal pipe to the cylinder of the steam engine, being thereafter used in the ordinary manner.

TOO MANY CHILDREN CAUSE OF DIVORCE

DES MOINES, Io., May 14.

MRS. BENJAMIN G. WARD of this city is not an admirer of President Roosevelt's large family idea. In fact, Mrs. Ward wants the district court to give her a divorce just because she is so strenuously opposed to the large family. She has filed her petition in the courts here, and the principal ground for separation alleged by the wife is that in 15 years of married life she has given birth to 13 children.

When President Roosevelt was in Des Moines recently, one of the novel features of his entertainment was the presence of large families. Prizes were offered by a Des Moines newspaper for the largest family in the state and scores of photographs were submitted. A committee of prominent citizens was selected and prizes were awarded.

Here in Des Moines the three largest families were given seats of honor on the platform from which President Roosevelt spoke, at the state house grounds. The President's unqualified approval of large families led to a widespread discussion and investigation of the matter in this vicinity.

But Mrs. Eva Ward did not submit a photograph of her family. In fact, she was disgusted with the President and his family theory and did not even go uptown to see the President and his party as they drove about. She remained at home, sorrowfully contemplating her lot and decided to sue for a divorce. The suit was filed the next day.

"Dr. S.," of Elsah, Ill., sends to the Sunday Post-Dispatch a story of the intelligence of his dogs. The doctor has two canines, one large and one small. Their specialty is rabbits. In and out of season they hunt rabbits; but not without method, as dogs mostly do. The doctor's dogs have a regular plan of camp [illegible] together and find a rabbit burrow. Then the little dog goes in and puts bunny out. The larger dog stands at the top of the burrow open-mouthed, and when the rabbit jumps out, he is grabbed instanter. Then the little dog emerges from [illegible] burrow, and is permitted to eat her [illegible] big dog gets what is left. The doc[illegible] he thus handsomely rewards the little [illegible] because he understands that without [illegible] assistance he could no more catch a ra[illegible] than he could catch a wild duck.

Unexpected Perils That Await Travelers in the Orient Befell This Party From Missouri—Some Unpleasant Experiences Which They Recall.

ST. LOUISANS MINGLING WITH THE DANGEROUS CHARACTERS ON THE CAIRO BEACH.

TWO ST. LOUIS LADIES AND A MAN FROM THE MOLTKE IN A NARROW ALLEY.

THE ST. LOUIS PARTY ASCENDING THE GREAT PYRAMID.

MANY unexpected perils await the American traveler in the Orient, as the exciting experiences of a large party of St. Louisans on a recent Mediterranean cruise and a trip into the Holy Land go to prove. Mr. Charles V. Roberts of 3740 Lindell boulevard, who with 41 other persons from St. Louis has just returned from a two months' voyage and tour abroad, tells of startling episodes incident to the trip, which show that the ancient lands of the far East, notwithstanding their age-worn civilization, present more perilous situations for the stranger than do the wild regions of our own West. There are places in Turkey and on the edge of the Holy Land, and in historic Egypt, where the most accomplished globe-trotter is a mere tenderfoot, at the mercy of thieves and cutthroats.

Members of the St. Louis party, basking in the mistaken security of an assumption that Oriental travel is easy, were "held up" by ruffians in the boisterous surf at Jaffa, inveigled into dark alleys in Cairo and compelled to hand over money, fleeced of more funds half way down the side of the great Pyramid of Cheops, and threatened with destruction through being exposed to the ravenous dogs that infest Constantinople and its environs.

That all escaped with their lives is true, but some of the travelers were compelled to pay sums almost approaching the dignity of ransoms before they were permitted to proceed.

MOST of the St. Louisans have returned to their homes, after a trip that was as full of events as a hive is full of honey. "But not all the happenings were as sweet as honey," says Mr. Roberts, "though now that we are safe at home we feel that it was well to have such experiences. On the whole, I think all of us thoroughly enjoyed the voyage and the trips inland, but I should advise any St. Louisan who contemplates a similar trip not to count too strongly upon an absence of annoyances and dangers.

The party sailed Feb. 5, from New York, aboard the German steamship Moltke, first touching at Funchal, Madeira, off the African coast, then passing Gibraltar and entering the Mediterranean. Among the cities visited were Athens, Constantinople, Beyrout, Cairo, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Alexandria, Naples, Sorrento, Amalfi, Rome and—Monte Carlo!

Landing at Jaffa, the tourists took the train for Jerusalem, and after spending several days in the sacred city and its vicinity they returned to Jaffa. There is little to see of interest in that town, and the voyagers desired to return to their ship, which lay at anchor in the roadstead, a mile off shore. Ships cannot dock at Jaffa, owing to the lack of a harbor close in shore. Passengers are conveyed out to the ship in surf boats, which must await the rise of a breaker to lift them over the rocks that abound in the surf. The trip out to the ship was full of excitement—also of seasickness.

The St. Louisans boarded a surf boat manned by 10 nondescript natives—fierce, piratical fellows, armed with dirks and short sabers. The ladies were sorely afraid of the forbidding oarsmen, but the men suffered no worry until the boat was about half way to the ship, when the leader of the boatmen, the captain of the pirate crew, arose in the stern of the craft and, drawing his saber, announced sternly that unless each member of the party paid double the rate agreed upon before starting the boat would never reach the ship.

"We'll stay right here till you pay," said the villain.

Inasmuch as half the passengers were exceedingly seasick, and the boat was pounding perilously upon the billows, shipping water at every swell, there was little hesitation, though a bold young man stood up in the bow of the boat and shook his fist at the leader.

"Sit down!" yelled the oarsman nearest him, at the same moment slapping the St. Louisan's back with the flat of his oar.

Down he went, and down went his hand into his cash pocket. The others followed suit, and after the Capt. Kidd of the expedition had carefully counted the ransoms the rowers again bent to their task and the ship was boarded by the disgusted party.

Several of the ladies, thoroughly frightened by this experience, declared that they would not undergo it again for stacks of gold.

But there was another experience awaiting the party which was almost as full of bodeful thrills. In the streets of Cairo they were destined to fall in with thieves and publicans.

Mr. Roberts and several companions mounted donkeys—those queer little Egyptian animals found nowhere else—and set out to explore the city. Some of the streets of Cairo are exceedingly narrow. One sometimes hears a St. Louisan scolding the departed French founders of St. Louis for making the river end of Olive, Locust, Pine and other streets so narrow. Those streets are wide enough for two wagons to pass without touch. There are streets in Cairo where a man mounted on a thin donkey cannot pass through without scraping the walls of the houses on both sides with his feet.

A young half-breed Arab and Turk guided the party. He took them into one of the narrowest of the streets, where several of his accomplices blocked the way—though one was enough to form a barricade—and then he demanded more money, much money, plenty money, on pain of their being held prisoners.

There was no particular reason why these utter strangers should argue the matter. They were in the enemy's country and practically in a trap. They paid up.

Mr. Roberts and one of his friends, while sojourning in Cairo, determined one night to go out to see the great pyramid by moonlight. Six miles away the pyramids sit in the sands, and the silent Sphinx holds the voiceless secret of the ages. The tourists had seen these survivals of ancient Egyptian enterprise by day.

"It will be grand to look at the pyramids with the moonlight upon them," said Mr. Roberts. "'Soldiers of France, 40 centuries are looking down upon you.' Perhaps they will affect us somewhat as they did Napoleon."

Hiring bicycles, the young men pedaled swiftly out the smooth road and passed the pyramids. The scene was beautiful beyond portrayal. Then they rode down and found the Sphinx wrapped in silver moonshine, the great lips of the stone monster

Awed by the scene, the bicyclists stood silent by their wheels. Suddenly the silence was broken by the harsh voice of a native who stole up out of the shadows and offered to turn an artificial light upon the pyramids.

"We don't care for an artificial light," said Mr. Roberts.

"You must see them by my magnesium light," insisted the native, and in spite of the protestations of his victims he turned on his light, exacting a fee.

Then another native glided up and insisted upon piloting the men back to Cairo.

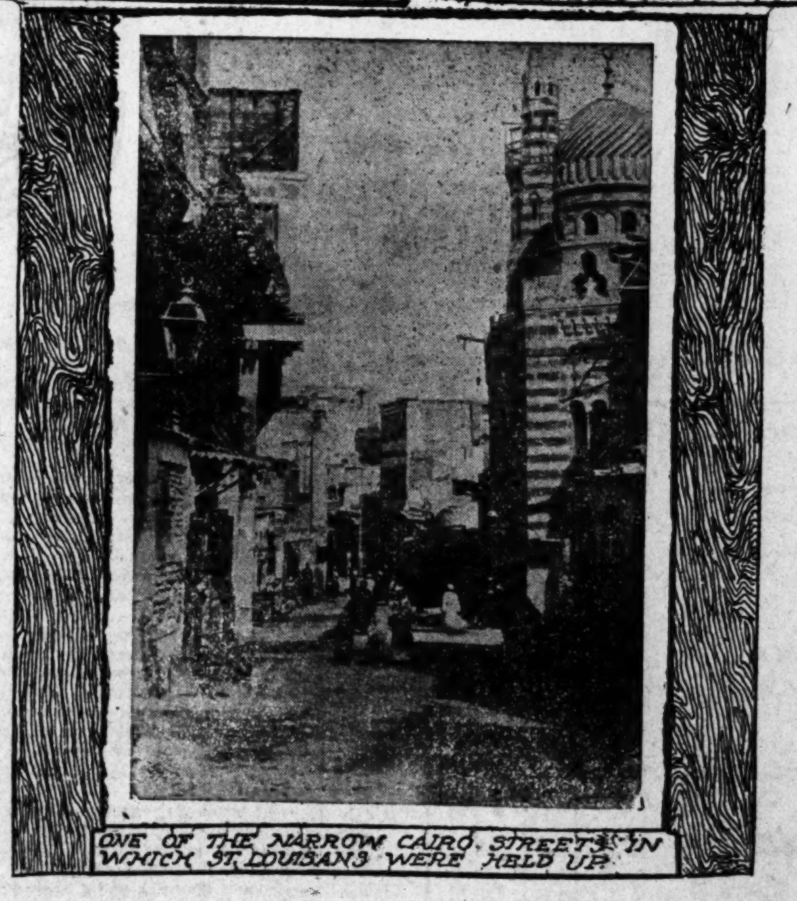
"He went on in front," said Mr. Roberts, "and shortly we found that several others were with him. We did not go for a speed record on our way back; we just kept those fellows in front of us so that we could see what they were up to."

In climbing the great pyramid the St. Louisans employed the guides, who took them to the top, after a wearisome climb, without causing them any trouble; but on the trip down the side of the massive stone heap the guides stopped and demanded more pay.

"Backsheesh," says Mr. Roberts, "is the first word those Egyptians learn. They lisp it in the cradle, and they are always demanding backsheesh. They declared that they would not guide us down the pyramid until they received more pay, and as it was positively dangerous to try to get down alone there was no other course but to pay something extra."

In Constantinople, the metropolis of the terrible Turk, members of the party experienced their first unpleasantness. Some of the St. Louisans set out one evening to explore the outskirts of the city without a guide. Being free-born Americans, accustomed to the workings of organized justice, they considered themselves equal to any emergency that might arise. They had "done" much of America, and several of them had traveled through western Europe.

"What is there to fear, mamma?" innocently inquired a certain West End debutante, when one of the older members of the party suggested that a guide might be advisable.



ONE OF THE NARROW CAIRO STREETS IN WHICH ST. LOUISANS WERE HELD UP.

"Really, there is nothing to fear that I can see, my dear," replied the girl's mother. "Who would dare molest American citizens?"

"If anybody dared," said the St. Louis girl, "what would our Teddy do to them? There's our navy, and Admiral Dewey, and——"

"Yes, and that young lieutenant—what's-his-name, at Jefferson Barracks, who took you to the Veiled Prophet ball last fall," impertinently interrupted another St. Louisan, who, it is said, was just a little jealous.

The party walked far out into the ragged edge of the city. Just here a little explanation for the uninitiated is due. Let William Elroy Curtis, the celebrated correspondent, do the explaining.

"It is said that Shanghai, China, is the dirtiest city in the world," Mr. Curtis remarks; "that Pekin is 10 times dirtier than Shanghai and that Canton is 10 times as dirty as Pekin; but Constantinople is as dirty as all of them put together. The pavements are simply horrible."

Much more says Mr. Curtis, but this is sufficient to permit the introduction of the dogs into this narrative. Constantinople has no sewers to speak of and the dogs live chiefly by lapping up the slops that flow in the streets. There are about 150,000 curs in the city, as low and mean in their natures as if the food they use. They are half-starved, homeless, fierce-fanged brutes, almost as wild as the untamed wolves of Dakota and twice as dangerous.

As night fell the St. Louisans found themselves surrounded by a pack of these curs, snapping and snarling, uttering ominous growls and licking their horrible chops menacingly.

"I don't know but that we ought to have had a guide," said the West End mamma, "but I suppose we can get back. Which way is it?"

An unkempt Turk, fez upon his head and dirk in his belt, stepped out from the shadows and in fairly good English offered his services as guide. Three or four of his fellows glided like ugly apparitions out of the gloom and surrounded the party, yelling at the dogs in such shrill tones the curs slunk away and the travelers shivered.

"You don't know where you are," said the volunteer guide when he was told that his services were not needed. "You are started in the wrong direction and if you don't let us show you the way to the hotel we'll call back the dogs and sick them on you. Ugh!"

A moment later one of the Turks let out a peculiar shriek and the wild dogs came back, yelping savagely. That was enough. The travelers paid the price and were guided to their stopping place.

On the beach at Cairo the St. Louisans mingled with a collection of persons who would be classed anywhere else as "suspicious characters." Along that water front the virtuous and the vicious, the good and the bad, the gentle and the ferocious walk to and fro in the crowd and no man knows whether his neighbor is a Christian or a cutthroat. All sorts of criminal characters infest Cairo.

It must not be supposed that the threats made by these ruffians at Jaffa, Cairo, Constantinople and elsewhere were mere talk. Abductions and murders are common in that part of the world. At Athens and Cairo and along the Mediterranean, travelers frequently are carried off and held for ransom, and the fierce villains who lie in wait for victims have no scruples against killing a man. In city as well as out in the country there are bands of brigands that prey upon the foreigner.

OUTLAW'S DEATH RECALLS A MISSOURI TERROR

JIM M'KINNEY, the outlaw who was shot to death in a Chinese joss house at Bakersfield, Cal., a few days ago, belonged to a family of terrors on both sides. Twenty years before the civil war there was a kinsman on his mother's side in Missouri, who was known in the country where he lived as Si Davidson.

The present generation in Cass County, Missouri, probably never heard of him, yet he was the first terror of a region which produced the James and Younger boys, and in a strip of the state over which Quantrell and his guerrillas rode by day and night when no man's life was safe.

So far as known Si Davidson never killed his man. In the time in which he lived the man who killed another had to show that his own life was in danger before he killed his assailant, if he wanted to continue his residence in the county.

One of the early instructions of one of the first judges of that part of the state was, according to the memory of his grandson, also a judge, as follows:

"If the jury believed that the deceased was a dead shot, as the court understands he was, and that he fired at the defendant first, and was drawing the bead on him the second time, the court instructs the jury to acquit the defendant on the spot."

That was the law on the Big Blue river. There were those who used to say, whenever there was a murder or other crime committed in the county, about which there was any mystery: "It would have been like Si Davidson if nobody else had a-done it." But Si was never indicted for murder.

It was his principal delight to stop business at the county seat, Harrisonville, or cause the stagecoach and the mail carrier to take to the brush or cut across fields. Si was 6 feet 2, lank and nearly as dark as an Indian. When he was mounted on a little white pony, as he always was, his feet nearly touched the ground. When he crossed a creek he doubled his legs under him.

There was a sort of fairness in his nature. For example, when he planned a "hurricane," as he called his raids on the county seats, he sent word ahead that a certain day would be Si Davidson's day in town, and mothers and old mammies gathered their broods from the yards, playgrounds and streets, locked their doors and remained prisoners until "Si Davidson was through."

While the "hurricane" was on Si Davidson was riding his gray pony into the court house, galloping the little beast through from one door to the other, making a target of the ceiling as he galloped, and following it up with a ride through the streets.

Woe to the man whom he met. That man was compelled to dance while Si Davidson's shots kicked up the dust in the immediate vicinity of his feet. Another diversion was to put a bullet through the citizen's hat, always warning the citizen to stand still if he didn't want to get hurt.

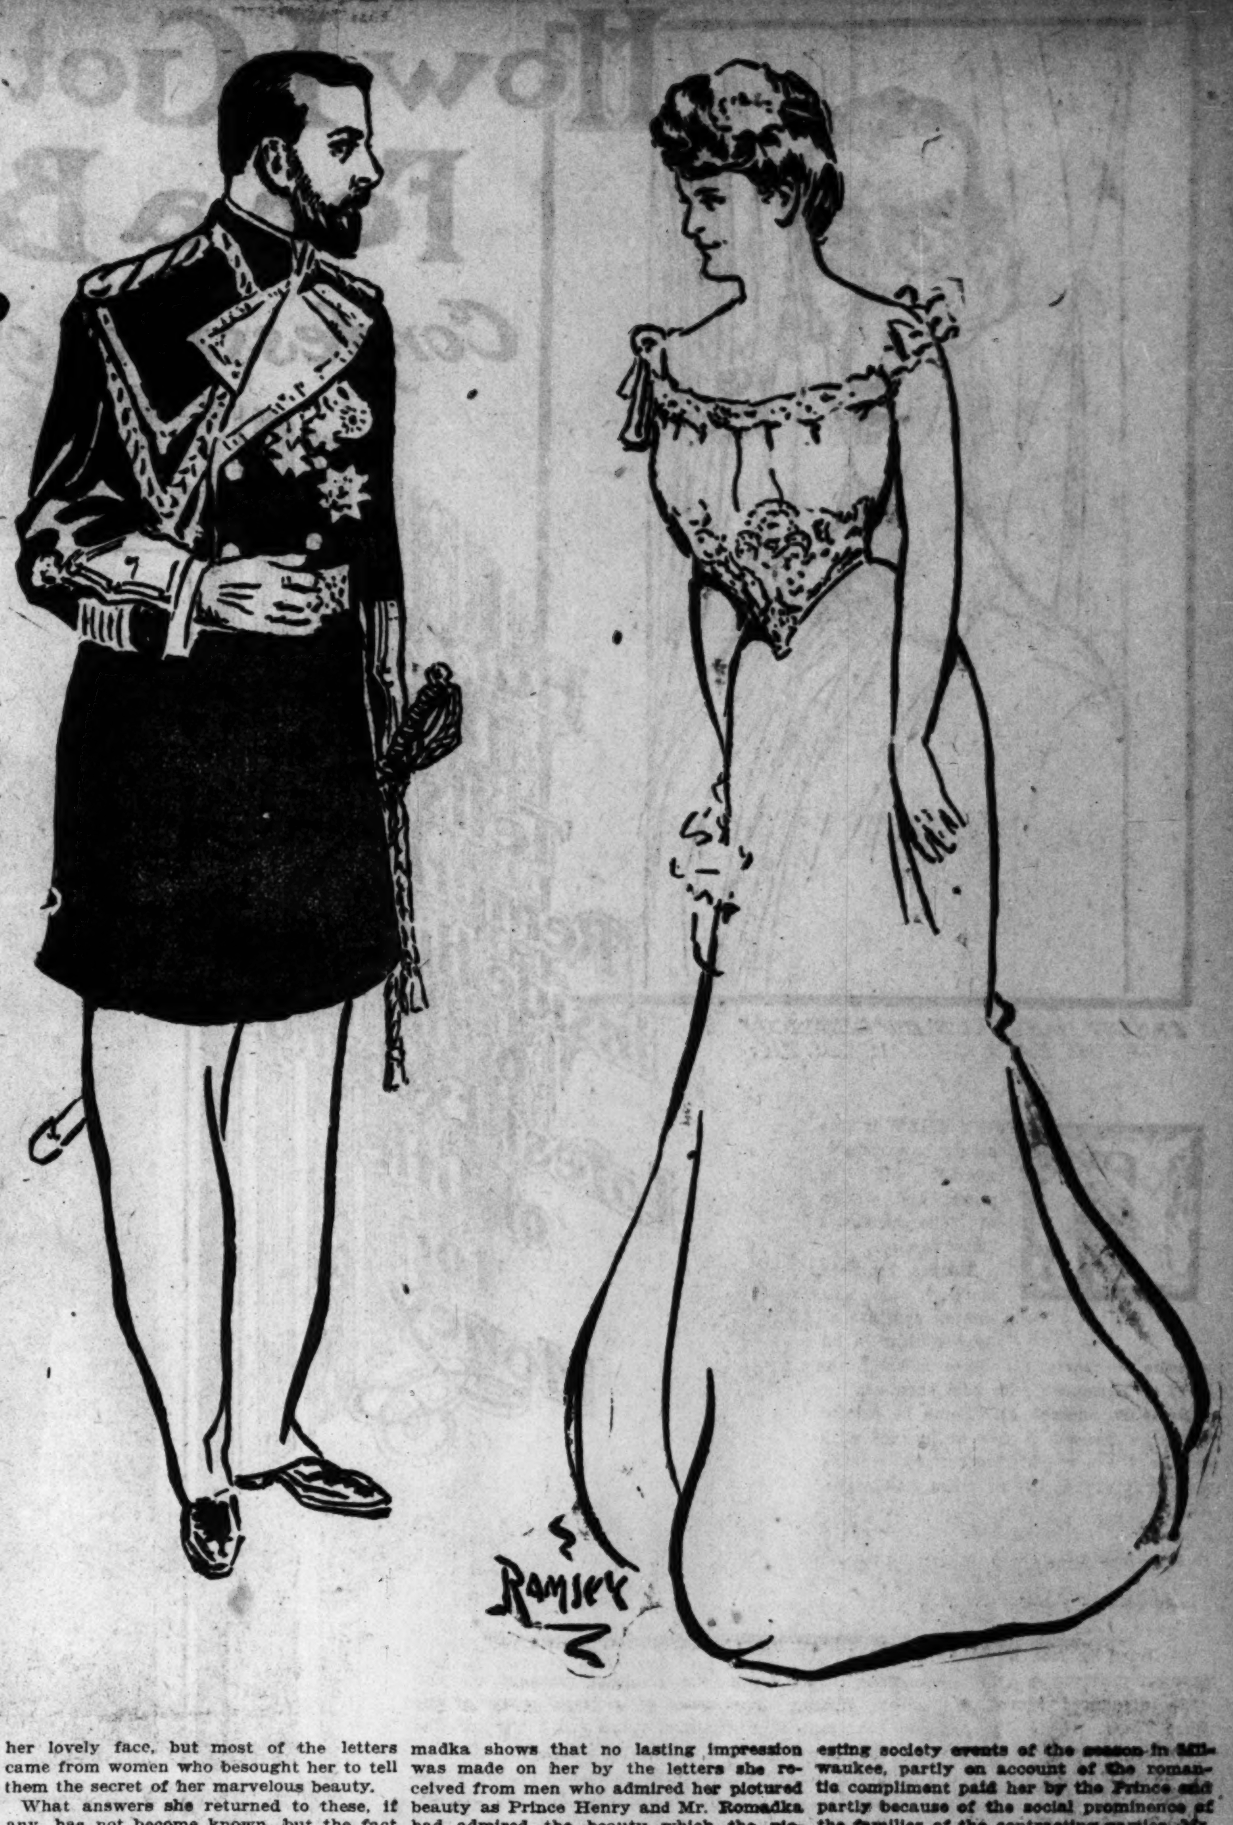
The sheriff of the county, who was the only officer authorized to make an arrest, was never in town when it was Si Davidson's day. Besides, Si Davidson controlled all the votes in his part of the county on election day.

One of Si Davidson's exploits was on the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of a schoolhouse by the Masons. Si did not send word he would be there, as was his custom, but he arrived during the ceremonies and while the stone was being lowered he came whooping up the street on his gray pony, firing down, right, left, up, imitating the old music teacher just before he strikes the air. It is said that he shot all round the stone, and there was a story for a long time that he made the lodge open the box afterward, but, of course, he didn't.

But that was his last "hurricane." On his return to his farm that night he encountered a bigger hurricane than any he ever managed.

The flood gates opened. The big creek which he had to cross went out of its banks, and Si Davidson's body was found [illegible]

The Romance of "Prince Henry's Beauty".



Brother of Emperor William Declares That Miss Geneva Dolan Is the Prettiest Girl He Saw on His Recent American Tour—He Told Admiral "Bob" Evans So—The Beauty Has Married Since Then.

CHARMING MISS GENEVA DOLAN of Milwaukee, who was married last week to Anthony Romadka of Chicago, was Prince Henry's beauty. She was the beauty who made Milwaukee famous. She was vested with the title "Prince Henry's beauty" because H. R. H., Prince Henry of Prussia, on his tour of America, saw her and pronounced her the most beautiful woman in America.

It was not many months ago that Prince Henry sailed away from the Fatherland and landed on these shores and made a more or less triumphal tour of the country.

Everywhere he went new wonders were revealed to his vision. American beauties, buds barely beginning to open and roses full blown and glorious, burst on his vision whithersoever he went, and the cold blood of the stern Teuton was warmed by the sunshine of their smiles.

IN HIS German imitation of that American exploit, the swing around the circuit, he visited Milwaukee and liked the city particularly because he did not find it necessary more than once or twice while he was there to use the English language, which he had groomed up on before he started.

But that aside. For it had nothing in particular to do with his discovery of the prettiest woman in America.

A reception was held in his honor, of course, and the gallantry and beauty of Milwaukee was there. Fair ladies by the score were presented to him and they all made thei rdeepest courtesies to hi mand smiled their most gracious smiles on him.

This was as it had been in other cities and Henry made his responses as a well ordered prince should.

Presently a most beautiful girl was brought forward and presented to the prince and he, listening more intently than was his wont, heard the name "Miss Geneva Dolan" spoken.

The prince had come to America with a great appetite for American beauty, but his eyes had feasted on so much of it that he had become all but sated, and it took more than an ordinary morsel to tickle the jaded appetite of his appreciation.

But when H. R. H. saw Miss Geneva Dolan it was as if he had never seen a beauty in his life. And, according to his statement of the impression she made on him, he never had seen such a beauty.

The prince bowed very low to Miss Geneva Dolan and murmured his delight in very good English.

He took occasion to detain her longer than any other who had been presented to him, talking about nothing in particular and reveling in her beauty. And ere the reception was past he had foxily invented a pretext for engaging in another conversation with her in order that he might again test the rarity of her vision in different light.

"By Jove," exclaimed the prince, rousing himself from a spell of preoccupation and borrowing a polite American expletive, "she is the most beautiful woman in America."

"Who is?" demanded Bob Evans, to whom he had addressed himself and who was also wearing an air of abstraction after having been introduced to Miss Dolan.

"Why, Miss Dolan, of course," said H. R. H. "I repeat, sir, she is the most beautiful woman in America."

And ever since that night Miss Geneva Dolan has been known as Prince Henry's Beauty.

Whether she is entitled to the superlative distinction which the prince awarded her may be disputed by a man who is in love with another most beautiful woman in America if not in the world, but there is no disputing that she is a woman of beauty of a rare degree.

And there is one man, at least, who will not be inclined to find fault with the beauty judgment of the prince. He is Anthony Romadka, now the husband of the most beautiful woman in America, judged by the prince's standard and clinched by his affirmation.

Mr. Romadka had found out that Miss Dolan was very beautiful before Prince Henry ever took it into his royal head to come to America. Mr. Romadka was long a resident of Milwaukee before he removed to Chicago.

She had given him her love and promised him her hand before the prince put the stamp of his royal approval on her beauty.

The prince's remark was published broadcast over the country, and within a day or two Miss Dolan was known up and down the country as Prince Henry's beauty. Her portrait was printed in a hundred papers and letters poured in on her from all sorts of people. There were men who would woo and men who only pleaded for a picture of her lovely face, but most of the letters came from women who besought her to tell them the secret of her marvelous beauty.

What answers she returned to these, if any, has not become known, but the fact that she was married Wednesday at St. John's Cathedral in Milwaukee to Mr. Romadka shows that no lasting impression was made on her by the letters she received from men who admired her pictured beauty as Prince Henry and Mr. Romadka had admired the beauty which the pictures pictured.

The wedding was one of the most interesting society events of the season in Milwaukee, partly on account of the romantic compliment paid her by the Prince and partly because of the social prominence of the families of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Romadka will shortly take up their residence in Chicago.

THESE INDIANA BOYS MAY LIVE TO BE TWO HUNDRED YEARS OLD

Clyde and Oscar Harner Develop But One-Sixth as Fast as Ordinary Children—Their Physician, After a Close Study of the Lads, Holds the Opinion That They Will Not Reach Physical Maturity Until About 125 Years Old.

CLYDE and Oscar Harner, who live in the little village of Radnor, ten miles south of Delphi, Ind., may live to be 200 years old or even older, according to the opinion of an able physician who has studied their strange cases of slow development. Clyde, though nearly 23 years of age, is but a boy of 4 or 5 in physical and mental status, while his brother Oscar, whose age is 12, is pronounced still a baby of 20 months so far as all appearances go.

These boys are not idiots or imbeciles. They are healthy, bright lads—as bright as any boys of 5 years and a year and a half respectively, the only difference between them and other boys of 23 and 12 years being that they develop only about one-sixth as rapidly as ordinary children.

Dr. O. F. Campbell, their physician, bases upon this slowness of development his prediction that the boys may live to be 200 years old and still not feel or appear older than the ordinary man of 70.

Dr. Campbell calculates that every period of six years passes as one year in the strangely slow growth of these boys. Clyde can do anything that a boy of 5 has learned. In another six years, to judge by his past growth, he will as active as a boy of 6. Oscar is now just getting sure on his feet, just as other babies learn to walk. It is scientifically reasonable to suppose that in eighteen or twenty years more he will be able to talk as easily as any small boy of 5 and be just as mischievous.

To the neighborhood in the quiet Hoosier section where they live they are marvels. Nothing like them has ever been seen in all the state. Scores visit them every week. Dozens of circus men have tried to get the parents to consent to their exhibition, but George Harner, the boys' father, is well to do and he sturdily refuses to make an exhibition of his children.

"Even if they are going to live two hundred years," says he, "they are not going to be trotted out like a couple of freaks. I'm glad to have the doctors see them, because perhaps they can do something to make Clyde and Oscar like other folks. But there is always a good home for them here, and if they live a century after the old folks are dead and buried there will be enough to take care of them when they come of age in seventy-five or one hundred years from now."

Both boys are almost diminutive in stature. Clyde will be 23 years old on Aug. 26 next. He is 38 inches tall and weighs 43 pounds. Oscar will be 13 years old on Oct. 2 next. He is 36 inches tall and weighs 29 pounds. Clyde wears a No. 10 child's shoe and Oscar a No. 4.

There is an older brother, who is the tallest member of the family and as smart and shrewd as any clever Hoosier can be. He measures six feet one inch in his stocking feet and holds a job on the Monon Railroad as section boss. His father has a similar position with the railroad.

When Clyde was born he weighed nine pounds and gave promise of soon developing into a lusty, healthy boy. For several months he went on as other babies do, sucking his thumbs, kicking his little pink toes and finally learning to say "goo goo!" to his delighted mother.

Then suddenly came some mysterious change. The queer state from which the boy has never emerged to this day made itself known almost in the twinkling of an eye. True, his mental and physical growth kept on, but at such an amazingly retarded rate that it took him a month to learn what the ordinary baby can master in a day. Ordinary children learn and remember new words every day. After these boys have mastered a word it is weeks before they can progress to another.

Clyde is just getting out of baby talk and is learning the simple sentences which a boy of 5 can ratle off faster than a horse can trot. He is immensely interested in his train of "choo-choo cars and has all the fun that men of his age used to have 18 years ago with just the same kind of toys. He has just mastered his velocipede and he thinks it's great.

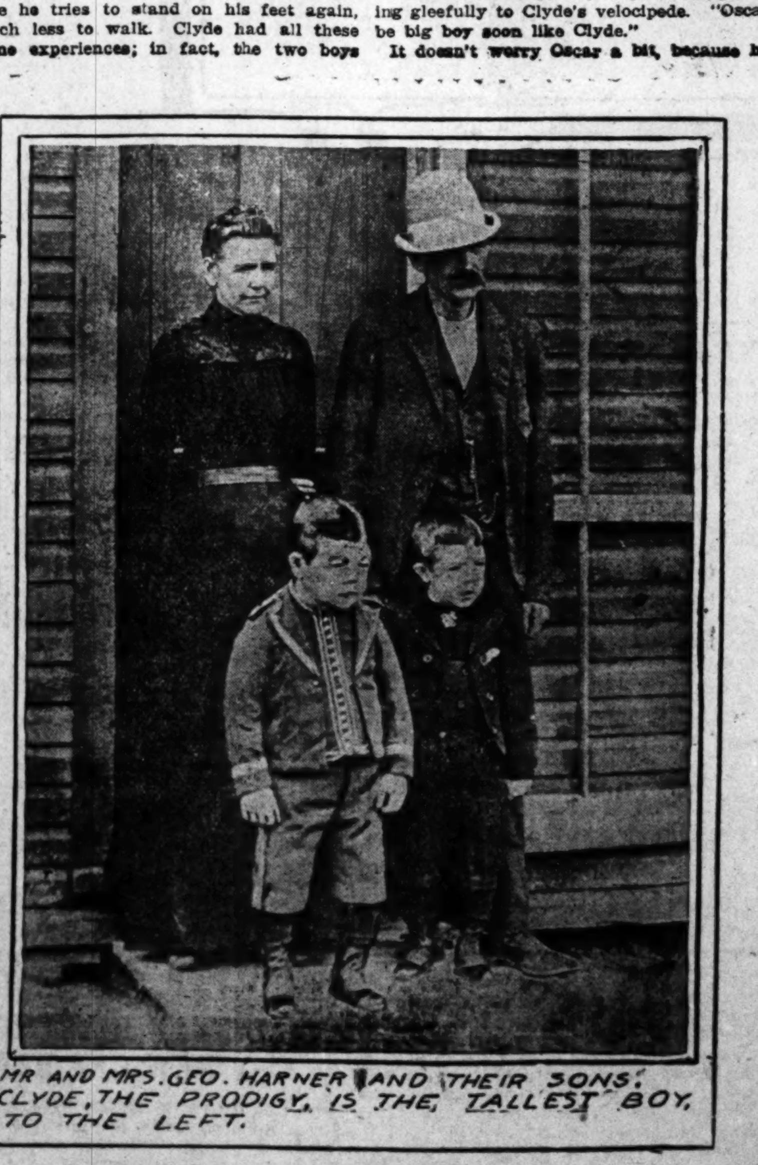
"It's bully," said he, after one trip around the garden walk without a fall. "When I get a big man I'm going to ride a bicycle like big brother."

Thirteen-year-old Oscar hasn't progressed as far as "choo-choo" cars or velocipedes. Just at present he is immersed in the difficulties of learning to walk. His development has been even slower than his older brother's.

"I think," says Mrs. Harner, "that the impressions on the first boy have made Oscar as he is. Even when Clyde was 10 years old he was like a baby and I was still holding him in my arms and rocking him to sleep when Oscar was born. Oscar weighed 14 pounds when he was born, and since then in these 13 years he has only gained 15 pounds in weight, less than a pound a year. His growth has been just as slow, hardly an inch for each of the 13 years."

Oscar is learning to walk just as babies of 12 months learn. He is now able, after more than a year's practice, to go from room to room, holding on to tables and chairs. Occasionally, like other babies, he gets a fall and cries. Like other babies, he remembers the bumped forehead or the bruised little leg and doesn't want to try again right away.

Other babies forget their woe in an hour or so and are at it again. Not so little Oscar. After an accident it is weeks before he tries to stand on his feet again, much less to walk. Clyde had all these same experiences; in fact, the two boys went about the business of growing up in precisely the same manner.



MR AND MRS. GEO. HARNER AND THEIR SONS. CLYDE, THE PRODIGY, IS THE TALLEST BOY, TO THE LEFT.

They differ little in looks save in their eyes. Clyde's are those of the ordinary person; Oscar's are what physicians call elliptical eyes. The pupils are longer vertically than horizontally. Their heads are somewhat oversized.

Both have joints too large for their tiny bodies. There is nothing the matter with these joints, and both boys have the normal use of them and can control them just as well as children of 5 and 2 control their smaller joints.

"Me ride tum day, too," says Oscar, pointing gleefully to Clyde's velocipede. "Oscar be big boy soon like Clyde."

It doesn't worry Oscar a bit, because he doesn't know it, but it will be fifteen or twenty years yet before he will be able to master a velocipede. It will be three or four years before he will be able to walk securely, much less run a pedal. By that time Clyde's machine will be rotting in the junk heap.

Both the boys are extremely affectionate and are plainly very fond of their father, mother and big brother. When strangers visit them they make friends fast and are always on the lookout for candy and pennies. Like other youngsters they know that pennies will buy tops or marbles at the store. But they have sharp little tempers, too, and they are not a bit under control, either. Who ever heard of small boys trying to master their hot tempers, when anything went wrong?

Clyde was a bit brighter than Oscar when he was 13. He could walk finely when he was 8 years old, and now, at 23, he is pleased as Punch because he can dress himself without a single bit of help from his mother, who has tended him all these years.

The Harners, father and mother, are not different from their neighbors, and in their family history there is nothing to indicate that they might be parents of such strange little folk. Both have worked hard all their lives and are sharp, shrewd and intelligent.

So, what is it that makes these two little people so different from other folk? There is no family taint to which it can be ascribed. There is nothing local to which their queer development may be traced.

Physician and parents alike firmly believe that if some ordinary disease does not carry them away, or, accident kill them, they will live to be bi-centenarians. The world has never known a person to live to such an advanced age. The oldest person in the United States, who is now just 131, is Noah Raby, of the county poorhouse at Piscataway, N. J.

If the boys live, what possibilities will be opened up to the people of the years to come? Science stands aghast at the prospect.

Suppose in 150 years from now these two men-boys really grow to be men, with men's forms and features and men's intellects. In five minutes they can tell the people of those far-off days what people wore and what they did a century and a half before. How fortunate the people of 2050 will be to talk with men who lived in Roosevelt's time, and actually saw troops marching off to war with Spain!

The Harners will be able to describe the manners and customs of Americans better than any books can do, and far more to the point. The last survivor of the civil war will have been gone for 100 years or more. Fifty years after the centenarian sole survivor of the Spanish war will have gone to his rest. Yet Clyde and Oscar Harner will have seen and talked to hundreds of them.

DR. O. F. CAMPBELL, FLORA, IND., WHO HAS STUDIED THE REMARKABLE CASE OF "CLYDE" HARNER.

NEW COLLECTION OF INDIAN DECORATIONS

DR. CLARK WISSLER, who spent a great part of last year among the Dakota Indians of the Sioux tribe in the study of their decorative art and religious symbolism, has just set out again on an American Museum of Natural History foundation and will spend the entire summer and the early part of the fall season among the northern Dakotas, who are still found in parts of Southern Canada west of the lake region. Dr. Wissler will also visit the Gros Ventres, a northern branch of the Arapahoe Indians, and ultimately the Blackfeet.

These tribes present a peculiarly interesting problem from the standpoint of the student of symbolism, because in them are evidences of a very general exchange of symbolic designs. The problem is to work out the fundamental principles of design and of interpretation, as two distinct subjects of study. Formerly the tribes in question were very closely associated, and today the Arapahoes constitute one of the five tribes of the Blackfeet federation. Through this association came inevitably an interchange of culture, and among other things coming under this general head styles of decoration.

It has appeared, however, that various of the tribes have placed different interpretations upon the same design, and the result has been an intermixture of interpretations which, while it complicates the work of the ethnologist, at the same time provides an additional element of interest. Dr. Wissler's work under this head during the coming summer will consist of a comparative study of designs among different tribes, the result of which will enable him to distinguish between the designs of tribe and tribe, and to tell at what point in the several cases changes of interpretation were introduced. Further still, these changes will lead, no doubt, to interesting investigations of the reasons prompting them, whether of environment or temperament or of definite physical acts.

The work of Dr. Wissler among the Dakotas during the past year has been largely with the Tetons, one of the more primitive divisions of the Dakota tribes. Here he found symbolism and general decorative art very generally developed, and the same rule maintaining as that noted in the case of the Arapahoes and Blackfeet—that while they used designs common to the Plains Indians, they had an interpretation all their own. The results attained in the study among the Tetons, corresponding so closely to those among the Blackfeet tribes, are taken as confirming the theory noted that conventionalism in style and conventionalism in interpretation are entirely independent, whether it be in the realm of art pure and simple, or in that of religion.

RARE BOOKS FOR THE WORLD'S FAIR

LAWYERS will find much to entertain them in the cases of rare old law books which the Department of Justice at Washington will show at the World's Fair. Among these are two ancient volumes entitled "The Laws of New York." The first volume contains an order from George III, dated March 13, 1770, creating the Chamber of Commerce of New York. The President was John Cruger. One of the members was John Roosevelt. A full list of the names contains many intimately connected with the business interests of this country.

These "Laws of New York" were printed by Hugh Gaine at his printing office and book store, in Hanover Square.

The Constitution of the State of New York, dated Kingston, April 20, 1777, begins on the first page. This Constitution is signed "Leonard Gansevoort, Presid. P. T."

All the laws of the state passed at the first session of the Legislature, held at Poughkeepsie, Dutchess County, are given in detail, and some of them are very amusing. One is an "Act to permit the raising of a sum not exceeding two thousand pounds, by way of a lottery, toward rebuilding the court house and gaols in the County of Ulster."

Long Island is referred to as Nassau. Elias Desbrosses seems to have been an important character, and the names of other men for whom the streets of older New York were called occur frequently.

Perhaps the most valuable collection at the World's Fair will be three sets of English lawbooks which date from the War of the Roses to the time Lord Coke was lord chief justice of our mother country. The oldest of these is known as "Jenkins' Centuries," written by Judge David Jenkins North Wales while he was a prisoner years in the Tower of London by order of Oliver Cromwell. It contains the laws, precedents and rulings of England's courts from the beginning of the York and Lancaster quarrel to the date of Judge Jenkins' tenure of office.

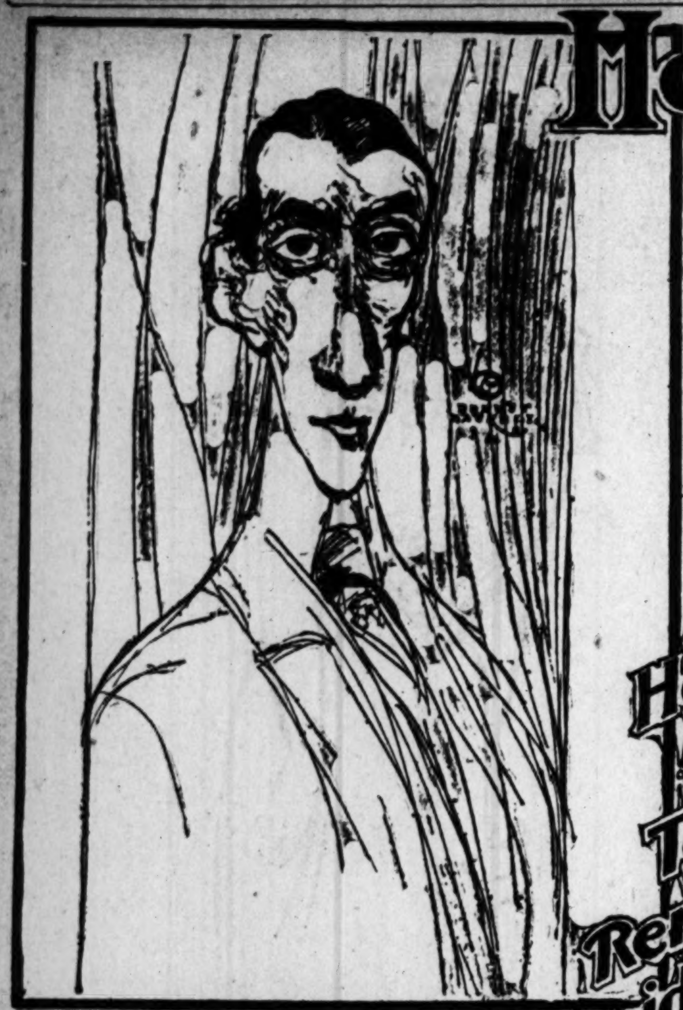
How I Got a Belted Earl For a Brother

Confessions of an International Matchmaker



ERNEST HASKELL'S IMPRESSION OF THE EARL OF YARMOUTH.

Harry Thaw Tells the Remarkable Inside History of the Latest Exchange of Title for Money

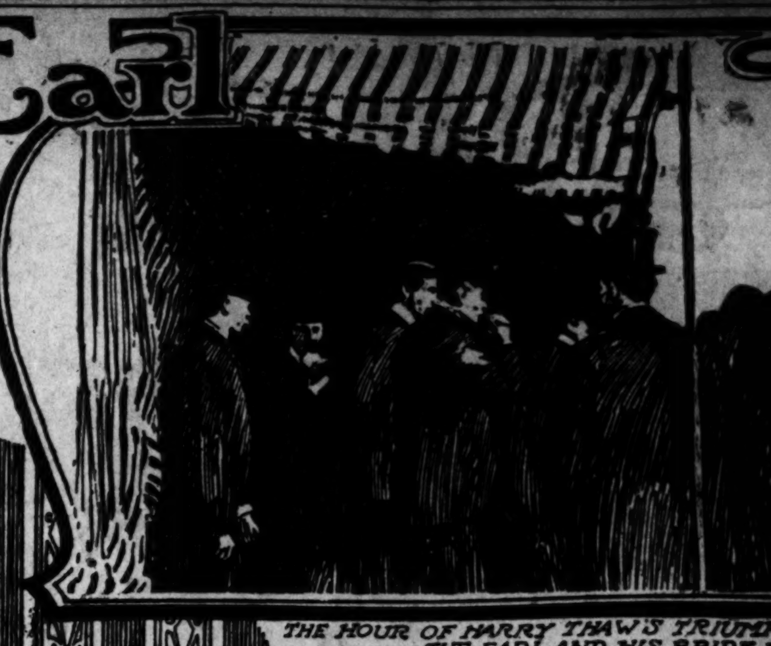
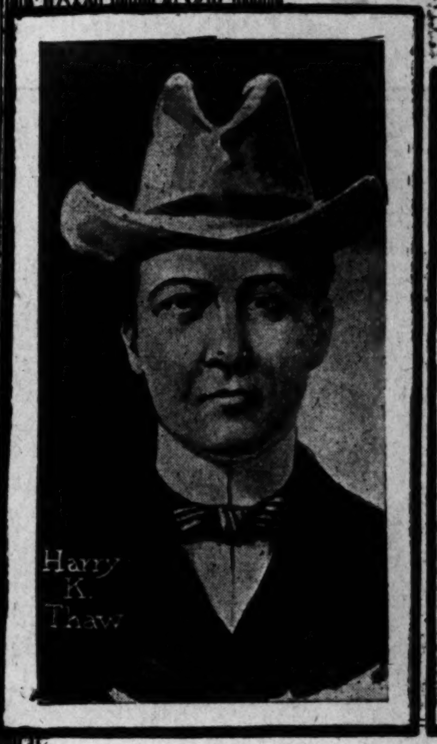
The COUNTESS of YARMOUTH WHEN SHE WAS ONLY MISS ALICE THAW.



THE HOUR OF HARRY THAW'S TRIUMPH. THE EARL AND HIS BRIDE HAVE JUST DEPARTED. YOUNG MAN WITHOUT A HAT IS HARRY THAW.



HARRY THAW it was alone, apparently, against all the power and wealth of the combined Thaw family.

Mother, brothers, sisters, uncles, aunts, cousins—all opposed him in his scheme to marry his sister Alice to the Earl of Yarmouth. He beat them all.

Some he sneered at. Some he cajoled. Some he ignored. A few he pleaded with. One he won over—his mother. But whether any of them or all of them had stayed away from the wedding would have been a matter of no moment to Harry Thaw. In fact, he wasn't there himself, but that's another story.

1—Dined Yarmouth in Paris at a $25,000 dinner.

2—Introduced him to his niece, Miss Byrd Thaw.

3—Urged her to accept Yarmouth, but she preferred an untitled American gentleman.

4—Introduced the Earl to his sister Alice next with more success.

5—When Mrs. Thaw fled South with her daughter to escape the Earl's suit, the brother made it possible for the impoverished nobleman to follow.

6—Persuaded his mother and brought the Earl and Miss Thaw face to face.

7—Induced his mother to announce the engagement.

8—Prevailed upon a friend to give a bachelor dinner for Yarmouth when the Hotel Shenley, Pittsburg, would not take the Earl's order without cash in hand.

9—Saw that the Earl received a handsome settlement before his brother-in-law-to-be walked to the altar.

10—Helped the Earl and his Countess bride to dodge insistent tradesmen in New York.

NOBODY in all Pittsburg, Washington, New York or Paris, between which four cities young Harry Thaw divides his time, ever believed him clever enough to accomplish such a task. But no mach-making mamma ever went about a similar program with more real wit and well-devised strategy than Harry Kendall Thaw.

Now he thinks he has earned a reputation that will last him a lifetime—that he has put the Thaw family, which never quite managed to achieve the pinnacle of social success, in the same class with the Vanderbilts, Goulds, Leiters, Zimmermans and other reigning families who have secured genuine noblemen as adjuncts to their families.

At Paris it was—at the opera there—some one introduced Harry Thaw to Yarmouth. This was some three years ago. The opulent young Pittsburger and the much-dunned nobleman got to be quite friendly. Yarmouth grew amazingly fond of Harry Thaw and often praised his generosity. Harry Thaw never let Yarmouth pay for anything, which was extremely lucky for the earl.

Suddenly Harry Thaw conceived the idea that it would be a good thing for the Thaws to have an Earl—a genuine one, ind you—in the family. Whatever unind has been said about Yarmouth, no ne has ever dared impeach the integrity f his ancient and honorable title.

r. Thaw cogitated. There was his ster, Alice Cornelia, and his niece, the daughter of his older, half-brother, Edward, both pretty, both rich, both extremely eligible. Alice? No, he hardly dared dream of that; she was too much interested in her charities and in her kennel of dogs to think of romance.

made up his mind. Byrd should Yarmouth, and the Thaw family e the real thing. They would only title worth a sixpence in all

'd his plans. First, there was nd of pleasure in Paris, then Pittsburg, an introduction to aw, and—st leave the young people to used Harry t of the to capture an Earl was fired in Paris. Young Mr. Thaw decided to give a beauty dinner, with Yarmouth his guest of honor, to meet the famous beauties of tout Paris. There was Liano de Pougy, Cleo de Merode, Nellie Neustretter, Anna Robinson, New York's chorus queen; Mlle. Rosario, Lucie Gerard, Nannette Stanley, Le Belle Otero and Mrs. Barney O'Neil.

The dinner cost $25,000. The favors were single jewels, each worth enough to support an American family in comfort for a year. The music cost $1500 alone; the flowers, $2000. A chef who had cooked for his imperial majesty the Czar of All the Russias, prepared the dishes personally. When the feast was ended "Mon Cher Harrie" was the idol of Paris. He had surprised even that gay city, to whom surprises are only the routine of life.

But it was "Mon Cher Harrie" who knew a thing or two more. Not even Yarmouth guessed that the dinner was not for the beauties, but for him. So when the trip to Pittsburg was proposed—Thaw was too clever to propose it till long after—he fell in readily.

There was a round of gayety in Washington, where Mrs. Thaw was sending out invitations right and left to the set that runs the capital. An assault on New York society wasn't so successful. Yarmouth, after an unsatisfactory season at Newport, got the real thing in cold shoulders here in town. Only Mrs. John Jacob Astor's shining reflected light saved him from total social eclipse.

Then came the coup—the trip to Pittsburg. Miss Byrd Thaw was there, and in due course she met the earl. In a most casual way it was intimated to him that she was already rich in her own right, and would be still richer some day.

"Fiddlesticks!" laughed Miss Byrd one day, when she learned what was up.

She spurned the belted earl, and in the proper time her engagement was announced to a young Pittsburger who had long paid her court. But this didn't daunt Harry Kendall Thaw; not for a minute.

Why not Alice, after all?

He trembled at the thought. Alice Cornelia Thaw was the last girl in Pittsburg that anybody thought might set her cap for nobility. She was the quietest, most reserved girl in all Pittsburg's fashionable set—her whole life had been given up unostentatiously to philanthropic work, to charity, to the church. Her sole amusement was her dogs. She had never gone extensively in society. Her pleasure was in giving pleasure to others less fortunate than she.

She met the earl formally. Harry Thaw did the introducing. Suddenly philanthropic work knew her no more. She even neglected her dogs. Almost in the twinkling of an eye she was head over heels in love with the dapper young nobleman. She was willing to give heart, life and fortune for her new love. She came to idolize the man. "My Lord Yarmouth" she always called him.

The Thaws protested. Benjamin Thaw, oldest son of the late William Thaw, who divided his $10,000,000 equally among his children, led the revolt. He was the girl's half-brother and old enough to be her father. He begged her to give up the thought of marrying Yarmouth. The girl laughed at him.

Mrs. Thaw protested. Suddenly, while Yarmouth was most insistent in his courtship, Mrs. Thaw fled south during the winter just passed, taking Alice with her. Now Yarmouth wasn't well fixed enough to follow in state. Harry Thaw came to the rescue. Three days later there was Yarmouth at Cumberland Island to renew his suit. Mamma was circumvented. She fought a while longer, hesitated, lost. Her surrender was unconditional—she agreed at length to the engagement.

"Bless you," said Harry Thaw, "my children," or something like it.

It was he who upheld his sister in her desire for a short engageemnt and an early wedding. Mrs. Thaw wanted a longer wait to make sure that Alice was certain of her love for the earl. Harry Thaw triumphed. When Benjamin Thaw went to his sister and begged her to give up the earl he was turned down without even an argument. Again Harry Thaw scored. Benjamine Thaw is the recognized head of the family, and a hard-headed, sober business man, who manages the vast estate left by his father for the benefit of all the children alike.

Edward Thaw, another half-brother, was equally odburate. He declined to be a party to the wedding and refused to attend. Harry Thaw didn't mind. Both elder brothers announced positively that they would have nothing to do with the wedding. They kept their word. But they failed to have it called off.

At length everything was arranged—chiefly by Harry Thaw. Everything, that is, except the question of financial settlement, so often an important one in international marriages. It has been widely printed and never denied that the first proposition was unsatisfactory to the earl and that he insisted upon a larger amount. At any rate there was a hitch in the program. The earl's family lawyer was brought from England to draw the marriage settlement.

The fact seems to be that, with Harry Thaw's help, the matter was finally arranged. Mrs. Thaw, the bride's mother, in a statement to the Associated Press in writing explains that a certain part of the bride's income was set aside in perpetuity for the benefit of the Yarmouth title and estates. And the earl got an annual income besides.

But creditors pounced upon the noble earl even on his wedding morn. The wedding was almost an hour late, thanks to various creditors.

Meanwhile there was another hitch—the bachelor dinner. No smart wedding is complete without such a jolly function—the bridegroom-to-be must entertain his ushers and his intimate friends before he sells his freedom forever. Yarmouth ordered a stunning dinner at the Hotel Shenley.

"Spare no expense," said he.

"But who's to pay?" asked the hotel people.

"O, never mind that," said the earl, airily, "it'll be all right."

But the hotel people did mind that. There was no feast for which the earl had to pay. Instead, one of Harry Thaw's friends obligingly invited all hands to a quasi bachelor dinner for which the nobleman wasn't called upon to spend a penny. In reality, it was Harry Thaw who jumped into the breach once again. His matchmaking was all but done now.

Noon and the wedding day. Some 150 of the guests bidden to the ceremony were lunching at the Union Club, guests of Congressman-elect Kirk Porter. Harry Thaw, ready now to reap the reward of his tact and good generalship, best man for Yarmouth and major-domo of all arrangements, was there, too.

Events over which he had no control kept him from attending the wedding at 4 p. m., and standing up with his dear friend, George Francis Seymour, Earl of Yarmouth. It wasn't because he didn't wish to attend. As for Benjamin Thaw and Edward Thaw, they flatly refused to go to either the church or the reception.

But Harry Thaw's sister was safely married to her earl at last on Monday, April 27. On the following Wednesday they sailed for Europe.

However, the trunks got off to dear old England in safety. Col. Stephen H. Olie, a lawyer, newly engaged for the earl, paid each creditor as he arrived at the pier.

Who put up the money?

Perhaps Harry Kendall Thaw can tell.

WHAT THE EARL'S NEW YORK CREDITORS SAY.

By M. J. Quinn, His Landlord.

THE Earl of Yarmouth owed me $115 for flat rent. He leased a flat of me at 65 West Thirty-sixth street, and finally gave me two checks to secure payment. I sent the checks through my bank and realized on one of them, and took a note to secure the balance of my money. I still have the note and $90 of the amount I succeeded in getting from the earl some time ago. I have up to the present time made no effort to collect the remaining sum. I did not put the matter into a lawyer's hands, or have anything to do with attaching, or threatening to attach, the baggage of the earl when he sailed. I am simply waiting and, when the earl returns to America, I am sure I will get my money.

By J. J. X. Hickey, His Carpenter

THE work for which the Earl of Yarmouth owed us $90 was done in March, 1901, over two years ago, and since then we have written him several times asking for our money, but he took no notice of our letters. When the work was completed he told us that he was bankrupt, but that his financial embarrassment would be only temporary and he would pay us soon. We waited two years, then put our claim in the hands of a lawyer, when we heard that he was likely to come into money by his marriage. Mr. Harrington is looking out for our interests and threatened to attach the baggage of the earl on the day he sailed. This was not done, however. The matter bids fair to be settled in another way.

BY HARRY THAW.

IT was I who made the match and brought about this union. And I know that it will be a happy one. The Earl loves my sister dearly, and I know that she simply adores him.

Why shouldn't they be happy. There is all this twaddle about international marriages not being happy. Some of them have not been, but many others have. I know this one will be.

It is a great union—a union between one of the oldest families of England and one of the oldest and most prominent families of the United States, if I do say it myself.

I am delighted. I feel like a boy out of school. An Earl is my brother-in-law. Why shouldn't I be glad? Yarmouth is a prince of good fellows; my sister is the sweetest girl in the world. I am very proud of them both.

The Earl is one of those fellows with whom any one should be happy. What kind of a fellow is he? Well, one of those good, whole-souled young chaps who likes a little fun, of course, but a fellow who will make a model husband.

He has seen a good deal of life, and for that reason I expect that after he and my sister have gone to their home in England he will settle down and make what is known as the ideal husband. He is good at heart, and all of the malicious stories that have been told about him are lies. I consider that my sister has made a very desirable match.

Does any one suppose that I would have brought the Earl here to meet my sister if I had not considered it a desirable union? The argument against the union that the Earl is penniless cuts no figure in this matter. He is not wholly penniless; but if he were, hasn't my sister enough in her own name to allow them to live comfortably throughout their lives?

Of course, there was opposition to the wedding from certain members of the family. There usually is. At first my mother objected to the match, but after she discovered that my sister's mind was really set upon it, and after she had also discovered what a really admirable young man the Earl is, she readily gave her consent. There is nothing to these stories that my mother opposed the match after she really learned the true conditions.

Of course, the opposition at first was so strong that my sister, now the Countess of Yarmouth, was sent to Florida by my mother to visit our other sister, Mrs. Carnegie. The Earl was then in Washington and followed by the next train. Did I assist him in following? Well, now, that is a question which I really cannot answer. You know there are some things which we can not go into too deeply. At any rate, the Earl followed. Were they engaged before that time? Well, I can not say.

They are married now, and I am glad that I have a sister who is the wife of an Earl, and some day will be a Marchioness.

The Earl was my friend; the Countess that is now is my sister. I loved them both; I brought them together, and they learned to love each other as ardently as any couple ever loved before.

WHERE MANY PRINCES ARE OUT OF JOBS

TITLES are often not nearly so valuable or worthy as they may appear from this side of the ocean, and Missouri girls who pine for "Lord" Barrington alliances should take notice.

There are many villages in Austria, Poland and Russia populated entirely by princes of royal blood. True, they are just peasants, but they are described in all legal documents as princes, and they are legitimately descended from princely ancestors.

The reason of this is that in certain parts of these countries the father's title is inherited by all his children. In the course of time the scions of one family form an entire village, and, the estate being usually far from rich, the younger princes become farmers, merchants and laborers

These titles are often great handicaps in Europe, as few persons are willing to engage a workman who has a higher rank than themselves, and many of the peasant princes on leaving home have hard struggles to make a living.

Often the prince finds himself without work, and, even when he obtains employment the production of his "papers" is apt to end the engagement.

The English people, with their traditional reverence for titles, were shocked the other day when a Russian prince appeared in a London police court to press a charge against a firm of ready-made clothiers who charged him $11 for an $8 suit.

ST. LOUISAN INVENTS A NEW CAR BRAKE

G. E. CARNES of 1608 Franklin avenue, St. Louis, has invented a new car brake. The inventor says of it:

"You will notice that instead of the usual method of applying the brake to the wheels, the shoes are dropped on the rails The wheels run upon these shoes, stopping the car. With the present method of braking it is only possible to stop the wheels, and by so doing the wheels are permitted to slide on the rails, as there is only about one and three-eighths of an inch of wheel surface in contact with the rail. If my brake shoe was one and one-half inch long, it would have the same power, but as I can make it a foot long I can get seven and one-half times as much power. It applies the friction to the rails instead of the wheels. I have applied for a patent upon the device."

The most wonderful farm in the world is situated in Canada. Its peculiarity lies in the fact that everything is worked by electricity. Two waterfalls within the bounds of the farm, some 60 feet and 150 feet high, furnish the motive power, a central powerhouse being erected near, and the current is transmitted by wires to every available place on the farm. The churns and other necessary implements have electric motor attachments. A motor of 10-horsepower works the mowing machine and another works a log saw, while the house, barns and grounds of the farm are illuminated by electricity. The owner declares that he saves some £800 in labor annually.

Mrs. Mary A. Walden, mother of Charles A. Walden, formerly editor of the Howard County Advertiser, was born June 12, 1813, in Cooper's Fort, Howard County. She lives with her son, Robert H. Walden, three miles west of Fayette, and but a few miles from her birthplace. She is probably the oldest person living who was born in a frontier fort within the confines of what is now the state of Missouri. She was 7 years of age when Missouri was admitted to the Union, and has lived through the administration of every President of the United States except four.

A St. Louis fruit lover says that while Missouri raises more apples and finer apples than any other state in the Union, the Missouri apple is rarely seen in St. Louis. He explains it by saying that the fine apples from the big orchards in the apple belt are all shipped to Eastern and European cities, where they command a bigger price than anyone cares to pay for apples in Missouri, where they may be seen on the trees.

From Indiana School Teacher to Ruler of Korea.

Extraordinary Career of Lee S. J. Hunt Formerly of Columbia City Now Worth $15,000,000 and an Oriental Potentate

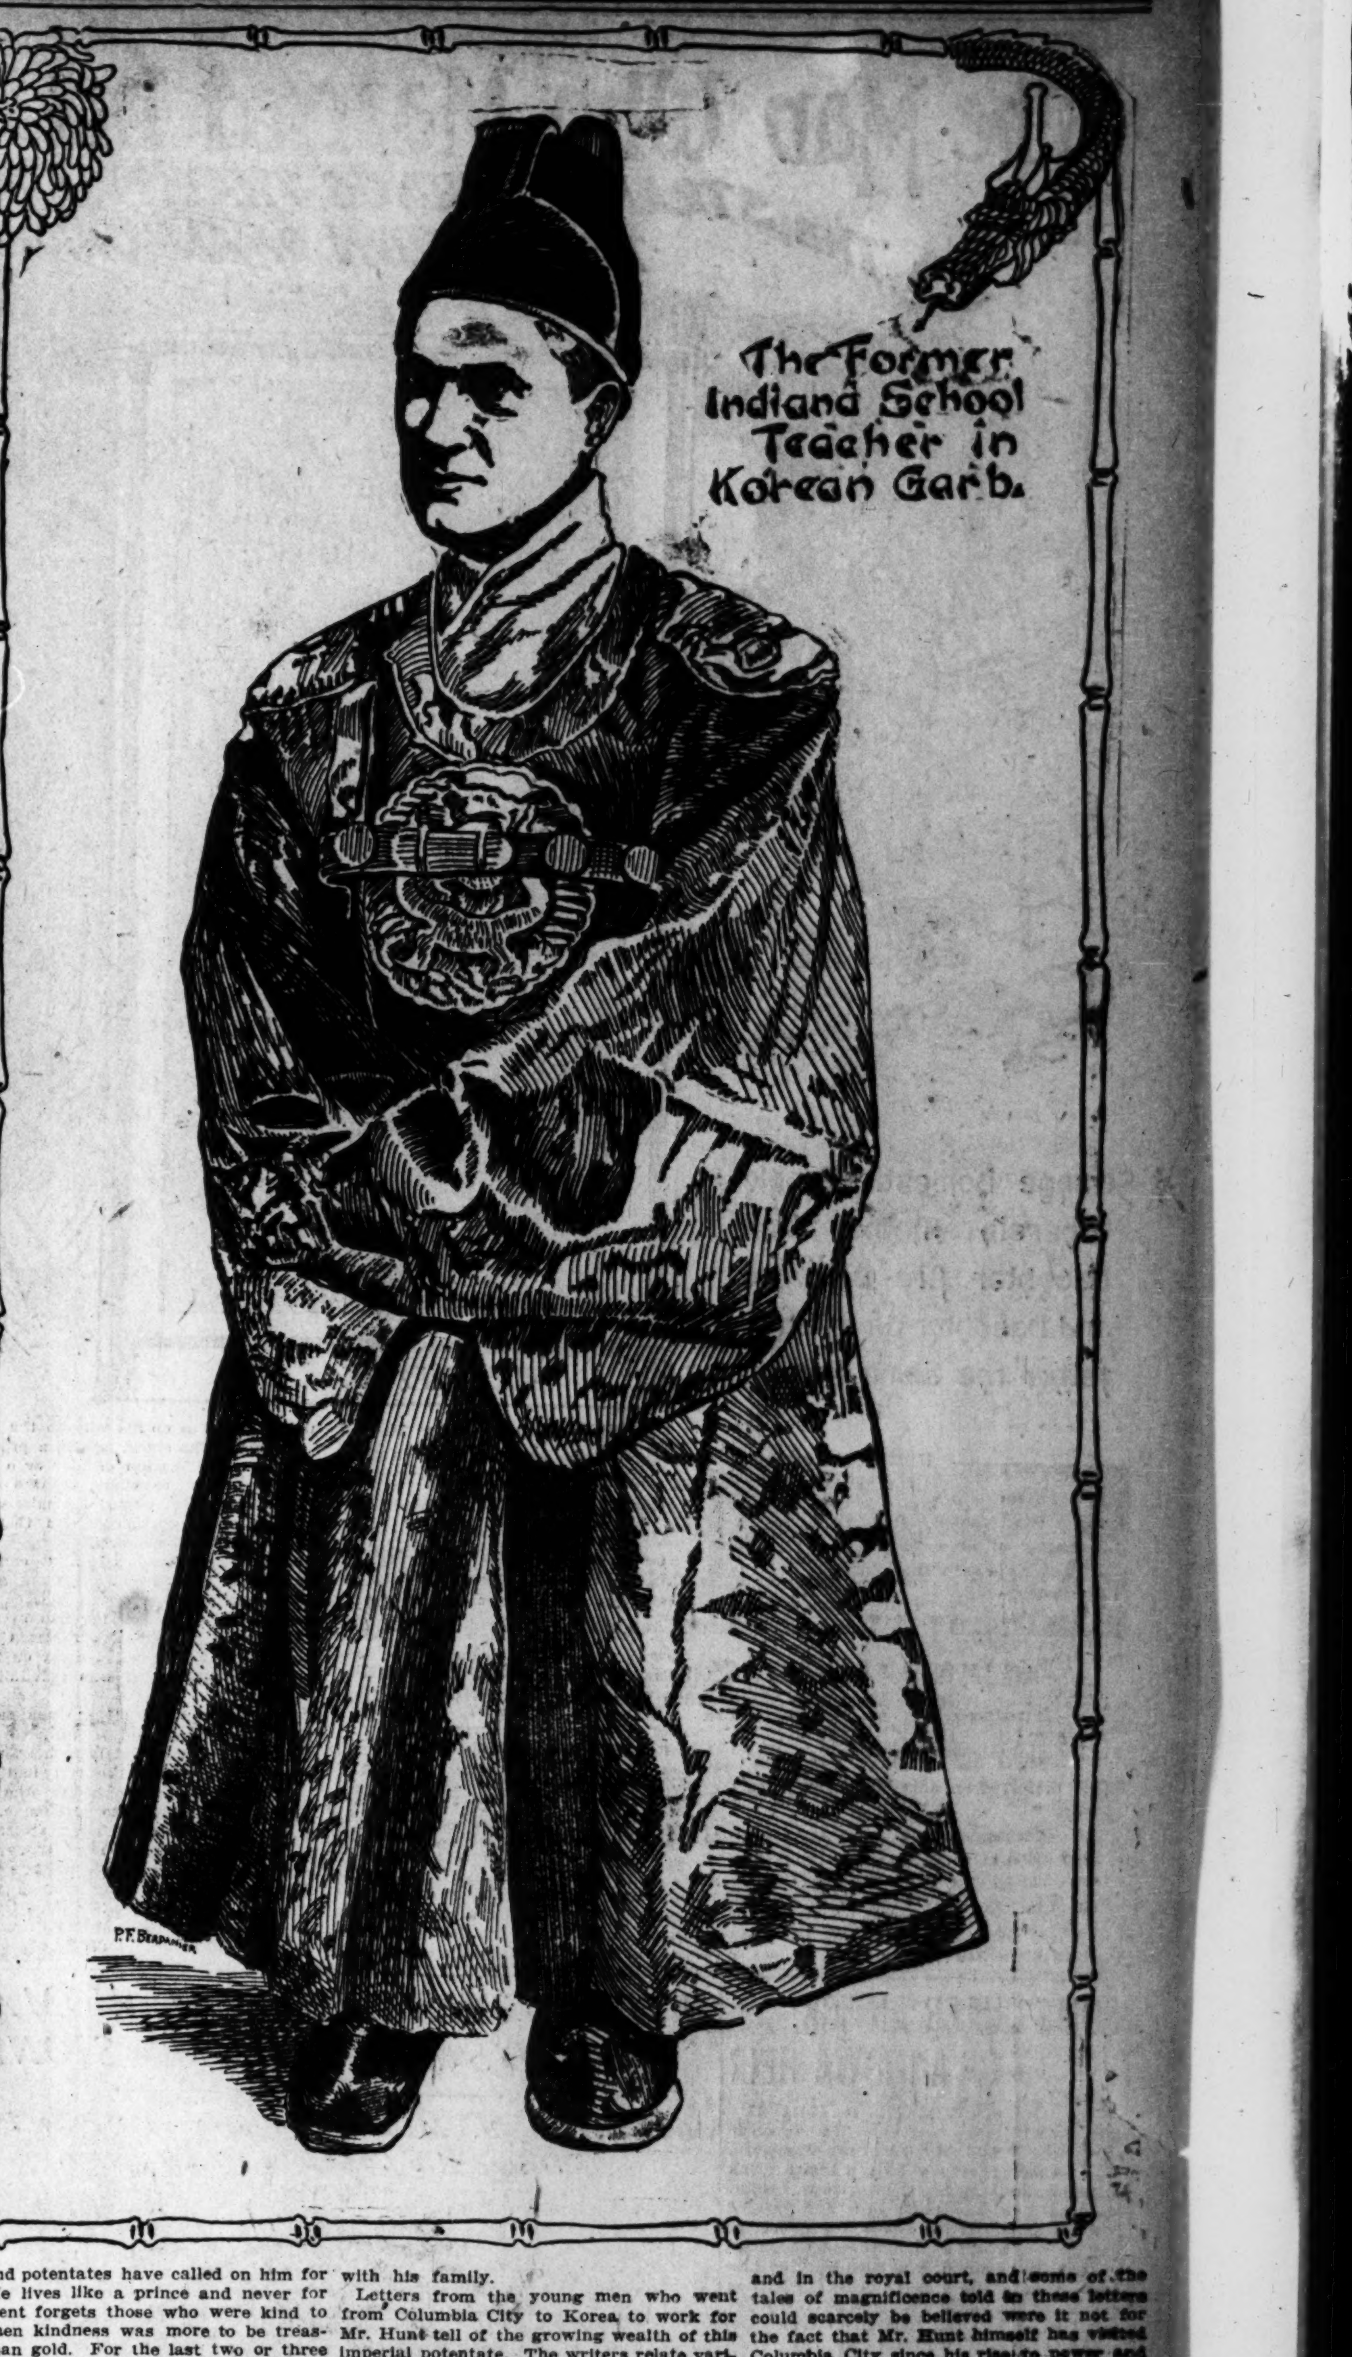
LEE S. J. HUNT



The Former Indiana School Teacher in Korean Garb.

Poor Hoosier Lad Becomes a Multi-Millionaire and Revisits His Boyhood Home—He Outdazzles the Count of Monte Cristo in Wealth and Practically Rules a Realm.

FACT stranger than fiction is exemplified in the career of Lee S. J. Hunt, an Indiana farmer boy and country school teacher, who has become the confidential adviser to the King of Korea, and who recently paid a visit to his old home at Columbia City, Ind. Years ago Mr. Hunt disappeared from his native county heavily in debt. Now he is said to be worth $15,000,000, has paid his debts thrice over, and is leading the life of a veritable nabob in the kingdom of Korea, the right-hand man of the monarch, the Cecil Rhodes of the realm.

"Smith" Hunt, as he was called in Columbia City, has outdone in real life the Count of Monte Cristo. His career smacks strongly of the strenuous, but savors more of the marvelous. He has overcome difficulties apparently insurmountable, made the impossible possible, successfully defied the traditions that govern ordinary men and risen to a pinnacle of power and magnificence never dreamed of by his Hoosier lad associates in his boyhood—but always vivid in the dreams of "Smith" Hunt, who set out early in life with the belief that the world was his oyster and that he owned the jackknife that could open it.

VERILY, the rise of "Smith" Hunt is a tale that reads like a condensed novel of Dumas or a wonder-book in the earlier style of Jules Verne. There are scores of able romanticists who, turned loose in the vast field of imaginative possibilities, could never conceive a story so utterly out of the ordinary as that of this amazing Hoosier, who is now 49 years of age. His friends point proudly to him and say:

"There is a man who never took an unfair advantage, yet he is a multi-millionaire. He owed money, but he never forgot his debts, and an obligation of $5, though outlawed by 20 years' lapse, remained fresh in his memory, and he paid it with compound interest.

When Mr. Hunt revisited the scenes of his humble boyhood the old neighbors stood around and gaped at him, open-mouthed. And why not? This Korean nabob, this person agilitter with diamonds and the master of thousands of men who work his plantations and his mines, was born in the little log hut which he visited, nine miles from Columbia City, of poor pioneers. He was one of the 10 children of Franklin and Martha Hunt, and shared their poverty. He toiled all day in the fields and slept at night in the attic loft. His education was acquired at the "deestrick" school of the neighborhood, but the boy became, nevertheless, a teacher of languages and the president of a college, for, as his old neighbors now assert, "he jes' had it in him."

"Dad burn me, Smith," said a middle-aged farmer of Etna township, who went to school with Hunt 40 years ago, "I allus knowed you had spunk an' git-up-an'-git in you, but blame my picter ef I ever thought you'd be side pardner to a king."

When a boy, Hunt was noted as a schemer. He always was planning something to do, and in his play, his work, his books, his great desire was to be ahead of his companions. As he grew older he was noted as the best trader in the county. He would buy or trade for anything he thought there was money in, but he never went into anything haphazard—he made no move that he did not figure out its possibilities in advance.

At 16 years of age, while his companions were taking life easy, Hunt was teaching school in Troy township, and as a teacher he inaugurated many new ideas. He taught school at Pierceton, Larwill, and in 1869 was selected principal of the Columbia City schools. He traded and speculated and made some money, and seemed to be getting on well.

In 1880 he disappeared from Columbia City, leaving about $2000 in debts. No one but Judge Adair, who was his schoolmaster and friend, knew where he had gone, but each of his creditors got a letter, sent from different parts of the country, telling him that in time he would come back and pay every dollar against him.

Hunt settled for a time at Mt. Pleasant, Io. Senator Harlan was a member of the school board, and to him Hunt applied for a position as teacher. One of the requirements was that he should be a teacher of languages, and he had not the education. He declined to pass an examination or offer any letters of recommendation, simply saying that if he was employed he would make the school the best it ever had been. Hunt was given the place, hired a tutor, who instructed him in the languages at night, and the next day the new principal gave to the pupils knowledge he had gleaned the night before. His wonderful executive ability brought about many changes. His institute work became known all over Iowa.

At that time he boarded with the mother of Frank Hatton, afterward postmaster-general of the United States, and her advice and teaching had much to do with his success. All this time the people of Columbia City wondered if "Smith" Hunt was dead or alive. From Mt. Pleasant Hunt was appointed superintendent of the Des Moines schools, and later was elected president of Ames College.

In a few years he went to Seattle, Wash. He had very little money, not much more than he needed for his daily expense, but he bought the Daily Post-Intelligencer, organized a stock company and in a short time was paid $18,000, which he at once put into the plant. In the conduct of the paper his wonderful executive ability was again demonstrated, and it was not long until he had made it one of the best papers on the Pacific coast. He was the original boomer of Seattle, and the story of that boom is a world-wide story. Hunt became interested in almost everything, railroads, steam railways, mines, street railways, was a director in half a dozen financial institutions, president of a bank, a stockholder in dozens of companies. In politics he was the boss of the state.

The United States senatorship was offered to him, but he declined it and then dictated the election of the senators. His word was law and as good as gold. Generous and affable, no man in the state of Washington had more friends than he.

Then came the panic of 1893. Values went to crash and there was a financial mourning all over the West. Mr. Hunt left Seattle owing $1,200,000 with nothing to pay it. But he sent word back that some day he would return and pay every cent with compound interest.

In New York he got in with some wealthy men, who sent him to China to build a railroad. But after his arrival there the Chinese rescinded the concession to the American syndicate and Hunt was "on his uppers" again. He knocked about China a few months and then went to Korea. How it happened no one knows, but he got on the good side of the Korean King and for him negotiated a loan with Russia. For this the King gave him a large tract of land on which were gold and silver, and Hunt organized the Oriental Mining Co. and sold an interest in the mines to the Rothschilds for $6,000,000.

Then he returned temporarily to America. He published that on a certain day he would be in Seattle and pay off the claims against him. In one day he paid out more than $1,000,000. He had a list of every man he owed and he paid the claim according to his own books, with interest, and in some cases with compound interest.

More than that, he looked up every person who had invested money on his advice and lost and made good the losses. When he was square with Seattle, he rewarded a few friends who had been loyal to him in adversity, and then went to Columbia City, Ind. To settle his $2000 claims he paid out more than $12,000. For a claim of $100 he would pay $250 and in addition he made generous presents to friends of his boyhood.

At different times he has taken about thirty young men from Columbia City and made them bosses and superintendents in his mines in Korea. His brother, James, is the general superintendent of the works.

How much the former country school teacher is worth can only be estimated from the stories that have come back to Indiana, but it is generally understood that he is the owner of at least $15,000,000. He is the associate of Rockefeller and the Rothschilds and a welcome guest in the most exclusive circles in London, France, Vienna, Berlin and the United States.

Royalty has been pleased with his friendship, and potentates have called on him for aid. He lives like a prince and never for a moment forgets those who were kind to him when kindness was more to be treasured than gold. For the last two or three years Mr. Hunt's health has not been good, and he is now recuperating at Cairo, Egypt, with his family.

Letters from the young men who went from Columbia City to Korea to work for Mr. Hunt tell of the growing wealth of this imperial potentate. The writers relate various stories of the remarkable influence exercised by their benefactors over the King and in the royal court, and some of the tales of magnificence told in these letters could scarcely be believed were it not for the fact that Mr. Hunt himself has visited Columbia City since his rise to power and has given living evidence of his affluence and authority.

GEN. FREDERICK DENT GRANT AT THE LOG CABIN BUILT BY HIS FATHER

Son of the Great Soldier-President Was Moved Almost to Tears Upon Revisiting the Home of His Humble Boyhood, Now on the World's Fair Grounds.

WHEN Brigadier-General Frederick D. Grant was in St. Louis during and after the recent World's Fair dedication ceremonies a notable photograph was taken by Official Photographer Byrnes of the Exposition, which is reproduced here for the first time. It is a photograph that will belong to history and to romance—to the romantic history of the greatest American military commander and the most famous citizen who ever lived in St. Louis, Ulysses S. Grant.

The photograph represents the present Gen. Grant, eldest son of the hero of Appomattox and of a hundred hard-fought fields of victory, sitting on horseback in front of a log cabin—but what log cabin? It is the log house built nearly fifty years ago by the hands that refused to receive the proffered sword of Lee at Appomattox; the house that Grant built, the rude structure wherein for four years he resided with his family in St. Louis County, struggling manfully but not very successfully to make a good living for his wife and babes.

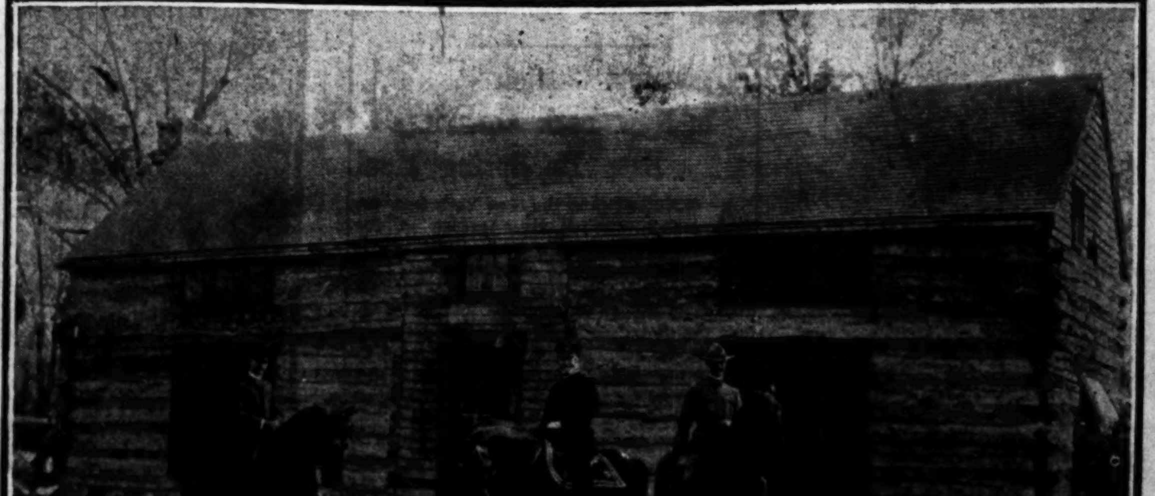
Frederick Dent Grant was one of those babes. The present brigadier-general in the United States army was born in the city of St. Louis, in 1850, and from his fifth to his ninth year he lived in that old cabin, then newly-hewn out of the oaks of the forest; with his baby brothers he played about its doorstep, and sometimes he accompanied his father, Capt. Grant, retired, to the woods along the Gravois road, where the head of the family swung his ax all day long, chopping trees into the cordwood that he loaded upon his wagon and hauled into St. Louis, nine miles away, to sell to the city people. There were times when Capt. Grant, though wearied from his day's work, picked up the little fellow and carried him home upon his broad shoulders, to meet the good wife standing in that cabin doorway and to go in and eat the savory supper she had prepared.

The visit of Brigadier-General Grant to the log house was arranged by Mr. C. F. Blanke, present owner of the cabin. Recently Mr. Blanke has had the house taken down and removed to the World's Fair grounds, where it was set up again, piece by piece in proper place, just as it appeared when Capt. "Lys" Grant lived there a few years before the civil war. The site of the cabin is upon the rearward summit of Art Hill, not far from the growing Palace of Fine Arts. It is embowered in trees, and from the windows of the house one may look forth upon the great picture of the Fair.

"In this spot," said Mr. Blanke to Gen. Grant, "I propose that the log house shall stand until it shall have rotted down—and may that day be many generations hence."

In the photograph Gen. Grant appears mounted upon Village Boy, Mr. Blanke's well-known horse. The other men in the picture are Mr. Blanke and Lieut. Morey, Gen. Grant's aide.

While visiting the cabin Gen. Grant, who is bronzed by campaigns in the Philippines, and whose hair already is tinged with gray, was much moved. He entered the cabin and pointed out the room upstairs, to the right of the entrance, where he slept with his little brothers. He told of long winter evenings spent by the big fireplace in one of the rooms downstairs, when Capt. Grant and his wife and children sat in a semi-circle facing the glowing backlog and talked of their prospects in life.



Capt. Grant sometimes talked of his campaign in Mexico, telling his little boys of his soldiering experiences, and the children listened with avid interest. The father also told them of his lonely life on the Pacific coast, where he was stationed at an army post far removed from his wife and little Fred, and how homesick he became—so homesick that he resigned his commission just after being promoted to a captaincy and came back to St. Louis to make a home for his family.

"And those were happy days in the log house," said Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, shortly before she died last year, "and the eight years in the White House were happy, too."

The eyes of Gen. Fred Grant filled with tears as he recalled the years in the log cabin; his voice grew husky, and the men who accompanied him drew apart, so that the son of the great commander might commune alone with sacred memories.

Nearly thirty years had passed since Gen. Grant visited the log house. Nearly half a century has elapsed since he lived in it. Yet he seemed to know intimately every feature of the old home, and it was observed that he scrutinized closely certain spots in the chinking inside the central hallway. Nobody asked him what he was seeking there; it was not for the public to inquire, for the memories of an ageing man are sacred unto himself.

MISSOURI MAN LEAVES A PECULIAR WILL

WHEN E. Smith Gipson of College Mound, Mo., decided the other day not to "stay on living" (as he phrased it) he left a study in physiology, philology and legality for the probate court of Macon County in the shape of his last will and testament disposing of an estate valued at $100,000. The probate court, without understanding the will, has "passed it up" to the supreme court.

The will contains about 500 words and has not a single punctuation mark. It is printed here exactly as it was written—spelling and all.

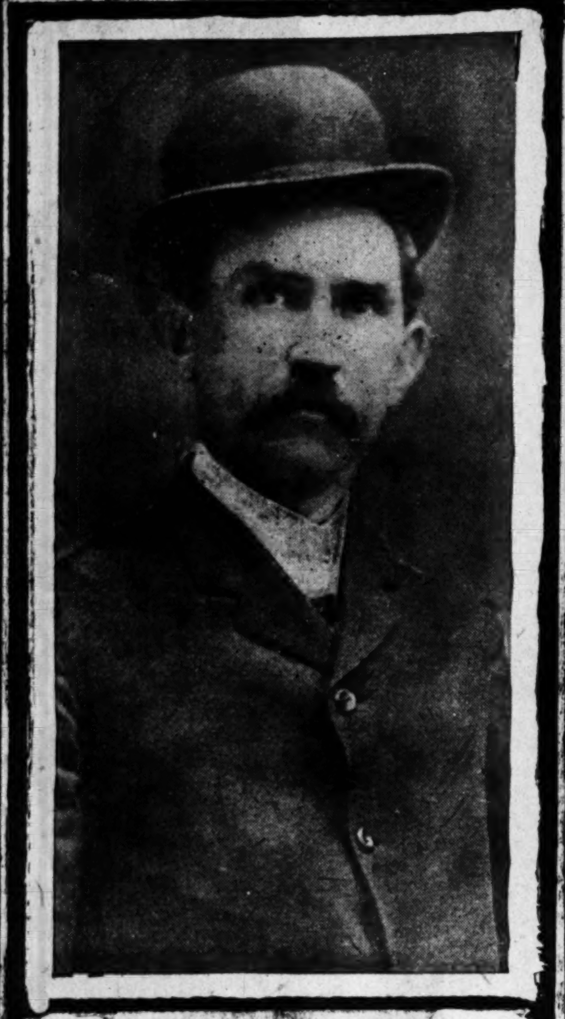
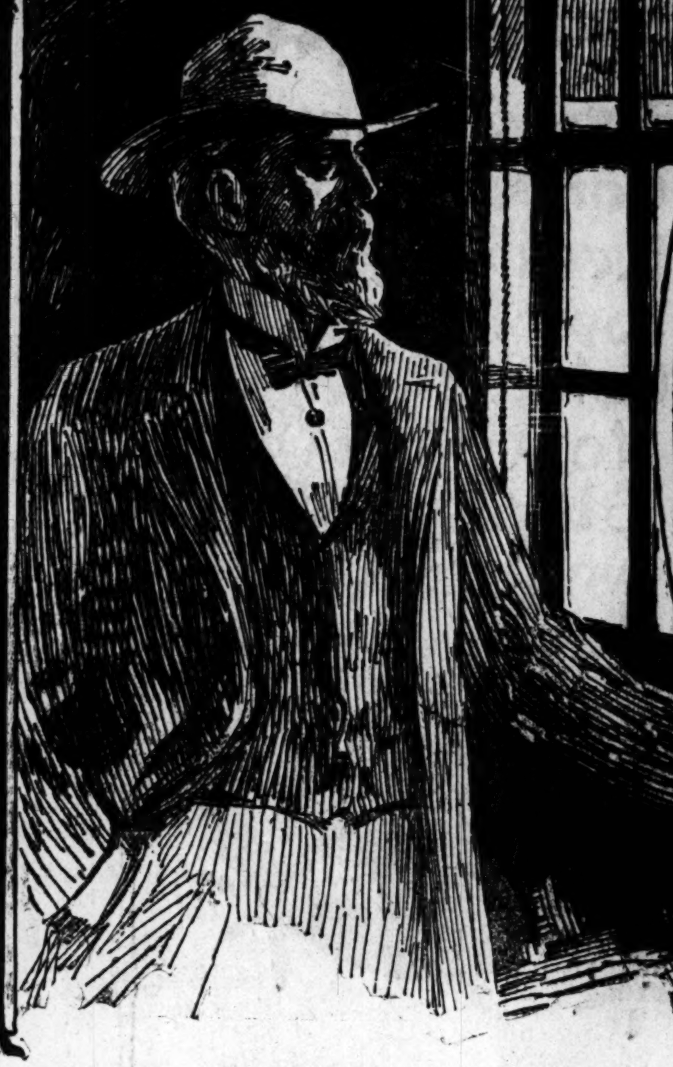
The Man Who Married his Step Daughter.

THE STRANGE THINGS THAT FOLLOWED THE RETURN OF AN OHIO ENOCH ARDEN.



WILLIAM BAKER.



NOSHA FAIRCHILD.

Strange Domestic Tangle Wherein Mother and Daughter Are Divorced and Daughter Weds Stepfather the Same Day.

SPRINGFIELD, O., May 14.

SURELY the strangest domestic tangles ever recorded in this part of the state centers around a divorce granted William Baker, who brought suit against his wife, Ollie Baker, on the ground of bigamy. Within half an hour after Mrs. Baker was divorced her daughter, Nosha Fairchild, was granted a divorce from her husband, John Fairchild, on the ground of cruelty, and within an hour after Mrs. Baker walked from the courtroom William Baker claimed the daughter as his second wife.

Samuel Hunt, the first husband of Mrs. Ollie Baker, has come back from an absence of 25 years in the West, and it is possible that his wife, who believed him dead, may permit him to return to her.

The story leading up to this situation is of a very remarkable character.

TWENTY-FIVE years ago, Mrs. Baker, then Ollie Williams, was the acknowledged belle of St. Paris, near here. Her father was a well-to-do farmer and as an only child her every whim was humored. When Samuel Hunt carried off the girl's heart he was the envied of all the youths for miles around. Hunt was of a restless disposition and had not been married more than a year when the desire to try his fortune in the West seized him. His wife opposed such a course so vigorously that he finally gave the subject up.

He again settled down to the quiet life of the village, but the desire to try his hand in the great country along the Pacific had not been quenched and one morning his wife found a note saying that Hunt could no longer resist his desire and that when she received the communication he would be miles on his way to the Rockies.

The note was short, and to a proud spirit it gave no indication of love or a thought of the person to whom it was directed. The young wife showed the missive to the mother of her husband, and then locked her secret in her bosom.

The village wondered and commented, but weeks passed and the months lengthened into years and the whereabouts of Samuel Hunt remained veiled in mystery. To the curious, Mrs. Hunt stated that her husband had been called away on business, and that his return was indefinitely delayed.

The senior Mrs. Hunt, her mother-in-law, never had been friendly to her and had objected strenuously to her son's marriage. Even after the girl had received the mother-in-law's blessing the latter's feelings had undergone no change, and the young couple were under the disagreeable impression that they were being watched and criticised by one who has not disposed to overlook the assumed faults of the wife. Even after her son's letter had been shown her by the grief-stricken young woman, the mother did not abate her haughty demeanor, and in fact as time went on she increased her coldness to such an extent that the young Mrs. Hunt rarely visited her.

Shortly after Hunt's disappearance a daughter was born to the deserted wife.

It was a year and a half after Hunt had taken his sudden departure that his mother gave the wife he had left behind him the information that he was dead. According to the story told the girl, Hunt had died of a fever in the West, and had left the request that the news of his death be taken to his mother. There had been no mention of his wife, and this fact was significantly emphasized by the mother in breaking the news to her daughter-in-law. Young Mrs. Hunt long before had gone to the home of her parents, and here passed seven years, her life blighted by the blow.

On the death of her father she had applied for and obtained the village school and for ten years dragged through the weary routine of school work. She was 18 at the time of her marriage to Hunt, and she was 36 when William Baker asked her to become his wife. As a girl Mrs. Hunt had been one of the prettiest in the village, and the good looks which had been the comment of the town had not been changed by the patient toil that followed. Mrs. Hunt accepted the offer, but her second choice did not result any more happily than her first. The love which she thought had been bestowed upon her, according to her story, she soon found was sadly lacking, and although her wants were faithfully supplied, she was never happy.

Her daughter by her first husband had grown to womanhood, had married a farmer by the name of Fairchild.

Six months ago Mrs. Baker answered a knock at her front door and was confronted by a rugged, heavily-bearded man who met her look of inquiry with a smile.

"Don't you know me?" he asked.

It was her first husband, the man she had been told was dead. As it developed, however, the elder Mrs. Hunt really believed her son dead at the time she had imparted the information to her daughter-in-law.

The story which Hunt told of his sojourn in the West was rather commonplace considering the other details. He had written his wife several times, he said, and had received no answer. Then, thinking that she did not care to forgive his abandonment of her, he ceased his letters and accepted the conclusion that he had been forgotten. It was nearly twenty-five years after he had left for the West that he returned. He had made a fortune during his varied career and had come back to the scene of his youth, drawn by a strange impulse, which he analyzed as home-sickness.

When Baker returned home and was told the strange story he listened with an unrelenting silence. His wife was legally the wife of another. What mattered it that for nearly a quarter of a century she had not seen her husband, and had firmly believed him dead? She had never been divorced. She must leave him.

Baker instituted a suit for divorce. At the same time Mrs. Fairchild, the daughter of his wife, who had made an unfortunate marriage as well, also filed a petition for divorce.

It is rumored that there is a strong probability that Samuel Hunt is ready and willing to again claim his wife, and the gossips say that Mrs. Baker is willing to accept her fate. When interviewed concerning her life-story, Mrs. Baker laughed and said:

"Yes, it is a rather strange tale. You might say almost that it is a chapter taken from a novel. No, I have no objections to telling you my story. It is true—painfully true. Is the story true that I am to go back to Mr. Hunt? Well, now, you are pressing the questions too far. Mr. Hunt goes back West in a few weeks. That is all I know."

SOME QUEER ANTICS OF AN IOWA HEIR

DES MOINES, Io., May 15.

BECAUSE the bartender of a saloon in the Hotel Weyburn of Weyburn, Canada, refused to sell him a drink of liquor, John M. Steichen of Iowa bought the hotel over the man's head and ordered him peremptorily to leave the place or pay an exorbitant rent. Because the judge of the police court of Weyburn lectured him when arrested on a petty charge, Steichen purchased the house occupied by the judge and turned him out into the street. Because a pretty waitress at the hotel brought him four eggs, instead of three, when he ordered "Fry three, straight up," and coyly added "I hope they suit you, sir," Steichen gave the girl a $10,000 diamond brooch as a present.

It was by acts such as this that James M. Steichen of Forest City dissipated his fortune of $300,000, and, being left without a cent in the world, was ordered confined in the state insane asylum and cared for at the expense of the state. Steichen has been in the asylum for several months, and was released this week, by order of court, on a writ of habeas corpus presented to Judge Clifford P. Smith. He is free again, but minus his fortune, and must start his life anew.

Steichen came into his money through an inheritance from his father, and immediately left Iowa, going north into Canada. He settled in Weyburn, and immediately proceeded to create a name by his strange escapades. One night, while under the influence of liquor, Steichen went into the barroom of the Hotel Weyburn and ordered a Scotch. The bartender noticed that he was far gone, and refused to give him another drink.

"You've had too much already," said the bartender.

"That's none of your business," replied Steichen, thoroughly enraged. "I want a drink."

"And you'll not get it here," replied the barkeeper, as he waited on another customer.

The next morning, when Steichen had sobered up, he went to the owner of the hotel and asked the price of the building and business complete. He offered to pay spot cash, and demanded immediate possession. The owner demanded $50,000. Steichen paid him without any hesitation. Then he marched to the hotel and again entered the barroom. The same bartender was on duty.

"You're the man that refused me a drink last night, aren't you?" asked Steichen.

The man admitted that he was.

"Do you run this place?"

The man replied that he did.

"How much rent do you pay?" continued Steichen.

The man replied.

"You'll pay double that from this day on or out you go," said Steichen, flashing his bill of sale in the man's face. There was nothing for the saloon man to do but pay the rent, and he is doing so to this day, as Steichen owned the hotel until he dissipated it with his other money.

A few days later Stechen was arrested in Weyburn on a petty charge, and, being taken before the local police judge, was fined a nominal sum. But not content with this the court gave him a stinging lecture. Steichen left the courtroom itching for revenge.

He immediately went to a real estate office and learned that the judge occupied a rented house. Before noon he had purchased the house, and, returning to the court, again saw the judge.

"I own this house now," said Steichen, showing his deed, "and out you go at once."

The court took his notice and was bundled out of the house without any ceremony.

On another occasion Steichen was seated at breakfast in his own hotel, and the pretty waitress who was in the habit of taking his orders, brought him an extra egg and, in addition to passing the time of day, as usual, added that she trusted the egges were done to suit him. This so pleased Steichen that he left the hotel after breakfast and, going to the jewelry store, bought the girl a $10,000 diamond brooch and gave it to her at the noon meal.

These acts continued until Steichen's family intervened and an information charging insanity was filed against him. He was brought back to his home in Forest City, Io., by a deputy sheriff, and, after an investigation by the insanity commission, was ordered confined in the Cherokee asylum. There he has been since, until this week, when he secured an attorney and, on application for a writ of habeas corpus, was taken before Judge Smith, at Northwood, and was ordered released.

WHO IS THE ORIGINAL WOMAN WORLD'S FAIR COMMISSIONER?

Mrs. Norman E. Mack of Buffalo and "Polly Pry" of Denver Are Candidates for the Honor.

WHO is the original "lady commissioner" for the World's Fair?

Just now there is in progress a good-natured dispute as to what woman was first appointed a state commissioner for the coming exposition. A few weeks ago the statement was published from Denver that "Polly Pry," a well-known newspaper writer of that city, was the first woman so honored. The newspaper woman is a member of Gov. Peabody's Colorado board of commissioners and is doing excellent work in helping to arrange for the state exhibit.

Now come the friends of Mrs. Norman E. Mack, wife of the editor and proprietor of the Buffalo Evening News, presenting the claims of that lady for priority of appointment. Mrs. Mack was appointed a member of the New York board about a year ago, and Miss "Pry's" appointment was made just before the World's Fair dedication ceremonies.

Therefore, which is first?

Mississippi Catfish In New York Aquarium Eats Its Spring Meal

ACCORDING to the New York Sun, the big Mississippi river catfish at the Aquarium in New York, which passes its winters in a state of hibernation, took its first food this year a few days ago, which is earlier than usual. In 1902 it ate for the first time after its winter period of repose on April 28 and in 1901 on April 30.

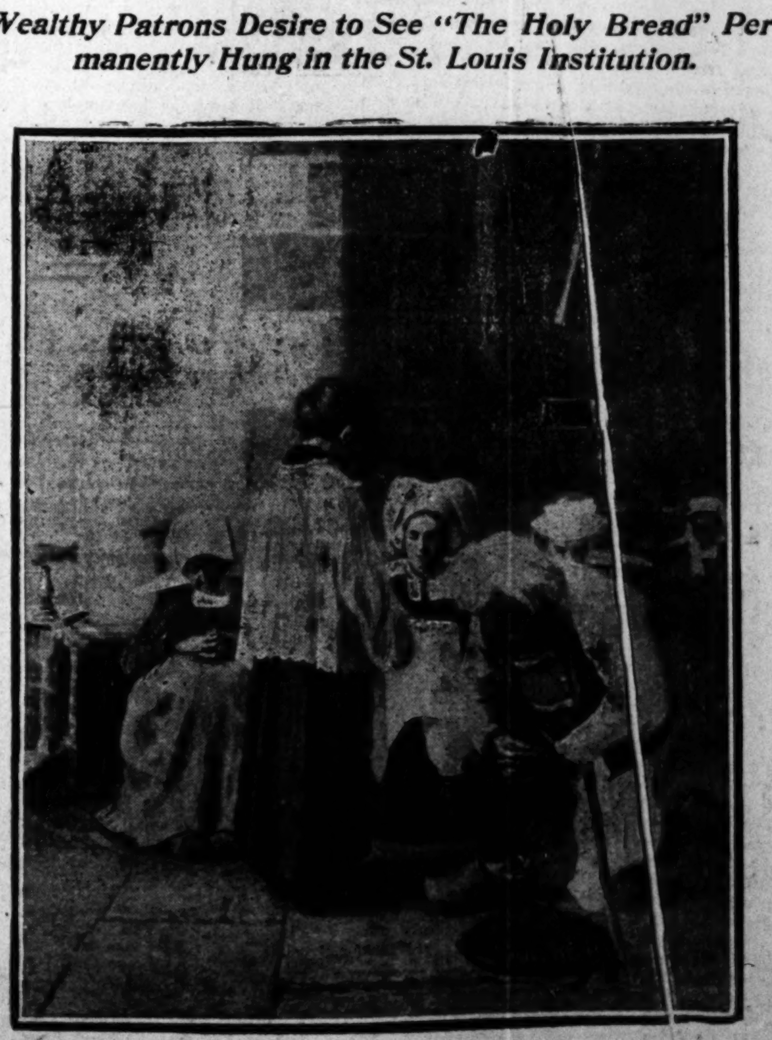
The big catfish took its last food in 1902 on August 15; so that its period of abstention for the winter season of 1902-3 was seven months and twenty days, which is about the usual duration, for, while it began eating this year somewhat earlier than usual, it began its fast last year rather earlier than usual.

In its river home this big catfish would bury itself in the mud in winter and there lie till spring came. Here it settles on the bottom of the tank and lies motionless, sometimes for weeks on a stretch. It may at long intervals scratch itself a little on the gravelly bottom of the tank, but commonly, like a carved fish, it lies motionless.

Then, when the water begins warming up again, with the return of spring, the big fish wakes up and is ready for breakfast. Its inaugural meal for the season of 1903 was a pound and a half of eels.

MUSEUM OF FINE ARTS MAY ACQUIRE THIS FINE PICTURE

Wealthy Patrons Desire to See "The Holy Bread" Permanently Hung in the St. Louis Institution.



MANY wealthy patrons of art and lovers of fine pictures in St. Louis are desirous of seeing the Museum of Fine Arts here permanently acquire the fine picture, "The Holy Bread," exhibited at the Strauss galleries a few weeks ago. A subscription has been started and a substantial sum toward the purchase of the picture already has been guaranteed.

The painting is the work of Mrs. Willie Betty Newman, and has been exhibited in the salon at Paris, where it was pronounced to be a work of art possessing very high merit. Mrs. Newman is a native of Tennessee. After a visit there following her art studies in Paris her old tutor said:

"I hope you are not painting some of those religious peasants."

That is precisely what Mrs. Newman did paint f[illegible]s and other pictures which won high pr[illegible]n the world's art center. "The Holy B[illegible] illustrates the deep religious devotion [illegible] the French peasantry, which is such a source of national strength and a constant inspiration to artists seeking the unusual and the beautiful. It is regarded as one of the finest pictures ever brought to St. Louis, and the greatest work [illegible] an American woman painter.

WASHINGTON ELM HAS BEEN FELLED

THE famous Washington Elm in front of the Wadsworth Atheneum in Hartford, Conn., was felled the other day on account of the possibility of its being blown down in the spring storms.

A cross section made in one of its limbs showed it to be partly hollow and the hollow space took the shape of the familiar profile bust of Washington.

The find has astonished local antiquarians and the specimen has been inspected by many thousands of people.

The Washington Elm was so called because Gen. Washington and Rochambeau met under it and were afterward entertained at the house of Daniel Wadsworth. The tree had been a landmark in Hartford for over a century.

The elm stood near the corner of Main and Atheneum streets, which is the headquarters of the Connecticut Historical Society. In the spacious grounds of the Atheneum is a statue of Nathan Hale, presented by J. Pierpont Morgan.

Much regret was expressed when it was learned that the noble elm would have to go, and when the wood choppers went to work there was an army of relic hunters on hand to get souvenirs. Chips, twigs and other pieces of the tree were carried away, and sections of the trunk were preserved to be made into chairs for the Historical Society.

Supt. Philip Hansling of the street department was one of the relic hunters, but his patriotic desires were not satisfied with an ordinary bit of wood from the tree.

He carefully examined every limb as it was cut away to find something that would be really suggestive of Washington himself, and, curiously enough, he was rewarded by finding the profile of Washington.

Researches have shown that this is one of the very few such things that have happened in this world. Though there are authentic records of a few portraits made by nature in the grain of marble, this portrait in wood is regarded by those who have seen it as more wonderful than anything else of the kind.

LEFT HIS PULPIT TO JOIN THE CIRCUS

Rev. Mr. Sheak of Indiana Will Lecture on Animals, Drive Tent Poles in His Spare Moments and Make Himself Generally Useful About the Great Traveling Show.

PERU, Ind., May 12.

REV. WILLIAM H. SHEAK, a regularly ordained minister of this city, has severed his connection with the church and has accepted a position with the John Robinson circus and menagerie.

He has been engaged by the circus people to lecture in the menagerie. These lectures are to be delivered before the regular circus performances, as the visitors pass around viewing the wild beasts, trained animals and museum freaks.

Rev. Mr. Sheak will also interest himself in other departments of the circus in order to become thoroughly acquainted with the business.

The ex-minister is considered to be peculiarly well fitted for the position, as he is one of the best informed men on natural history in this country.

He is 36 years of age, and was reared in the United Brethren Church. Even while attending college natural history was his hobby.

When he arrived in this country he became affiliated with the Methodists, and on various occasions he has delivered able and interesting sermons from the pulpit of that church.

In his natural history studies, which he has never lost sight of, he has been aided to a considerable extent by having access to the winter quarters of Wallace's circus at this place. He has also had much experience in the Chicago and Cincinnati zoological gardens.

Several years ago he married a young woman of this city and has since resided here.

BESIDES an orator of magnetic power as well as a learned naturalist, Mr. Sheak will doubtless bring to the circus business a refining and elevating flavor of erudition that it has heretofore lacked.

Until now the Demosthenes of the animal tent has failed to impress. He has usually been an overbearing individual in overalls and a plaid vest, whose stock of information was exhausted after he had pointed out to us which was the elephant's tail and which his proboscis. If we had dared to refer to the rhinoceros in his presence as a perissodactyle ungulate he would have said: "G'wan, ye mut! Stop slangin' de animals or I'll mix ye wid gravel and feed ye to der ostrich bird!"

Circus goers will welcome the new style cicerone of the cages—the man who will bring manners to the menagerie, scholarship to the sawdust and ripe research to the ringside. What a boon it will be to visit the animals under the guidance of a precentor who can describe the elephant with eloquence, the camel with culture, the snakes with sagacity and render the rhinoceros in rhyme!

Rev. Mr. Sheak's first study in natural history was made 36 years ago, the occasion being an interview with the stork which brought him to the home of his parents in North Manchester, Ind. He showed his love for the animal kingdom at a very early age. When a child he would never touch gingerbread unless it was baked in the shapes of lions, elephants and zebras.

When the circus came to town he would carry two buckets of water to the proboscideus Africanus to the other boys' one in order to get passed inside. Even then he was well posted on animals, and came to blows with a vulgar youngster who insisted upon calling the camelopardalidus a giraffe.

The future minister and zoological lecturer was educated at the United Brethren College in North Manchester, and in time was ordained a minister of the church of the same name. With the years his passion for natural history waxed stronger.

But in North Manchester his studies were naturally limited to the field of books and theory. No wild and peculiar animals roamed the placid lanes and fields. The pterodactylus was either extinct or hiding in the fastnesses around St. Louis and Belleville, Ill. The ichthyosaurus was harder to find than John Doe. A Sunday school picnic, coming home in the gloaming singing "Only an Armor Bearer," couldn't have flushed a single dinosaurus in the woods around North Manchester. There was nothing to peruse except the sycophantic ring-tailed possum, the pensive and distrait moo-cow and the obsequious chrome-yellow cur.

When Rev. Mr. Sheak wearied of his lonely voyage upon the sea of life and decided to annex a convoy he chose a peruvian bark. In other words, he married a young lady of Peru, Ind. Then he went to Peru to live, and became actively engaged in work for the Methodist Church, there being no United Brethren Church in the town.

He became also one of the leaders in the Epworth League, and had an almost unbroken record for attendance at its meetings. During all this time he never flagged in his study of animals so far as opportunity offered.

It was while the young minister was living in Peru that he began his face-to-face investigations of wild animals in a menagerie. B. E. Wallace's circus selected Peru for winter quarters. Mr. Sheak was allowed the freedom of the animal cages. There, at his leisure, he probed into their habits and most secret thoughts. He made himself familiar and friendly with all. There was no red tape between him and the tapir; and he went arm in arm with the armadillo.

It is said that Mr. Sheak knew all about the animals of America before he took up the study of those of foreign countries.

WHY I HAVE JOINED THE CIRCUS

By Rev. William H. Sheak.

I HAVE decided to join the Robinson circus and menagerie as an instructor in natural history, not because I do not love the Church and its people, but because I firmly believe that in my new profession I shall find a great field for Christian work.

I shall endeavor to inculcate as much as possible into my daily discourse upon the animals the maxims and precepts taught by Christianity.

Faith, hope, long suffering, the power of kindness are all taught by the lives of the poor beasts in the animal cages. I feel that my preaching will be quite as effective on the circus rostrum as in the pulpit.

He spent considerable time in the zoological gardens of Cincinnati and Chicago. He became familiar with the habits of the ground hog, the grizzly bear, the thing that says "willwalloo" in the Indiana corn field bottoms after sunset, before he extended his researches to other continents.

But now it is said that Mr. Sheak out-Kiplings Kipling in his knowledge of the jungle folk and his comprehensions of the ways of the bandarlog, the nilghi, the rock pythons, the tigers, lions, wolves and other fierce Asian beasts. As for our own animal, he is reported to have endangered already the laurels of Mr. Thompson-Seton of the interchangeable hyphen.

While not engaged in lecturing Mr. Sheak will keep busy at something else about the circus, as he intends to become thoroughly acquainted with all its details and departments. If he carries out this intention there is no fear that time will hang heavy on his hands. There is always plenty to do about a circus.

The red lemonade ought to be of absorbing interest to a lover of natural history. The crimson dye which is used to give it its seductive color is made from cochineal, an insect not far removed from the animal kingdom. And then someone is always needed in the curiosities tent to help around and run errands or call the manager. The sword-swallower gets choked on a fish-bone, or the Circassian beauty pulls the india rubber man's leg, or the armless wonder gets too handy with his feet at dinner—there will be plenty for Mr. Sheak to do.

In sledge-hammering down the tent-pegs during thunder storms, in gum-shoeing around on the outside with a clapboard to swipe the boys that try to wriggle under the canvas, in seeing that the elephant's baled hay is properly sterilized from cigar butts and pieces of angel cake dropped by careless visitors, and in soothing the baby hippopotamus to slumber by crooning to it Kiplingesque ballads of its jungle home, the reverend lecturer will find his odd moments well filled with chores.

And there are more strenuous duties yet. The circus man who is not a performer in the ring or concert is expected to respond promptly to the famous slogan, "Hey, Rube! Hey, Rube!" which calls all hands to repel an attack by the rural swashbucklers.

If Rev. Mr. Sheak faithfully performs his duties in the new field to which he has been called, he must seize a tent peg or slip on his brass knuckles and hurl himself upon the bucolic foe. In this matter there must be no sulking in the tent. Achilles couldn't have held a job as popcorn seller in John Robinson's show. Will Mr. Sheak prove to be the ex-parson militant when the tocsin "Hey, Rube!" splits the air?"

Will he dine in the mess tent with the monstrosities? Will his interest in the animal kingdom lead him to choose a seat by the pig-faced lady? Will it also move him to study the Zulu chief as a representative of the coon family or the Circassian beauty as a dear?

Rev. Mr. Sheak is the first ordained minister to step from the pulpit into the circus ring, though many others have given up their calling for various secular pursuits. Mr. Sheak is able to point out a scriptural precedent in the case of Noah, who traveled for quite a time in charge of the most complete menagerie ever collected under one canvas or roof.

In addition to his other labors Mr. Sheak is at work upon a catalogue which is to comprise the name—and possibly the address—of every animal of this and preceding ages. The catalogue begins with the protozoa, the first animal forms that are known to have subsisted upon food, and ends with the bimana, or common man of today, who serves as food for the beasts.

Mr. Sheak has worked at his catalogue for two years and says it is about half done. He is anxious to have it complete and does not wish to slight any animal, not even the Harlem goat in its most [illegible] form, or the abstruse quadrupeds that draw the horse cars on the belt line.

So, if you happen to strike upon a strange animal anywhere that is not likely to be upon the list (this does not apply to the alcoholic ward at Bellevue) you will confer a favor by reporting same to Rev. William H. Sheak, care of John Robinson's circus, Cincinnati, O.

FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS OFFERED FOR A FLEA

Hon. Charles Rothschild Wants an Insect From the Arctic Fox and Has Just Dispatched an Expedition to Find One.

FIVE thousand dollars reward for a flea. This is the authentic offer of Hon. Charles Rothschild, the second son of Lord Rothschild. It is made for a flea of the Arctic fox, which is to flea fanciers what the egg of the extinct great auk is to collectors of birds' eggs. Only two specimens are known to exist in collections, and neither is perfect.

Not content with offering a reward, Mr. Rothschild has dispatched a full-sized expedition to the polar regions for the flea. It will also attempt to capture other rare Arctic species, but this particular variety is the real reason of the expedition.

Mr. Rothschild's ship, the whaler Forget-Me-Not, was last reported off Newfoundland, where one of the scientists on board was interviewed by the aid of wireless telegraphy. He mentioned that they expected to collect, in addition to the insect mentioned above, specimens of the flea of the Polar bear, the reindeer, the Eskimo dog, the Arctic hare and many other scarce animals.

In order to secure three specimens of an extremely small fresh-water crab inhabiting the vast swamps south of Lake Bangweolo, Carl Hertz spent two years in the interior of Central Africa.

He had with him two white assistants and 30 black porters. Both the former died, and of the latter only 22 got back to the coast. So that these three tiny crustaceans, each no bigger than a two-shilling piece and weighing altogether less than a couple of ounces, cost the lives of no fewer than 60 human beings.

Nevertheless, it has been held by scientists that the sacrifice was not made in vain. For the finding of this particular variety of crab, a distinctly marine type of organism originally, went far toward proving the truth of the theory all along held by geologists, namely, that the great African lakes were not formed in comparatively recent times by subsidence, but date back to an infinitely more remote period, when the salt waters of the ocean covered the whole central Congo basin.

Ten or twelve years back a certain large and exceedingly rare New Guinea butterfly was being greatly sought after by collectors. But the demand very much exceeded the supply.

Indeed, so far, at all events, as the cabinets of European entomologists were concerned, no more than half a score or so of perfect specimens were known to exist; and even after the natives, urged thereto by the dealers at Port Moresby, had brought down to the coast a few dozen additional ones, a really good insect easily fetched $250 or $300 in London or Paris.

It was under these circumstances that an adventurous and enterprising German, named Jacobson, conceived the idea of setting forth alone to the chosen home of the butterfly, situated in the dense and trackless forests of the interior, near the headwaters of the Fly river.

He was warned that he was going to his death. But he was in nowise deterred. Butterflies at $250 apiece were, he opined, worth risking even life for. So he set out, one fine May morning, with a butterfly net in one hand and a revolver in the other, and a knapsack filled with provisions and quinine slung over his shoulder.

Eighteen months passed by and the intrepid collector had long been given up for lost, when early one morning an emaciated, fever-weakened wreck of humanity struggled into Finschhafen, a small coast town in the extreme east of Kaiser Wilhelm's Land.

It was Jacobson. His revolver had gone—bartered for food. So had his compass, his kit and what little money he had taken with him. But tightly clasped in one skeleton-like hand he held an old cigar box, and within it were more than a hundred of the coveted insects. They netted him eventually over $10,000.

Even more remarkable, perhaps, was the expedition into the interior of Brazil, which was undertaken some few years ago by a half-caste orchid hunter named Manuel Garcia. In search of one particular blossom, he wandered during nearly four years in the pathless forests lying between the headwaters of the Amazon proper and its great tributary, the Madeira.

He had been taunted by his employer, a Portuguese trader of Santarem, with cowardice and lack of enterprise, because he had returned without it from an earlier journey; and the reproof so rankled in his mind that he vowed to be successful next time, even if he had to spend half a lifetime to accomplish his end.

The privations were frightful. On one occasion he lived for a week on the carcass of a puma. At another time monkeys formed his sole sustenance for over a month; and as he had no means just then of making a fire, he was forced to eat them raw. But at last on the shores of the almost unknown Lake Boguado he came across the long-looked-for bloom.

Six months later he was back with it at Santarem, only to find that another hunter had two years previously discovered a number of other similar specimens in comparatively close proximity to the town.

The French Academy of Sciences has just chosen Dr. Koch to replace the late Prof. Virchow as foreign member. Twenty-eight votes were given for Dr. Koch, against 18 for Mr. Agassiz, curator at Harvard University; 11 for S. P. Langley of Washington and 1 for Prof. Van der Vaals of Amsterdam. The choice is looked upon as a distinct triumph for the German savant, after the violent campaign carried on against him by certain French practitioners.

NEW NERVE CENTER OF GOVERNMENT

Wires From the White House Connect With Cipher Bureaus of War and Navy Departments.

THE most important room in the new White House is the one which is occupied by the telegraph and cipher bureau.

This might be described as the bridge of the ship of state, the place where the President stands in time of war or during any serious crisis and issues his orders to the various departments of the government.

Sixty-five wires connect the telegraph and cipher bureau with the nine governmental departments, as well as with every telegraph, telephone and cable station in the United States.

It is the only telegraph office in the government service that is never closed.

Three shifts of operators, working eight hours each, keep the bureau open night and day.

No visitors are allowed to enter this room, which is the clearing house of all governmental secrets. Nine codes, or systems of secret telegraphy, are used by the government in sending and receiving its messages, and President Roosevelt has a private code which he uses when on his tours through the country.

Every possible means has been adopted [illegible]

During the Spanish-American war the old bureau, which was not nearly as well equipped as the new one, handled 500,000 telegrams, nearly 400,000 of which were of a confidential nature.

President McKinley, with the secretary of war and the secretary of the navy, made the bureau his headquarters during the exciting days of the war. For hours they sat at the elbows of the telegraphers, directing military operations that were being carried on thousands of miles from Washington.

So perfect were the arrangements that when the American army was advancing on Santiago President McKinley was able to send messages to the officers on the firing line in less than twenty minutes.

At the time of President McKinley's assassination Col. Montgomery secured two exclusive wires between the bureau and Buffalo fifteen minutes after the assassin's shot was fired.

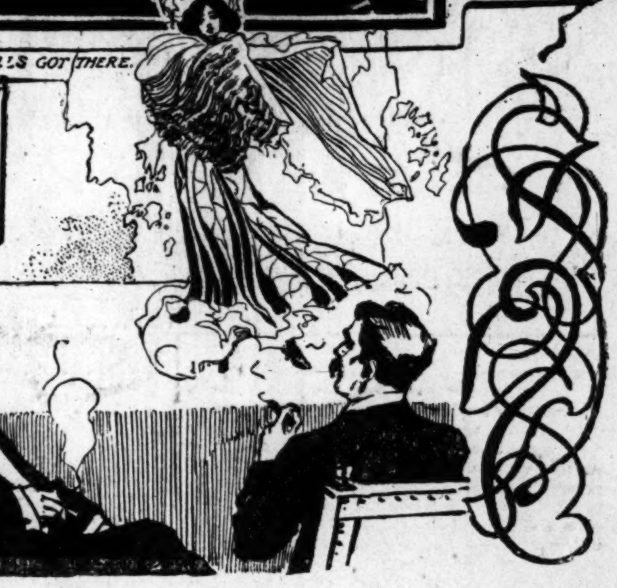
TITLE OF THE PRISON PAPER PUBLISHED BY MILLIONAIRE MILLS.



How Millionaire Herbert S. Mills of Chicago, Serving a Year's Sentence, Caused the Cook County Jail to Blossom—Started a Prison Newspaper and Inaugurated Many Reforms—Elaborate Dinner Signalizes His Return to the Outer World.

I know not whether Laws be right,
  Or whether Laws be wrong;
All that we know, who lie in jail,
  Is that the wall is strong;
And that each day is like a year,
  A year whose days are long.

THE familiar prison song written by Oscar Wilde rang to the roof of a banquet hall in one of Chicago's most famous hostelries. Men and women, clad in faultless evening dress, joined in the chorus.

Diamonds flashed, glasses clinked, wine foamed and fizzed, and over all rose the voice of the man in whose honor the banquet had been given—a convict from Cook County Jail, whose terms had barely expired.

From prison garb to evening clothes, from stone floors to priceless carpets, from hard prison fare to reed birds and ragouts, from the harsh prison bell to the soft tones of stringed instruments!

How did Herbert S. Mills, the convict, get there? He was the most marked of all the guests. He sang loudest. He was most uproarious and happy, as befits a man who has just been released from stone walls and an iron cage. Moreover, he did not look like a convict.

Herbert S. Mills was a millionaire and could well afford such a Saturnalia. The expense was all his; the pleasure belonged to his friends.

MILLS had been sentenced to serve a year in jail by the Federal Court for sending through the mails a supply of pictures intended for the thousands of penny picture machines which he owns and controls.

Mills did not wail over his conviction, as did Al Adams, the policy king of New York, now serving a year in Sing Sing. Being of a restless turn of mind, he immediately cast about him for diversion. If there were no beer and skittles to be had, he would find some worthy substitute.

The heavy glass skylight attracted his attention.

"Have you any painters here, warden?" he asked one day.

"Yes, I think there are a few," replied Jailer Whitman, the "man tamer."

"I'll tell you what I'll do," said Mills. "If you will put them to work under my direction, I'll give you a skylight worth having and pay for it myself."

Jailer Whitman knew that convict No. 29 was a millionaire. He is also a firm believer in keeping all prisoners diverted by work and occupied as much as possible from morning until night.

A few days afterward "Mills' Rebel Army" swarmed over the heavy skylights with artificial flowers of all colors.

The thick glass began to glow with red roses, gladioli, chrysanthemums, $120,000 Lawson carnations and pea green vines.

These ornaments upon the domed skylight over the court where prisoners exercise were put there by prisoners who were paid for their labor at union prices. To these artificial embellishments were added scores of real chrysanthemums, geraniums, roses, carnations and trailing vines, which made the jail look like a veritable flower garden.

Mills, the millionaire convict, was satisfied for only a few days. His good work on the ornamentation of the jail caused him to be looked upon with favor by the prison authorities, and he was allowed to continue the direction of the Mills Novelty Co., of which he was president.

He spent his whole income from this source upon the jail—his temporary home—and upon its inmates and their families.

He paid out over $6000 while he was a prisoner, and Jailer Whitman says that was about half the sum he spent altogether. There scarcely was a day when he did not learn of some story of destitution or suffering or when he did not ask the jailer to give a prisoner's wife or mother a few dollars which he handed over for the purpose. And no man in whom Mr. Mills was interested left the institution without enough in his pocket to provide him with meals and lodging for a week at least. Many of these released men were sent to Mills' factory and given work.

Mr. Mills provided the jail with a piano, fitted the chapel with curtains and other properties, so that the prisoners have facilities for giving almost any kind of amateur theatricals, and interested wealthy friends in the Improvement Association Journal, the jail newspaper, which he founded. Now the newspaper has $5000 in the bank and is upon a self-supporting basis.

After doing all this Mr. Mills became a sort of "angel" in the eyes of the prisoners and other men who kept in touch with what is going on in jail, and they were amazed when they picked up the newspapers a couple of days ago and learned that when he left his cell it was to go to a dinner at the Grand Pacific Hotel, which rivaled, in many respects, the Seeley dinner at Sherry's in New York.

Two dinners were given, one upon the night of his release and the other two nights after. At this first dinner Mr. Mills appeared in all the glory of evening dress. Eleven prominent business men—men whose names are to be found in the lists of those who represent Chicago when celebrities visit that city, but whose names have been carefully suppressed on this occasion, together with Mr. Mills, and many women, some of whom are actresses, and all of whom are described as "jolly good fellows," were at the dinner. It is said that one celebrated dancer was paid $1000 for her services on the occasion.

"I will not talk about the dinner," said Mr. Mills, when he was questioned. "If you want me to talk about what I did while I was in jail I will be glad to tell you what I know. So far as decorating the institution is concerned, I saw a chance to help some of the prisoners to make an honest dollar. The county had purchased the material, but there was a demurrer on account of expense. I knew the work should be done, and Mr. Whitman was anxious to have it. I spoke to him and told him that if he would pick out the men who deserved help, I would pay them for their labor. It was something new to me, but I found a union painter in the jail and he told me the scale of prices and I paid it. The result was that several of the men left jail with money in their pockets which they had earned, and I think they woud rather go out in that way than leave with 'charity coin,' as they call it.

"The men worked hard and also put in a lot of time for which I did not pay them. Three of them asked Jailer Whitman to release them from their cells at daybreak one day; he gave this order and they proceeded to decorate the glass dome with all sorts of impossible flowers. They thought they were showing their gratitude to me.

"If there is one thing which I accomplished while I was in jail of which I am proud it was the establishment of the jail newspaper. It seems, from my observation, that when a man is put behind bars he seeks some way of communicating with his fellow man. Most of them insist upon trying to write poetry. Some of the stuff is good and some of it is awful. The part which is good is very good, indeed. I think that a glance at our publication will show that.

"George d'Essauer is editor of the jail newspaper. He comes from a southern family which is known from New Orleans to Charleston and up to the Mason and Dixon line. He married a rich Chicago girl and, according to what was brought out at his trial, spent not only her money, but secured about $30,000 from her mother.

"But he makes a fairly good editor and consequently as far as the prison goes all his other sins are forgiven him."

POEM OF A PRISONER.

Gray hairs show at my temples;
  Yes, I shall settle down.
Farewell, beloved Bohemia—
  No more painting the town!
Girls who have loved and left me,
  Girls whom I've loved and left,
Truly, my heart's not broken,
  Tell me, are you bereft?

Tess had a smile bewitching;
  Polly was passing fair;
Rose had a shapely ankle;
  Nell had glorious hair;
Greta, blue-eyed and tender,
  Loved me in student days—
We met, we kissed and we quarreled,
  We've gone our several ways.

So, then an end to trifling!
  I've burned their ribbons and gloves,
Letters, tresses and trinkets—
  Relics of bygone loves.
No more with transient sweethearts
  Shall I pursue delight;
Stay! there is one exception—
  That sweet girl I met last night.

WHITMAN, TAMER OF MEN

Warden of the Cook County Jail, Chicago, by Frank H. Spearman

JOHN L. WHITMAN, the Cook County "tamer of men," is not an alarming man physically. Thirty-nine years old, 150 pounds, five feet nine inches. They will tell you he does all his wonderful work by kindness. So he does; but it is the kindness that shows no hesitation, no fear, and allows no insubordination. It is the kindness, not of violence, but of strength, and of a mastery uncompromising. If there be a single feature of Whitman's face that suggests the extraordinary it is his eyes. Calling up Whitman's face one remembers longest his eyes. Purpose, character, willpower, all lie in his searching brown eyes.

When Whitman came into the jail trouble, violence and fights among the men were of almost daily occurrence. There was a wicked feeling between the white men and the colored, the outbreaks occurring when the 250 prisoners were exercising together.

All this has been changed and the jail has been a model in every respect. Whitman believes that the most vicious may be controlled if appealed to in the right way. Above all, by eliminating violence from the problem he knew he could at least command respect, and the winning of a man's respect is a long step toward controlling him.

CALIFORNIA "SLUG" EXHIBIT AT WORLD'S FAIR

IN the numismatic exhibit at the World's Fair there will be a practically complete collection of private and territorial gold coins, chief amongst which will be the octagonal $50 "slug" of California's early days.

No coin today commands such general interest when shown as the octagonal $50 gold piece. A great many other coins are more rare and interesting to numismatists, but this coin on account of its odd shape and large face value—$50 being the largest denomination of coin issued in this country—enjoys an unceasing interest for every one. These coins are an echo of "the days of '49" and with the numerous other private issues of gold of that period, they may well be termed necessity money.

After the great discoveries in California and the stampede to the West, the Pacific coast was rich in dust and bullion, but had practically no currency or convenient circulating medium. The primitive methods of transportation and the great dangers of loss attending the shipment of gold bullion east and currency west, through a wild bandit territory, led to the establishment of private mints and government assay offices, conveniently located to the gold fields. From these two sources come the "slugs" and other coins of their class and period. The California coins first appeared dated 1849 and were issued in various forms and denominations each year to 1855. The government mint was established in San Francisco in 1854, and with it in operation private issues practically ceased, but to that issue the world is indebted for many curious and interesting numismatic specimens. Octagonal coins were issued of the value of a quarter, a half dollar, $1 and $50 and round coins of a quarter, a half dollar, $1, $2.50, $5, $10, $20, $25 and $50. Oblong ingots of the odd value of $9.43, $16 and $40.07 are a part of this issue, all of which are very rare.

Oregon was a contributor in 1849 of $5 and $10 pieces, known as "heavier" money and "Mormon" coins of the value of $2.50, $5 and $10, originated in Utah, all within the necessity period. In the early 60s Colorado issued a number of varieties of $2.50, $5 and $10 pieces, from which we get the "Pike's Peak" series. A large number of the Colorado coins were the product of Clark, Gruber & Co., whose private coinage establishment was purchased by the government in 1862 at a cost of $37,500. Since then it has been designated as a government mint, but it has never issued any coins, being used entirely for assay purposes. The new mint now nearing completion at Denver at a cost of more than $1,000,000, is the successor to the private mint of Clark, Gurber & Co. As soon as the Denver mint is operated, the mint at New Orleans, which has been one of Uncle Sam's money mills since 1838, will cease to coin.

The first private gold coin of the country was issued in New York in 1787 by Ephriam Brasher. It is a doubloon now excessively rare.

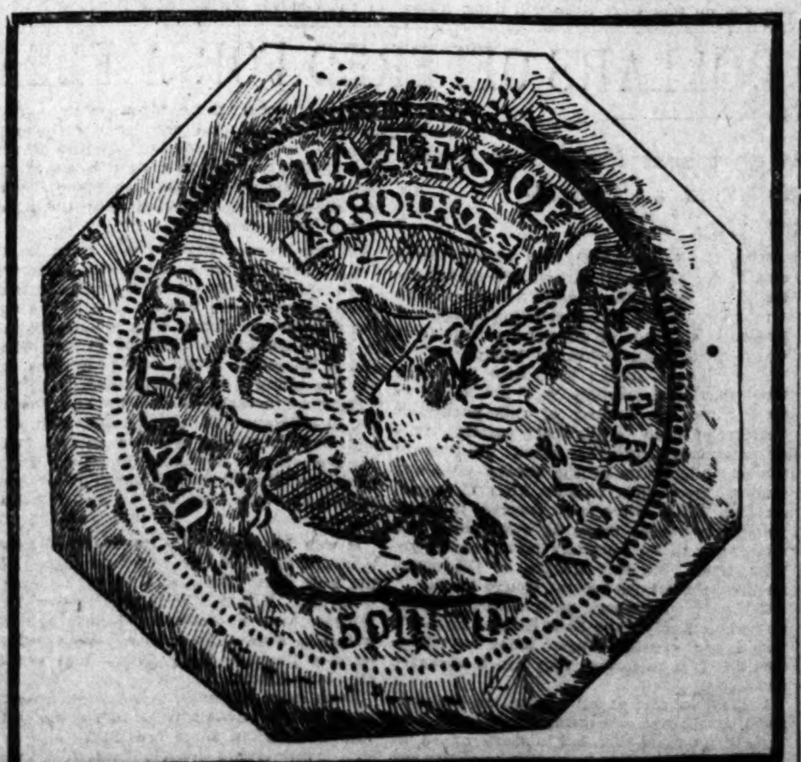
Gold in the South, which led to the establishing of mints at Charlotte, N. C., and Dahlonega, Ga., in 1838, from which gold only was coined to their discontinuance in 1861, was preceded by private issues in the early '30s known as Carolina and Georgia coins, of the values of $1, $2.50, $5 and $10.

The Georgia gold coins are extremely rare.

On account of their adaptability for bangles and jewelry purposes the little California pieces, a quarter, a half dollar and $1, continued to be coined until about 1875, when laws were enacted prohibiting the private issue of money, and with the enforcement of these laws this series of great interest to the numismatists of the world was brought to a close.

It is practically impossible for one today to obtain a complete collection of the private and territorial gold coins of the United States. The issue of money was very limited, and those coins that have not passed to the coin cabinets of public institutions, forever beyond the hope of the individual collector, are prized beyond price by their owners.

The numismatic exhibit proposed for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition will, through the assistance of many collectors, present this series practically complete. Of all the issues the octagonal $50 piece, called the '49er and known since as a "slug," commands the position of most interest. While all are rare, commanding $150 to $250 each, the round $50 piece is decidedly more rare and eagerly sought by wealthy numismatists at prices from $250 to $500, the latter price being for extremely fine specimens.



St. Louis has played a part in the late distribution of "slugs." A local coin and stamp company in the past year has bought and sold more of these pieces than any other coin house of the country.

THIS QUILT MADE OF HUMAN SCALPS

Iowa Indians of Oklahoma Thus Preserve Ghastly Trophies of Past Victories.

THE Iowa Indians of Oklahoma own one of the most gruesome hair-raising tribal heirlooms in the world. The repulsive looking relic of barbarism is a five-foot square quilt, made of about 70 black, white and red human scalps.

It is claimed that the scalps were jerked from the head of good friendly whites, blacks and reds, about 150 years ago, and that the trophies were secured by special command and direction of the Great Spirit. The horrible quilt is kept with reverential and superstitious care in the sanctum sanctorum of the chief medicine man, and is only once publicly exhibited every year, and the first day of the wild onion feast.

None but Iowas are considered worthy of viewing the varicolored quilt and only two-thirds drunken Iowas ever venture to tell white men that there is such a scalp quilt in their possession. The cold chills-producing savage heirloom is considered a talisman, a chance, a cure-all, for and preventer of all ills that red skins are heir to. They have implicit faith in the healing virtues of the scalp quilt, and they even say that it brought some dead Indians to life.

The miraculous quilt is never wrapped around the naked body of a sick person afflicted with smallpox, as through its agency the first case of that loathsome disease among the tribe, was scattered all over the once populous Iowa nation, and more than 390 died from the complaint.

All the Iowas, even these that profess the Christian religion, have unshaken faith in the ancient cure-all of their ancestors. The chief medicine man of the tribe wraps the quilt around his severely afflicted patients, when all adults surround the sick person and offers fervent prayers for their relief. Those who were near the sickening, sickness-killing thing, say that it smells somewhat like wild onions. Those who ought to know claim that the wonderful quilt has often been pickled and embalmed in wild onion juice and the malodorous perfumes of other Indian edibles.

PREHISTORIC HORSES

WILLIAM C. WHITNEY'S interest in the horse is far-reaching and not confined to performances on the track.

Agents of the financier have been engaged for two years past in exploring the plains of the western United States to find relics of fossil horses, the ancestors of the present breed. So far many interesting bones have been resurrected from their burial places in the rocks of pre-Adamite ages.

The horse, in its origin, had several varying prototypes. The National History Museum in New York already possesses many interesting specimens. Last autumn the fossil remains of a small herd of the species called the hipparion were discovered in Nebraska. From them it is believed that a complete animal can be mounted.

Horse-like animals' bones have been found also in the Kimmswick deposits near St. Louis.

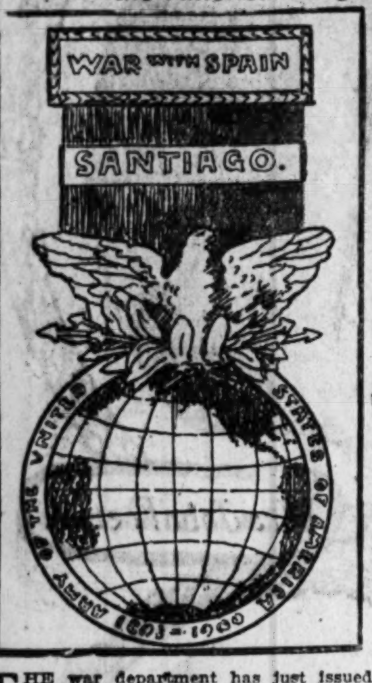
New Perch for the American Eagle



THE war department has just issued a Spanish war medal which is of a unique design. Pendant from the pin is the American eagle proudly perched upon the western hemisphere, showing that the bird, like Robinson Crusoe, is "monarch of all he surveys." This is but another way of saying that the United States controls, and still proposes to control, through the operation of the Monroe doctrine, the entire western hemisphere.

During the first 90 days of the present fiscal year 6,109,000 acres of government land were filed upon. Should this increasing ratio be maintained between 25,000,000 and 30,000,000 acres will be taken from the public domain the present fiscal year. If our present system of land acts is continued five years longer the entire public domain suitable for settlement will be exhausted, and there will be no land left for our people who desire to make homes upon it.

Western Texas, it is reported, has been selected as a field for extensive private irrigation development. The Dixie Irrigation Co. proposes to place under irrigation between 200,000 and 300,000 acres of land situated in arid Texas. The main canal will be 100 miles long, and it is to be constructed according to the India lock dam system, constituting in itself a vast reservoir. Toyah Lake, with a capacity of 46,000 acre feet, is also to be utilized as a reservoir.

Newspaper Published Below Sea Level.

THE SUBMARINE

PUBLISHED 22 FEET BELOW SEA-LEVEL—WEEKLY

VOL. I, NO. 32. INDIO, RIVERSIDE COUNTY, CALIFORNIA, JULY 5, 1902.

JULES VERNE himself never was so bold as to imagine a newspaper printed below the level of the sea, but Mr. N. O. Nelson of St. Louis sends home from California a copy of such a periodical. It is entitled The Submarine, and is a weekly journal published at Indio, in the lower part of the state of California, at the edge of the great desert, close to the famous Death Valley.

The town is situated 22 feet below sea level, in a valley that once was a sea. At Indio Mr. Nelson, as told in the Sunday Post-Dispatch, has just founded a colony for consumptives, where rich or poor patients may live, with their families, in comfortable tents or cottages, tilling the ground for exercise or profit. The air at Indio is pure and dry, such as consumptives require.

The Submarine is likely to become a popular newspaper throughout the country, inasmuch as the beneficiaries of the St. Louisan's consumptive colony will send copies of it home to their friends, who cannot resist the temptation to tell other friends that they have received a paper published below sea level.

Death, and a most terrible form of it, is declared to lurk in the tobacco pipe if it is made of clay. Such is the startling statement made by the Irish registrar-general in a special report on cancer in Ireland just laid on the table of the House of Commons. The clay "dhudeen" is very common amongst the peasantry in Ireland. It is often smoked until the shank is quite short, and then it so irritates the lips of the smoker that cancer sometimes supervenes.

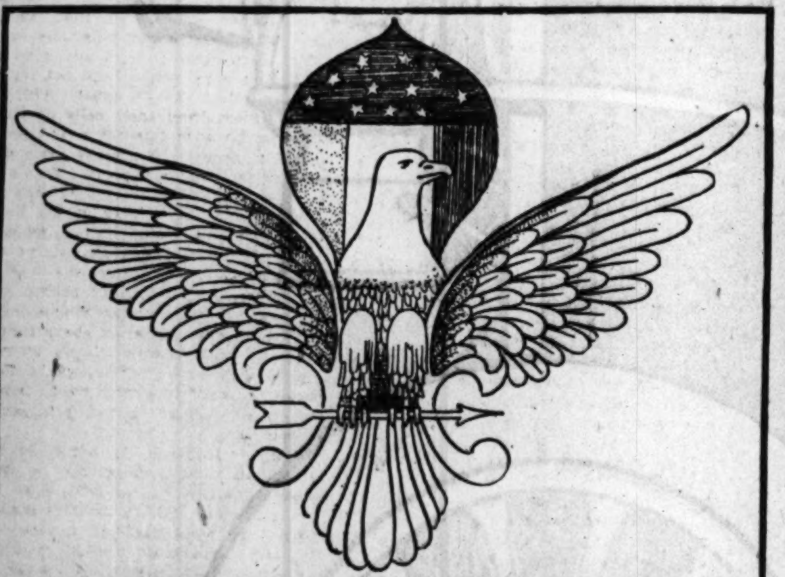
Eagle and Shield as Fleur-de-Lis for World's Fair Emblem



A CORRESPONDENT too modest to sign his name submits as a World's Fair emblem a combination of the American eagle and the American shield, forming the fleur-de-lis, which is regarded by those who have seen it as a very apt idea.

The suggestion is that the design have a border of diamond shape and that the words "Louisiana Purchase World's Fair, St. Louis, 1803-1904," be used to fill up the open spaces above and below the extended wings of the great bird. Beautifully colored, this design presents a handsome appearance.

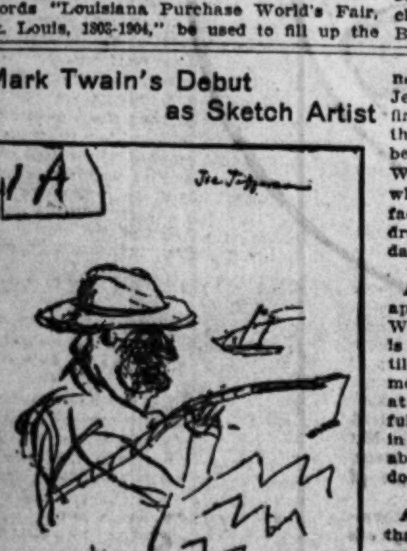
Mark Twain's Debut as Sketch Artist



MARK TWAIN as an artist is something new. The genial Missouri humorist has blossomed forth this spring as a sketch artist, one of his happiest creations being a picture of Joseph Jefferson, reproduced here. The creation is happy, perhaps, but little more can be said. Mark Twain and Joe Jefferson heretofore have been regarded as firm friends. There has been nothing in the public prints to indicate the breach between them—nothing except this picture. When the terrible quarrel took place, and where and why, is not told. But the sad fact is revealed, in all its baldness, in this drawing of Jefferson by the sage of Riverdale-on-the-Hudson.

A limit to the size of ocean steamships appears to have been reached in the last White Star steamers Cedric and Celtic. It is reported that the International Mercantile Marine Co. has decided to build no more of such large vessels for the present at least. The Cedric draws 36 feet when fully laden, and there are very few seaports in the world where such a depth is available at the harbor entrance and in the docks at all stages of the tide.

An Italian scientist of distinction declares that women are less sensitive to pain than men, and actually feel less of it in a given operation. Experiments on a hundred women led him to the conclusion that they were not more than one-half as sensitive to pain at the top of the forefinger as the average man. This is confirmatory of a well-known fact to surgeons and dentists.

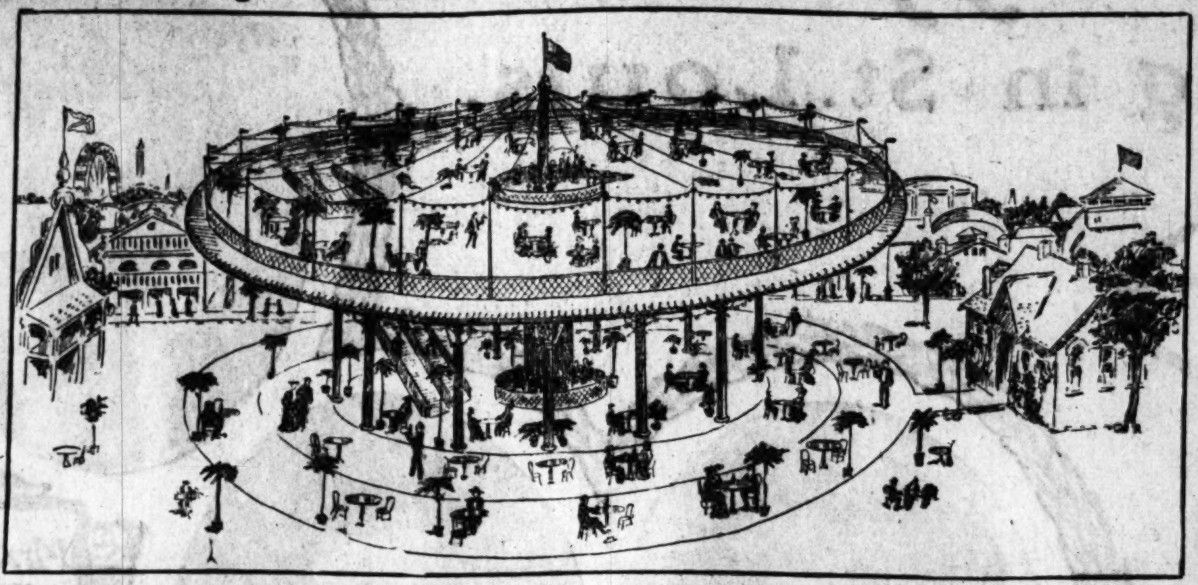
Revolving Roof Garden Invented for the World's Fair "Pike"



BASED upon the demands of modern World's Fair visitors is the plan of H. L. Shafer, general manager of the Chicola Manufacturing Co. of St. Louis, for a revolving roof garden and music hall surrounded by a breezy palm garden.

Imagine yourself partaking of refreshments to the strains of an orchestra, at a height that would afford you a grand and changing view of all the surrounding attractions and at the same time relief from the heat. This is what is suggested in Mr. Shafer's idea.

A company is being formed and overtures are being made to obtain a concession at the World's Fair. Applications for patents are being looked after. According to the plans the outer circle of the lower platform will revolve at such a rate as will permit any person to safely step from the ground to the platform. The next portion of the platform will revolve at an increased rate of speed, but such that it can be traversed safely to the inner platform, which will revolve at a yet higher rate of speed, yet enough to create a cooling breeze. This central platform is connected with the entire upper platform and a moving stairway will convey patrons from the lower to the upper platform without any effort on their parts.

Surrounding and on the platforms, tables and chairs are arranged so that refreshments and meals may be served, while the platforms are either stationary or going at various rates of speed. The cuisine and bar are provided in the building to the right of the revolving platforms, thus enabling the waiters to enter the platforms at the places most convenient for them to serve their orders. The garden surrounding the revolving structure will be cooled by a series of fans attached to the upper platform. The operating machinery is located underneath the lower platforms.

The general effect of the revolving roof-garden at night, when it will be illuminated by various colors of electric lights, will be most beautiful.

Nearly 100 years ago the Jesuits were banished from Mexico. It was known that they had immense hoards of gold, but feared to tempt cupidity by taking it all with them. What they did with the bulk of their savings has just been revealed by Pierre Guirre, who says that treasure to the value of over $20,000,000 was buried beneath the old cathedral in the little town of Typozottan, and is believed to be there yet.

The King Edward VII. will be the most costly warship that has ever been constructed. The original estimates were for £1,500,000; and, though they have been cut down, it is authoritatively stated by prominent officials at Devonport Dockyard that the total expenditure will amount to well over £1,400,000. This outlay on a fabric which a well-directed torpedo might annihilate makes one realize how costly the game of modern naval war would prove.

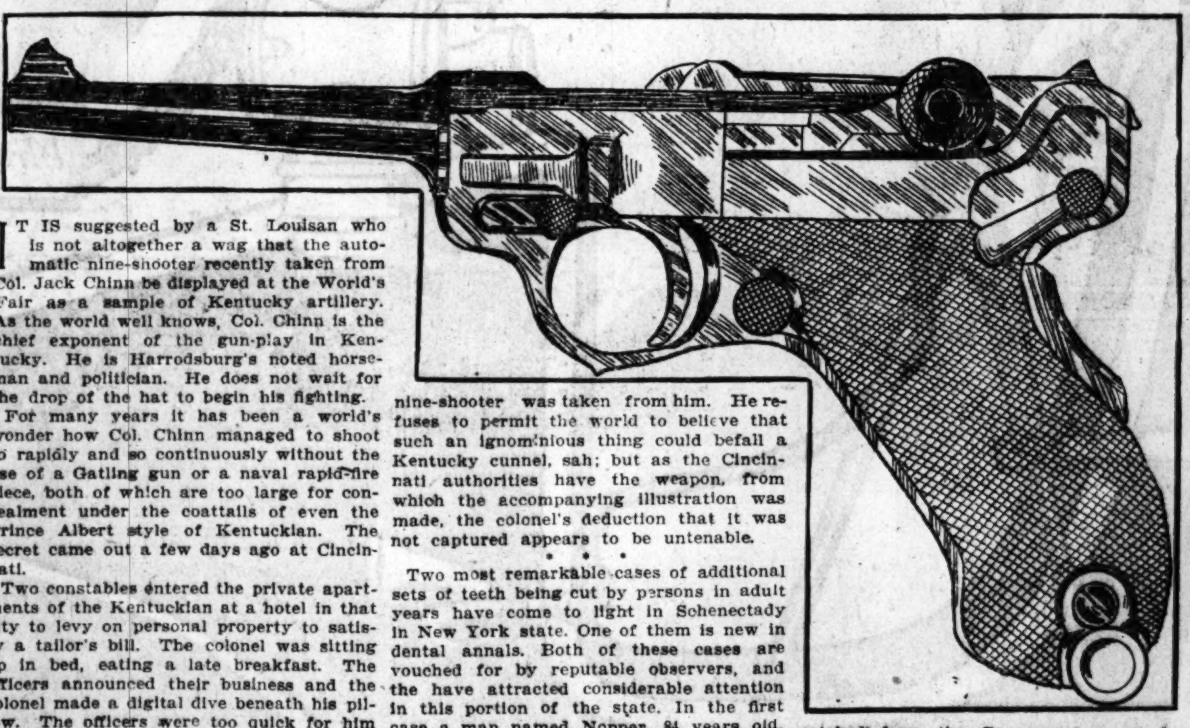
Col. Jack Chinn's Confiscated Automatic Revolver a Beauty



IT IS suggested by a St. Louisan who is not altogether a wag that the automatic nine-shooter recently taken from Col. Jack Chinn be displayed at the World's Fair as a sample of Kentucky artillery. As the world well knows, Col. Chinn is the chief exponent of the gun-play in Kentucky. He is Harrodsburg's noted horseman and politician. He does not wait for the drop of the hat to begin his fighting.

For many years it has been a world's wonder how Col. Chinn managed to shoot so rapidly and so continuously without the use of a Gatling gun or a naval rapid-fire piece, both of which are too large for concealment under the coattails of even the Prince Albert style of Kentuckian. The secret came out a few days ago at Cincinnati.

Two constables entered the private apartments of the Kentuckian at a hotel in that city to levy on personal property to satisfy a tailor's bill. The colonel was sitting up in bed, eating a late breakfast. The officers announced their business and the colonel made a digital dive beneath his pillow. The officers were too quick for him and they got to the weapon first.

The revolver was a wonder. It went the six-shooter three better and showed that Col. Chinn could extinguish all of the nine lives of a cat without reloading. The capture of this piece of formidable artillery was heralded far and wide as the most important victory for Ohio arms since the Buckeye regiments fought so heroically at Chickamauga.

For a few days the firearm was exhibited in Cincinnati show windows, but it is said that the mayor ordered the weapon concealed again, inasmuch as it caused a Col. Chinn indignantly denies that his nine-shooter was taken from him. He refuses to permit the world to believe that such an ignominious thing could befall a Kentucky cunnel, sah; but as the Cincinnati authorities have the weapon, from which the accompanying illustration was made, the colonel's deduction that it was not captured appears to be untenable.

THE new uniform markings to represent rank or grade or branch of the United States army service, recently promulgated by Adjutant-General Corbin in general orders, were very much in evidence at the World's Fair dedication ceremonies. The order has bothered army uniform makers, officers and men considerably, as the changes from the old devices are very marked.

Officers who were anxious to appear before President Roosevelt, Gen. Miles, Adjutant-General Corbin and the great army of departmental chiefs at St. Louis in uniforms every detail of which complied with the new regulations, were put to their wits' end to secure proper outfits.

The military uniform manufacturers of the United States whom army officers favor are few in number. These favored makers have been hard at work for months. Some of the new devices have puzzled military men themselves a little and the uninitiated have been entirely at sea in determining the rank and branch of service of the men they met.

The accompanying engraving will help you properly to designate some of the non-commissioned officers hereafter.

The finest diamond ever imported paid no duty to the customs officers, having smuggled itself in from some other planet in a meteorite. Packed in a thick envelope of meteoric iron, it fell to earth in Diablo canyon, at the foot of Crater mountain, Arizona, its coating being broken into numerous particles by contact with the rocky formation of the ground. Some six weeks ago a party of geologists, discovering these fragments, at first thought them indications of a remarkably pure vein of iron ore, but their true character was soon discerned, and in one of the pieces picked up by Prof. G. A. Koenig the diamond was found embedded. It is now on exhibition at the American Museum of Natural History.

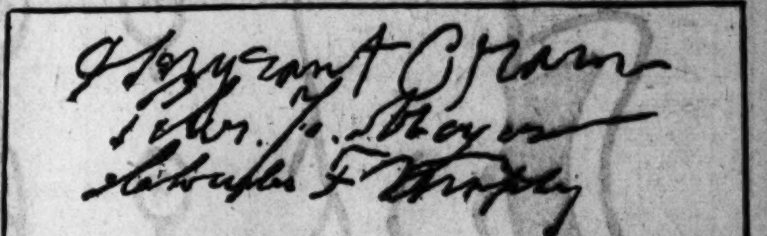
Shaky Signatures of New York's Old Dock Board



J. Sergeant Cram
Peter F. Meyer
Charles F. Murphy

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME, the Joseph W. Folk of New York, has begun an investigation into the methods of the old dock board, composed of the three commissioners who served under former Mayor Van Wyck, the first chief executive of the Greater New York. While it is not an assured thing that the results will be similar to those following the boodle investigations in St. Louis, there is said to be much mystery surrounding the dock board's use of the city's money, "showing an almost absolute disregard of the interests of the city," as one newspaper puts it.

In this connection it is interesting to reproduce a facsimile of the signatures of the three dock commissioners upon assuming office. These signatures have been used by a London writer in a recent pamphlet which undertakes to disclose the baseness of American politics. The pamphleteer seeks to prove the illiteracy of men elected or appointed to important posts by presenting this facsimile.

As an exhibit in support of his theory there can be little dispute as to its aptness, but in spite of the cramped chirography of the three politicians one is a graduate of a famous university and the other two can read fine print rapidly and write words of five or six syllables without recourse to a dictionary or a spelling book.

Mr. Murphy is now the leader of Tammany Hall, successor to the celebrated Richard Croker. Messrs. Cram and Meyer are prominent in commercial and political life.

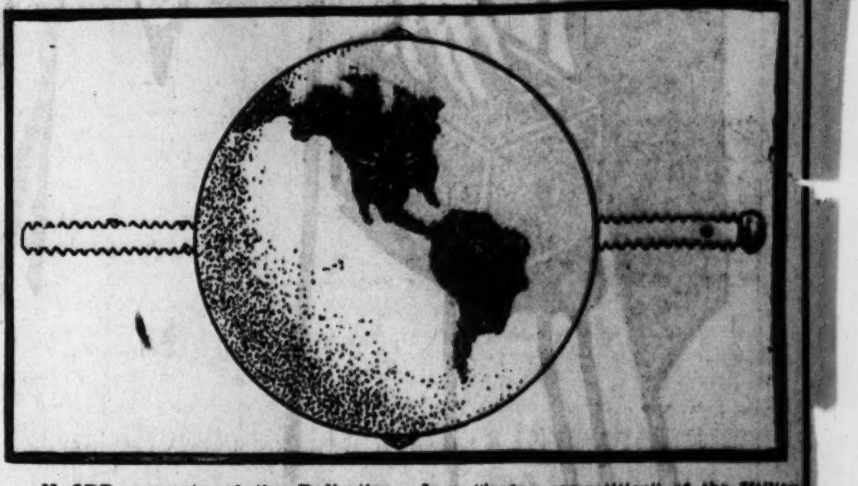
New St. Louis Toy for the Roosevelt Children



AN ODD memento of the Dedication ceremonies was presented to President Roosevelt while in St. Louis by the owners of a new St. Louis toy. The toy is a top set in motion by a curious spinner. Ratchets on the side, when drawn rapidly across the spindle within the top, set it in rapid revolution.

The presentation top was of gold and the spinner was 18 karats pure metal. The top has a map fo the world engraved on the surface, and the location of St. Louis on has a map of the world engraved on the At the poles are two garnets and it is upon these points that the top revolves. It is spun upon a gold-rimmed tablet of agate, which is beautifully marked by nature. This disc is somewhat concave, thus keeping the top within bounds. So slight is the friction of the garnet on the polished agate that the top will spin for a full quarter of an hour, presenting a very pretty picture, and the Roosevelt children doubtless will enjoy it at the White House.

A similar top has been presented to Lord Minto, governor-general of Canada, by the Canadian residents of St. Louis.

It has been frequently observed that the inhabitants of islands and small peninsulas attain longer life than those of continents. The Barbadoes, Greece, Madeira and the Shetlands are quoted as illustrations of the truth of this statement.

An amazing feature of the present controversy concerning the metric system, in which one party holds to the yard and pound as consecrated Anglo-Saxon standards, is that the United States fundamental legal standards of length and mass are the meter and the kilogram, respectively, and not the yard and pound. The yard is legally expressed as the [illegible] part of a meter.

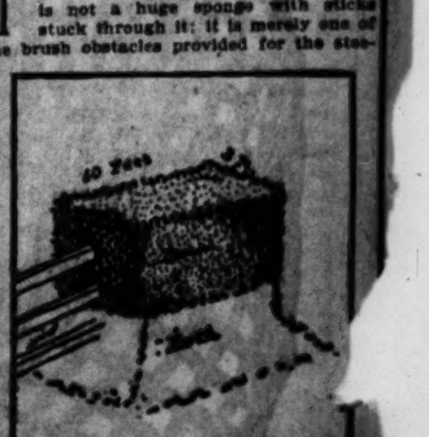
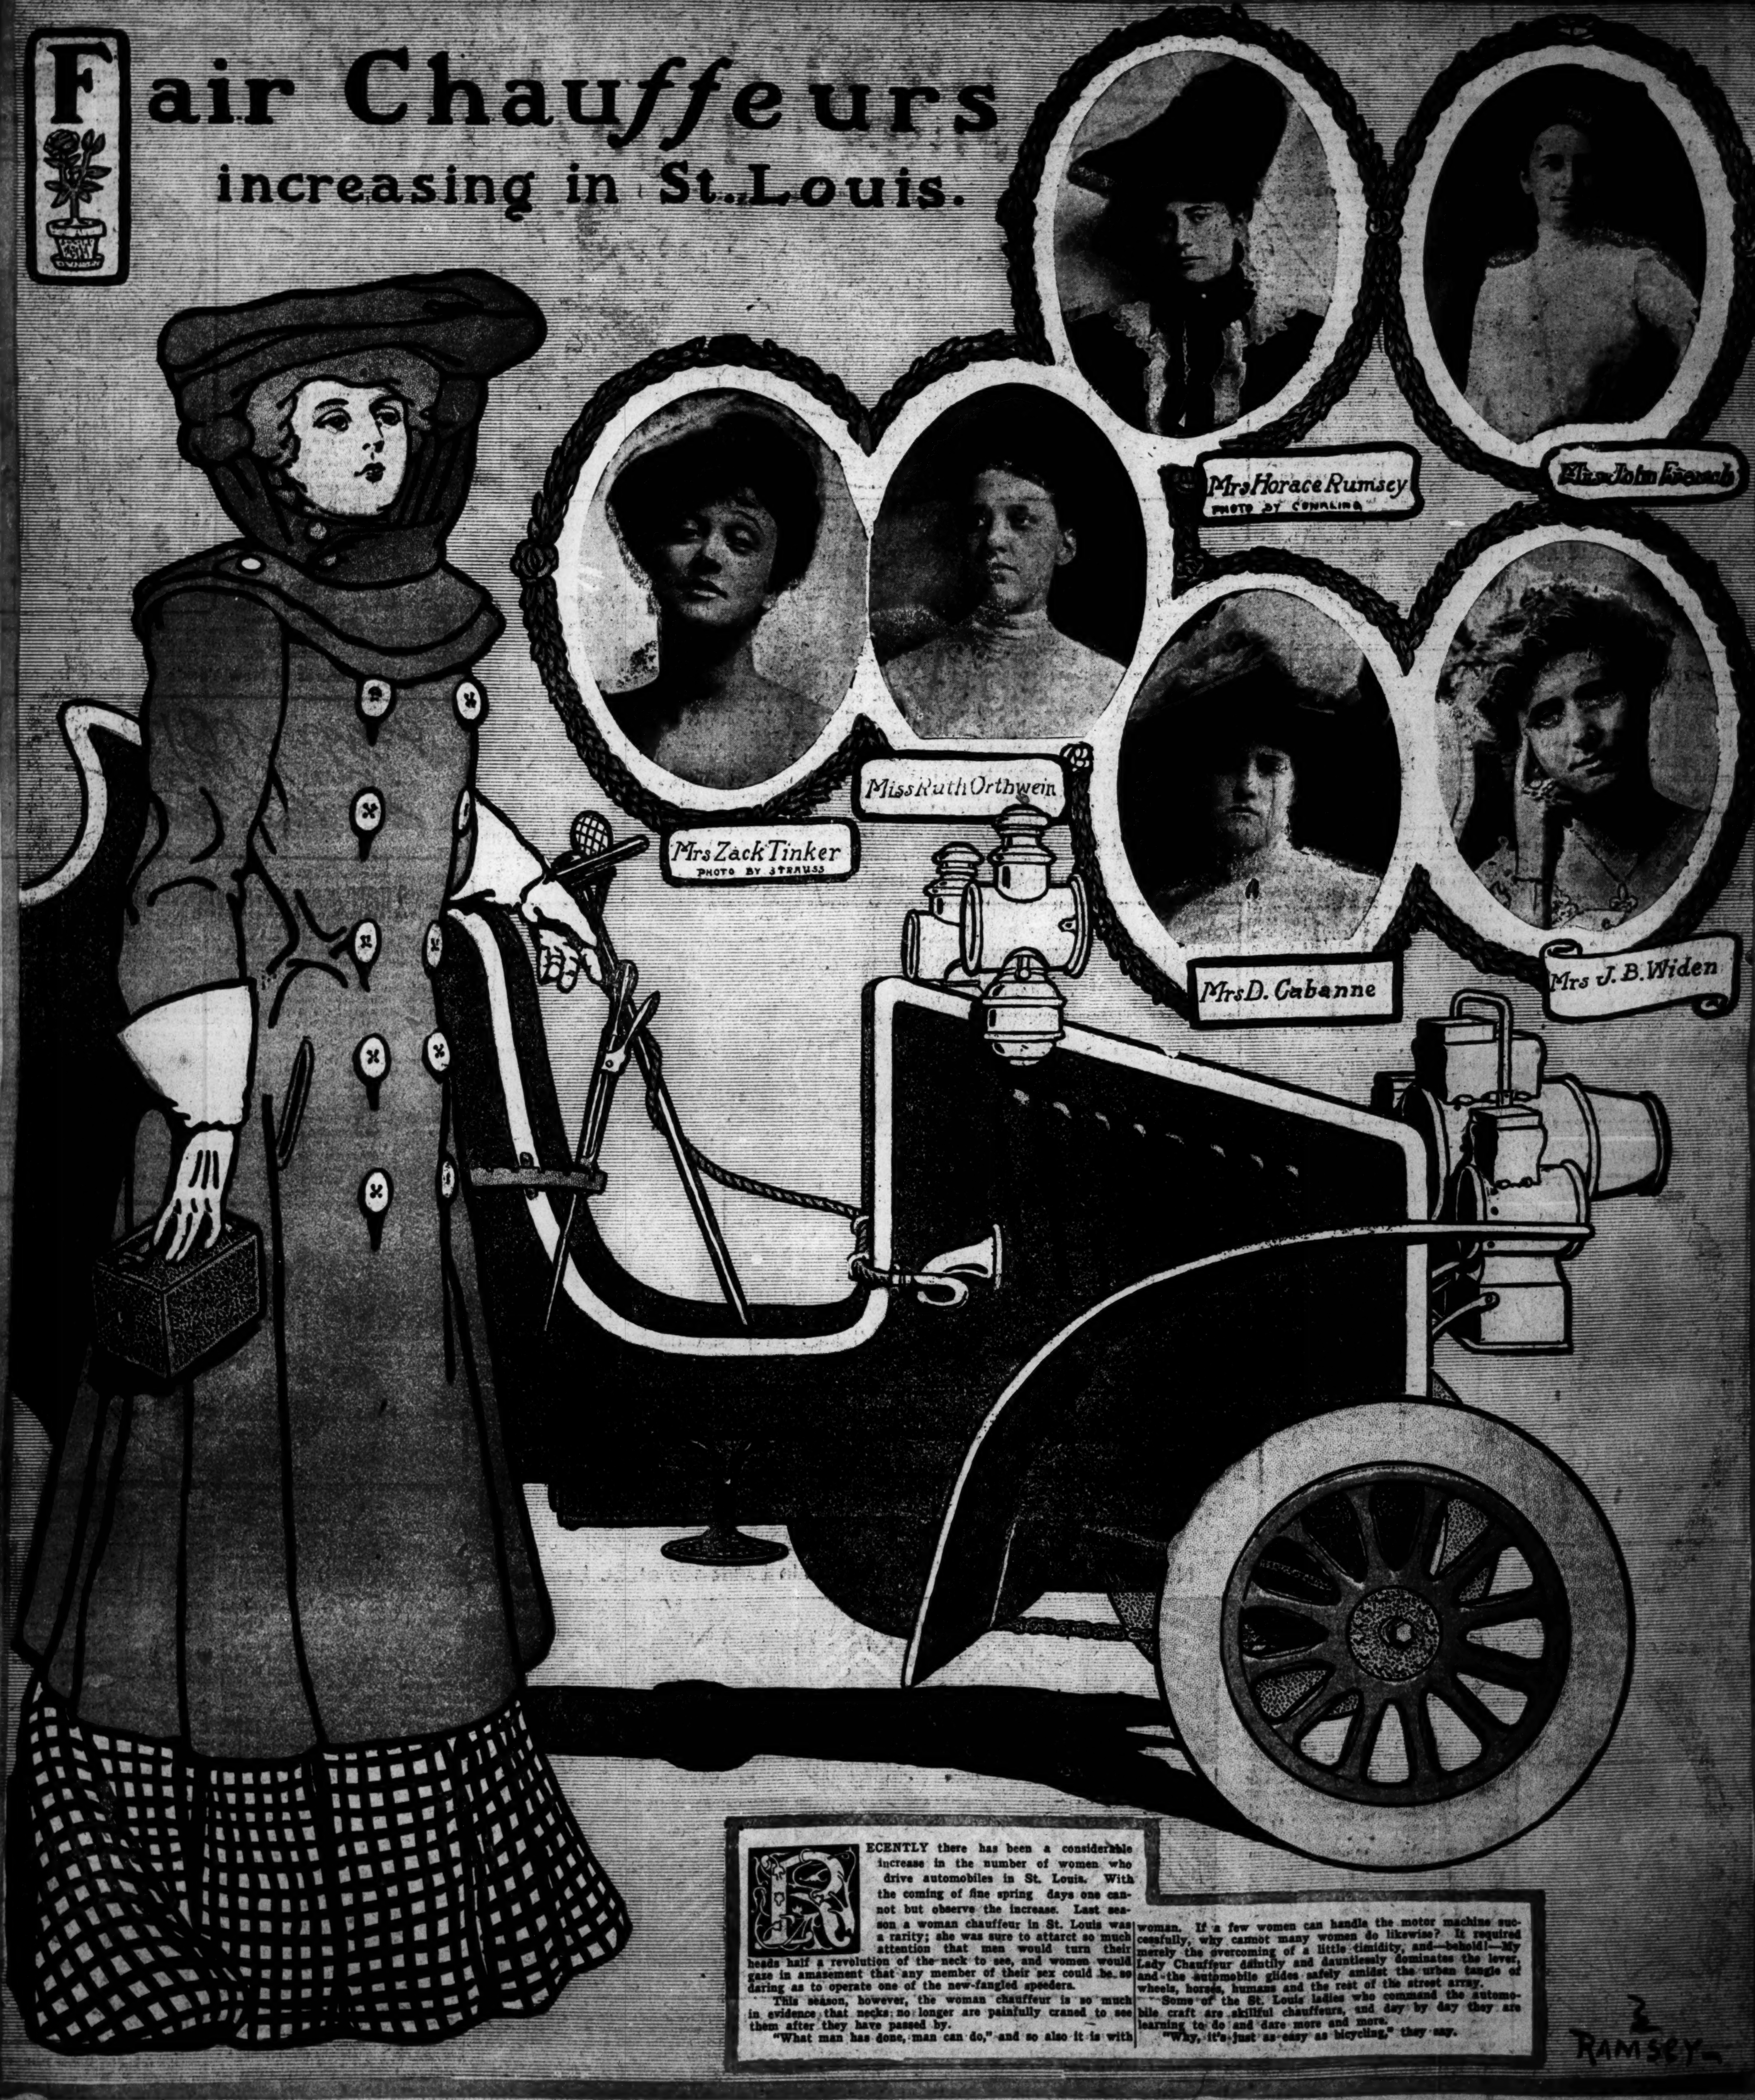
Odd Brush Jump for Steeplechase

THE odd thing shown in this picture is not a huge sponge with sticks stuck through it; it is merely one of the brush obstacles provided for the steeplechase racing at Morris Park, Westchester County, N. Y.



First a bank of earth is laid, and it is topped off with the brush. These brush jumps are very popular with the steeplechase folk of the East, and they smack very much of the British.

Fair Chauffeurs increasing in St. Louis.



RECENTLY there has been a considerable increase in the number of women who drive automobiles in St. Louis. With the coming of fine spring days one cannot but observe the increase. Last season a woman chauffeur in St. Louis was a rarity; she was sure to attarct so much attention that men would turn their heads half a revolution of the neck to see, and women would gaze in amazement that any member of their sex could be so daring as to operate one of the new-fangled speeders.

This season, however, the woman chauffeur is so much in evidence that necks no longer are painfully craned to see them after they have passed by.

"What man has done, man can do," and so also it is with woman. If a few women can handle the motor machine successfully, why cannot many women do likewise? It required merely the overcoming of a little timidity, and—behold!—My Lady Chauffeur daintily and dauntlessly dominates the lever, and the automobile glides safely amidst the urban tangle of wheels, horses, humans and the rest of the street array.

Some of the St. Louis ladies who command the automobile craft are skillful chauffeurs, and day by day they are learning to do and dare more and more.

"Why, it's just as easy as bicycling," they say.

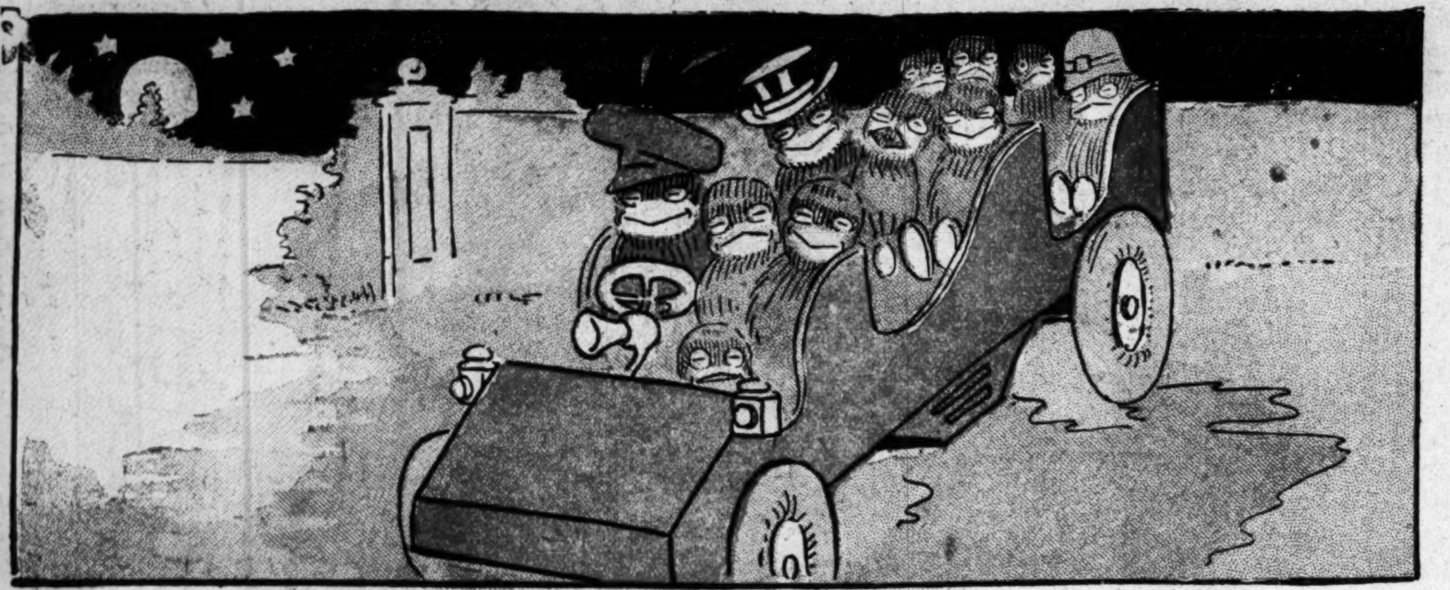
THE WEATHER BIRDS GO AUTOMOBILING

One Bird Was Lost
Which Picture Is He In.



–To make it sure that no delay would spoil an early start,
The foxy little Weather Birds all slept within the cart.
They dreamed of mighty bursts of speed, and trains left standing still,
And grunted loudly when they dreamed the auto climbed a hill.

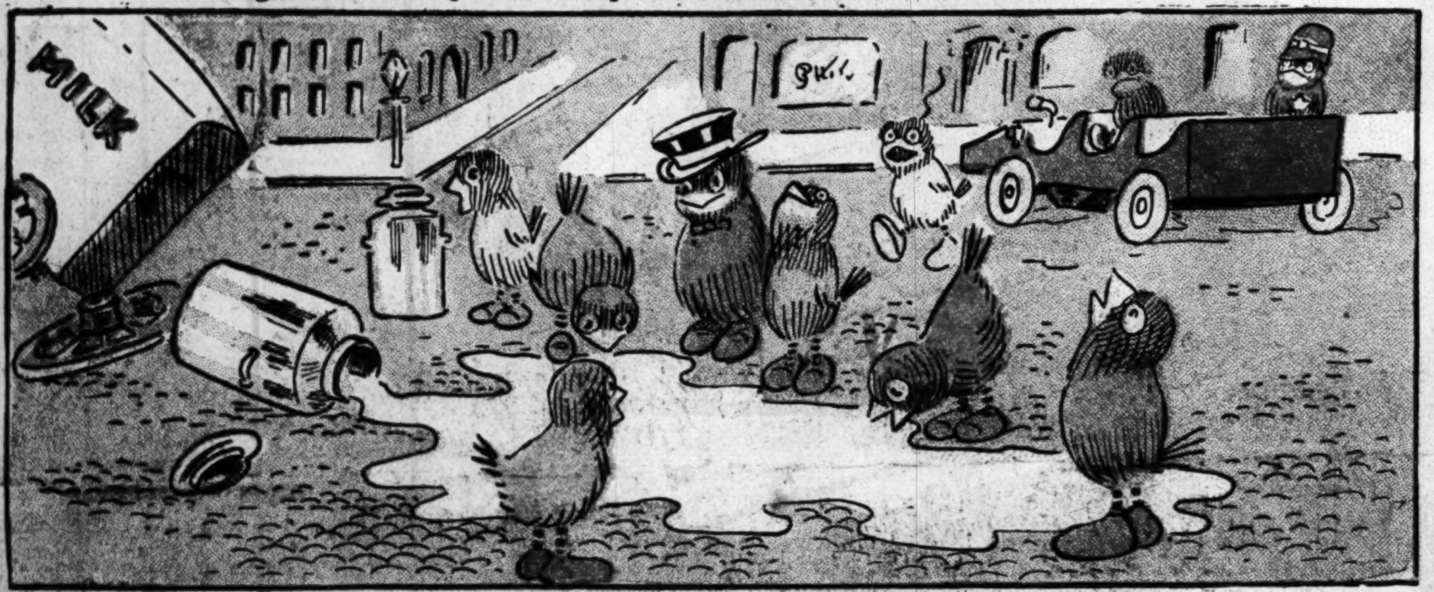
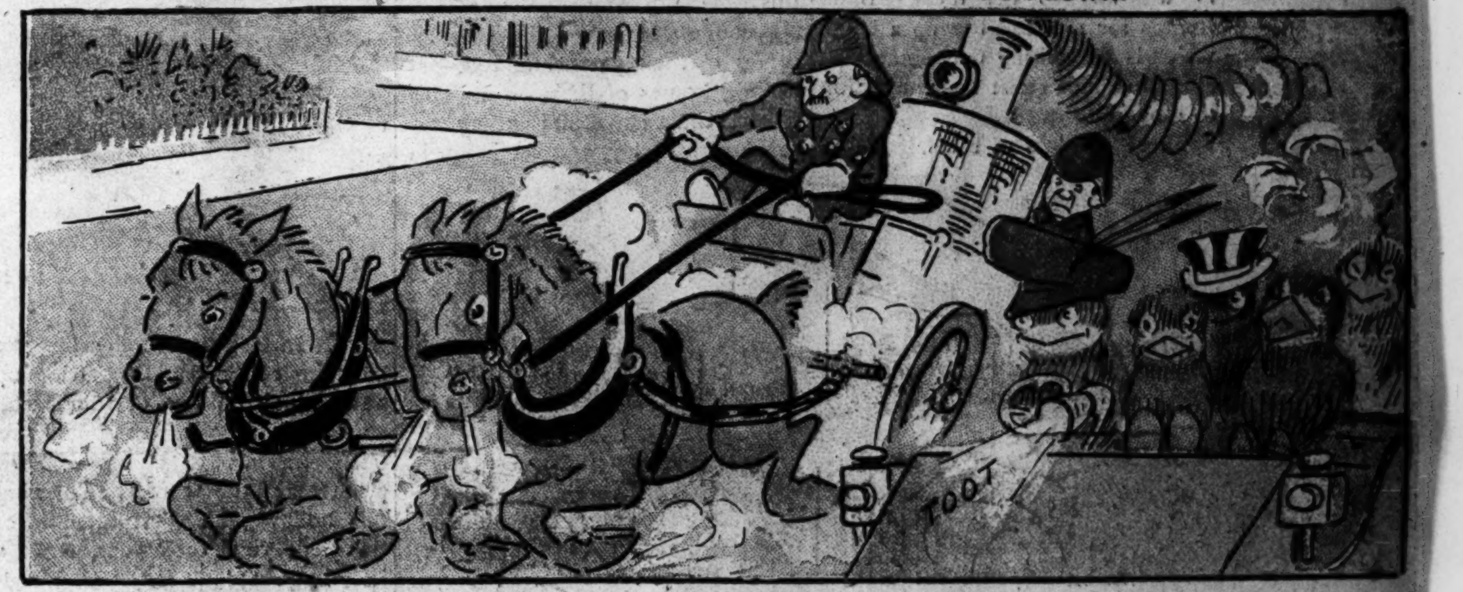
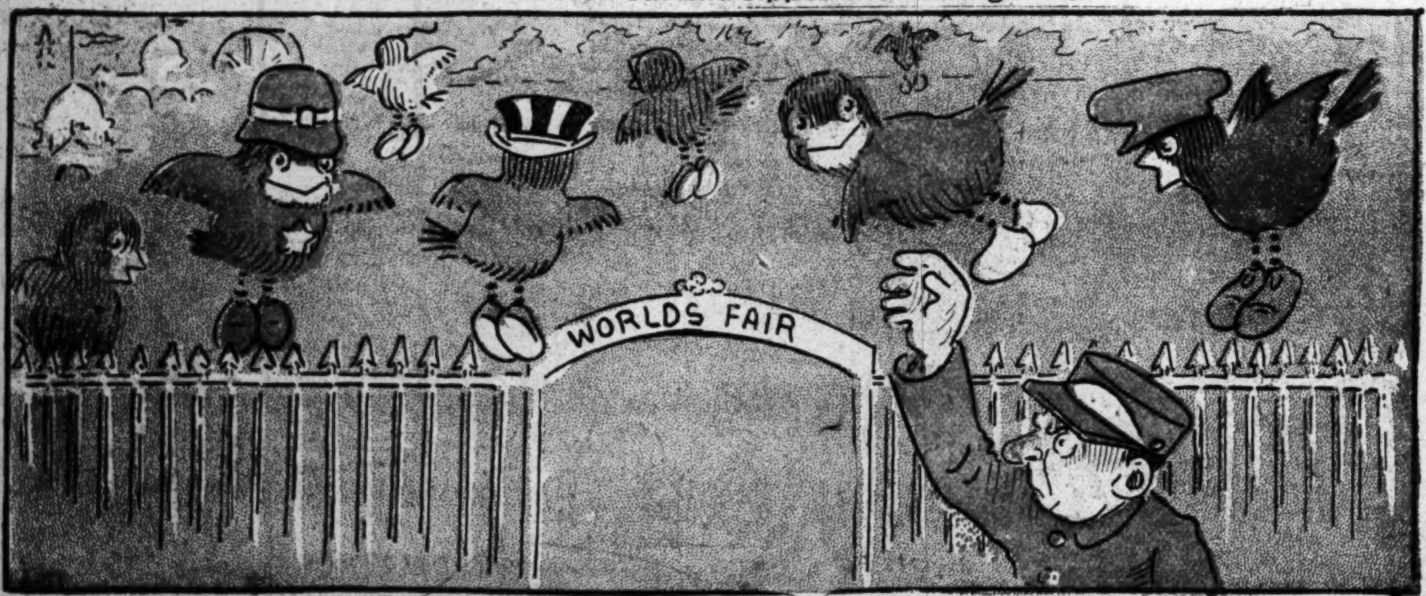
They ran upon the butcher's pig, and laughed to hear him squeal.
An officer rushed in the street, and cried "Too fast! Slow down!"
The Weather Birds rose in their seats and chorused "Go sit down!"



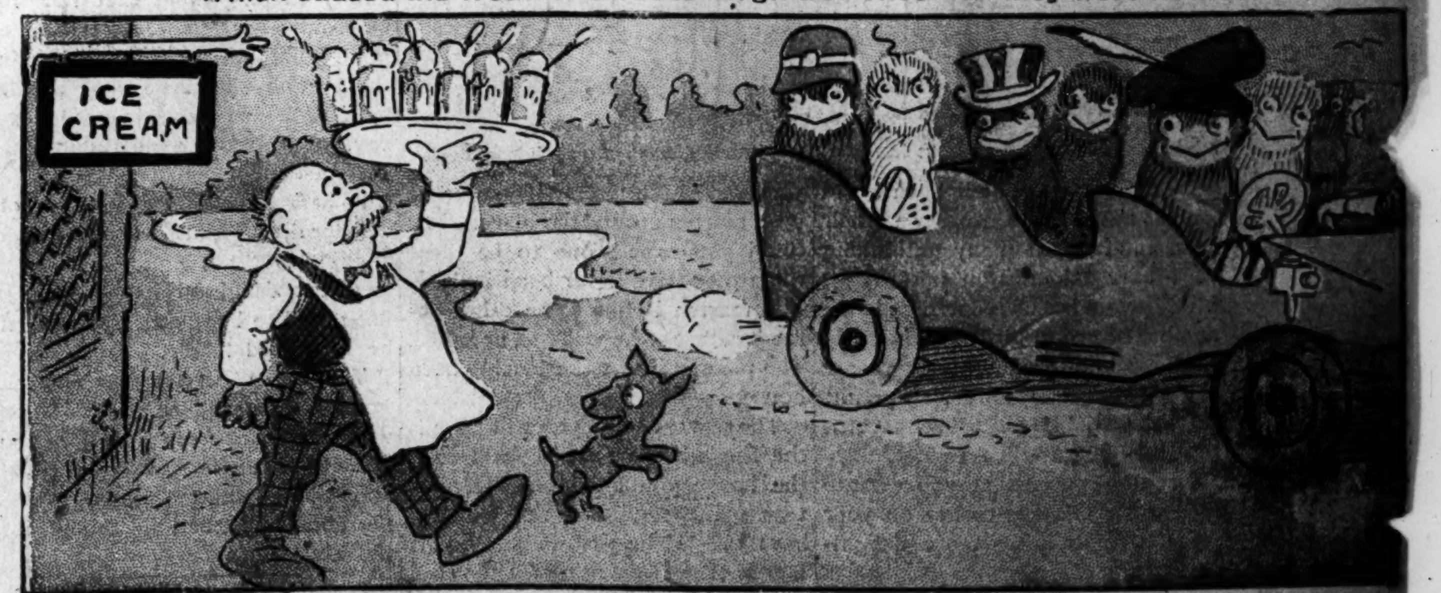
3—Poor Lo peered out and sang "What, Ho! a milkman looms ahead!"
We now shall have our breakfast boys; 'tis time that we were fed.
The auto shot across the road and hit him fine as silk,
And all the Birdies clambered out and sipped the flowing milk.



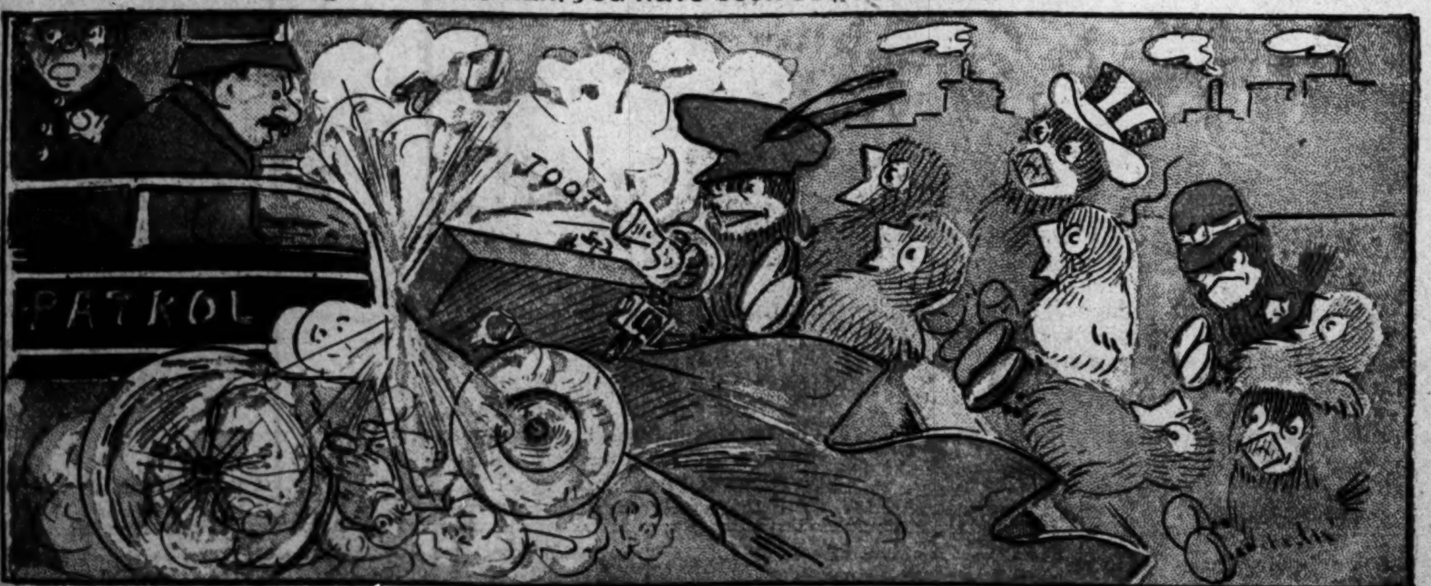
4—They met the firemen on a run, and then a race began;
For blocks and blocks they flew along like horses in a span.
But when the horses tired with work the auto won, of course,
Which caused the Weather Birds to laugh and cheer 'till they were hoarse



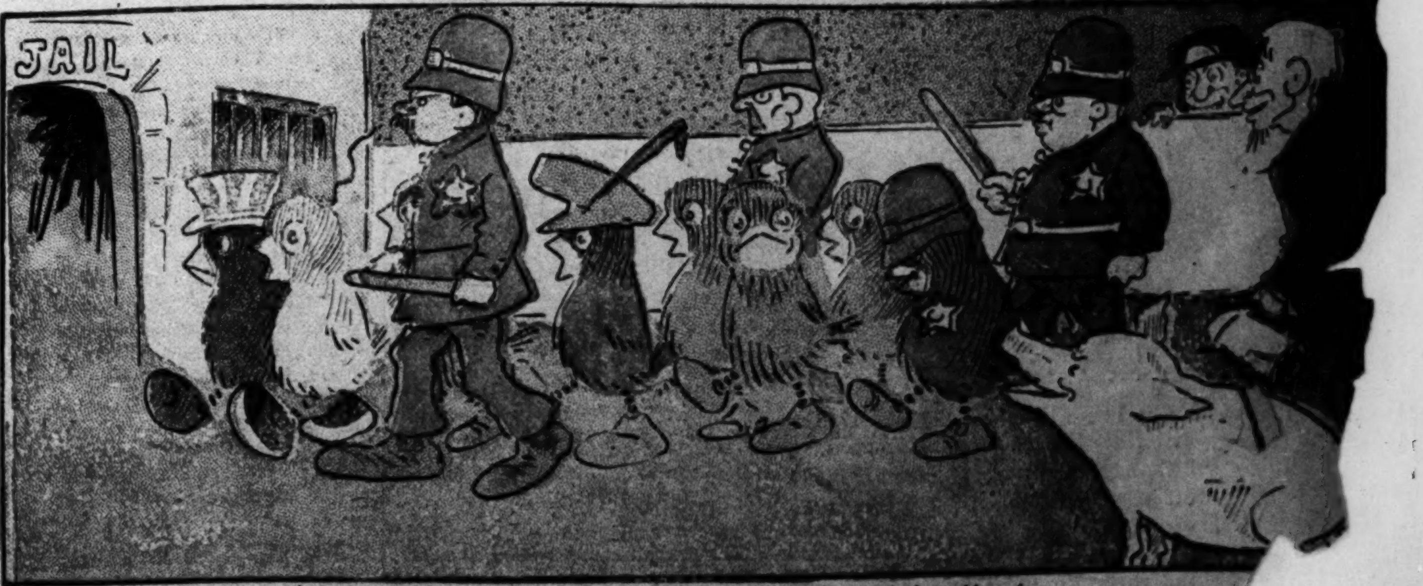
5—At nine o'clock they reached the fair, and when the gateman said:
"The price to get you fellows in is 25 a head,"
They rose upon their wings and sailed high o'er the fence in glee,
A-chirping "Mr. Gateman, you have been so good to me."



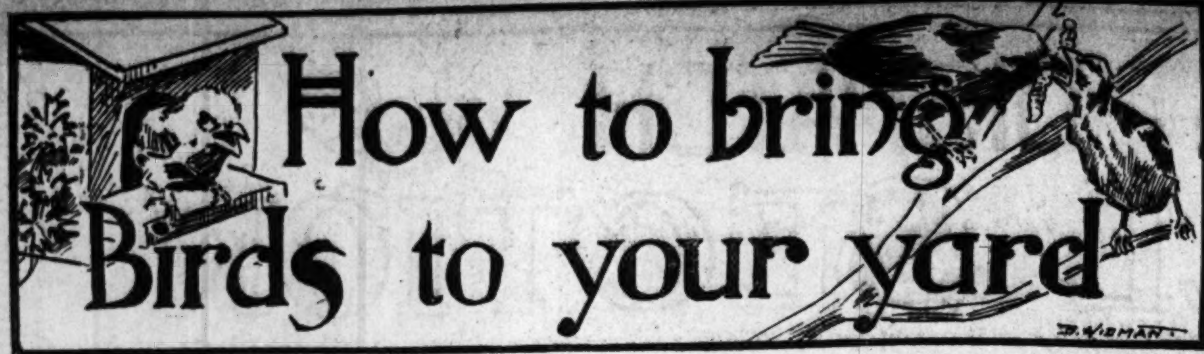
6—A country store loomed up at three, and Lo, the pilot, rang
The auto gong with all his might, and lustily he sang:
"My throat's so dry and parched with dust and dirt and stuff, I'll make
A stop to get a plate of cream and eat a piece of cake.



7—At four o'clock that plate of cream had shaken Poor Lo's head
Until he slept right in his seat as though he were in bed.
The auto darted here and there, and, bound to break the peace,
It had a hard collision with a wagon of police.



8—Alas! For plans and pretty schemes! Alas for celebration!
The Weather Birds were pounced upon, and taken to the station.
The gateman and the butcher's pig, whose turn it was to grin,
And e'en the milkman came to see the blue coats run them in.



How to bring Birds to your yard

WOULD you like to have birds in your yard, boys?

Of course you would. Every boy likes birds. Once there was a boy who did not like birds. He went to sea and was shipwrecked on a barren isle. The ship happened to be loaded with a cargo of pies — gooseberry, apple, blackberry and mince. The waves threw pies on the beach of that island until they lay as thick as the grains of sand; but that boy didn't like pies, so he starved to death.

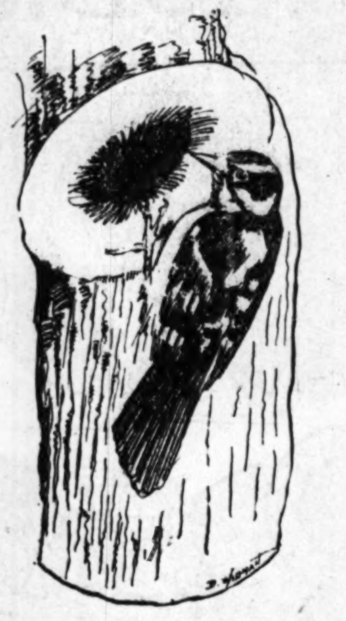
But, of course, this boy was one in a million. The average boy likes both pies and birds. There are few things about birds that he does not know, and fewer he has forgotten. He hears a rat-a-tat on the roof of the house, and knows there is a flicker or a red-headed woodpecker up there. He wakes in the morning to hear a choir of birds singing in the trees beside the house, and he can pick out the song of the thrush, the beautiful notes of the oriole, and the guttural chuckle of the woodpecker.

Are there any of you boys who have no birds in your yards? Here is a way to get them. Build houses for them. Put up a home which is so inviting that some bird simply cannot resist the temptation to move into it.

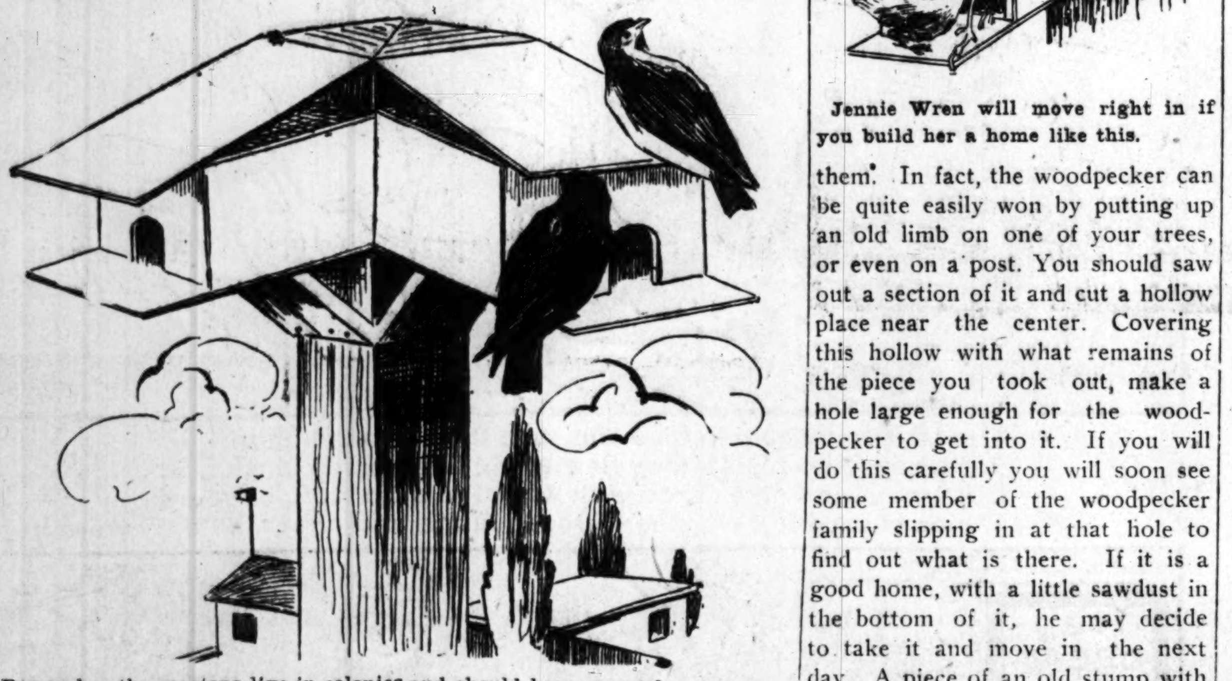
There are lots of birds. To be sure, a great many have been killed for the women to wear on their hats, and a great many unthinking boys have taken from nests eggs which would have increased the number of pretty birds in this world of ours; but for all this there are still a great many birds, and some of them would just as soon come to your yard to live as not.

Let us suppose that you want to induce the martens to live on your place. There is no more delightful bird colony than that of the martens. They are a busy, joyous little band, and they devour a world of insects, whch would injure the vegetation upon the place. Out in the country you often ride along the roads for miles and see marten boxes at every house. Do you know why? The marten is the enemy of the chicken hawk, and whenever a hawk ventures around one of the farms to carry off a chicken, the martens fly out and fight him away.

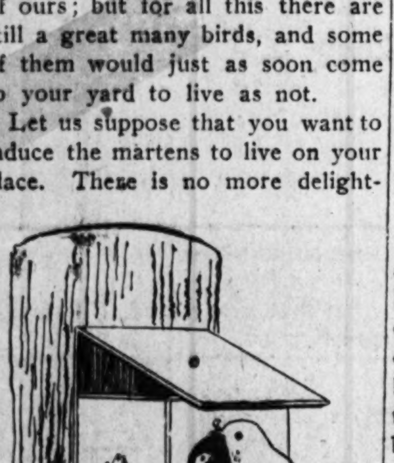
The marten comes North to Missouri in February, and the old birds have long ago taken possession of houses which will be their homes until they leave for the south in the fall. But the young birds will be flying about in May, and about this time in the month they will be big enough to leave the crowded homes of their parents and go out seeking homes of their own. This is your chance. Build a marten house right away, and set it up in your yard. No matter if you never see a marten around the place. How could you expect one to be there when they have never been invited? The marten is like some other polite creatures—he waits to be asked. The picture shows the ideal marten house.



The woodpecker likes a house like this.



Remember the martens live in colonies and should have roomy houses.



This sort of a house suits the bluebird.

The worst enemy you will have is the English sparrow. He will want the house you build for the martens. But you must not let him have it. If he gets in and builds a nest there, you must lift the roof of the box (bird house roofs should always be made with hinges and hook) and take the sparrow nest out and bury it. If you throw it down the sparrows will have it all back in the box within 24 hours if they can get in. If they insist upon building a new nest when you have buried the old one, take an old stocking or something similar, and thrust it into the bird house entrance. If it is placed carefully the sparrows will not be able to pull it out, nor will it permit them to pass in. Now you must watch for the appearance of martens, and when they come around the house and seek to enter it, you must clear the way for them. Once in the house they will not permit the sparrows to displace them. A marten is not that kind of a bird.

There are other birds you may bring to your yard. The pictures shows ideal homes for some of these. You may be lucky enough to get a gray-crested fly catcher, a chickadee, or even a screech owl. Put up as many houses as you can, each a little different from the other. The birds know bird houses when they see them, and they are quick to understand that the house put up in a yard is an invitation for them to move in.

When the hot weather comes you can make friends with the birds in another way. Let the hose run a pool of water in which they may bathe, or let it spray over the gras in a shady place. They love to play in the spray. Don't let cats or dogs run after them. If you are kind to them they will cease to be afraid of you, and you can stand very close to them while they play in the water. If you have no hose for them, put a pan of fresh water in the shade every morning.

Remember that the marten likes the society of other martens and should have a pretty big bird house. Remember, too, that the bluebirds and woodpeckers will be most attracted by a bird house which is long and narrow, somewhat resembling the trees in which they make their nests when bird houses are not provided for them. In fact, the woodpecker can be quite easily won by putting up an old limb on one of your trees, or even on a post. You should saw out a section of it and cut a hollow place near the center. Covering this hollow with what remains of the piece you took out, make a hole large enough for the woodpecker to get into it. If you will do this carefully you will soon see some member of the woodpecker family slipping in at that hole to find out what is there. If it is a good home, with a little sawdust in the bottom of it, he may decide to take it and move in the next day. A piece of an old stump with several of these holes and nests in it sometimes catches a number of woodpeckers. You may be lucky enough to get a pretty downy, a shy, but delightful fellow, who is not afraid to live in a boy's yard if he is treated kindly.

The house wren's house must not be short and narrow. If you will notice this busy little bird you will see that she picks up a great many long stems and twigs, and her house must be long encugh for these.

THE GIRLS' NAMES PUZZLES

A great many people, big and little, worked on the puzzle pictures representing the names of girls. They were published May 3. The number of correct answers indicated an enthusiastic interest. The third picture, representing Lillian, proved the stumbling block of a great many. They were inclined to call it Nellie. THE CIRCUS PARADE—A CUT OUT PUZZLE

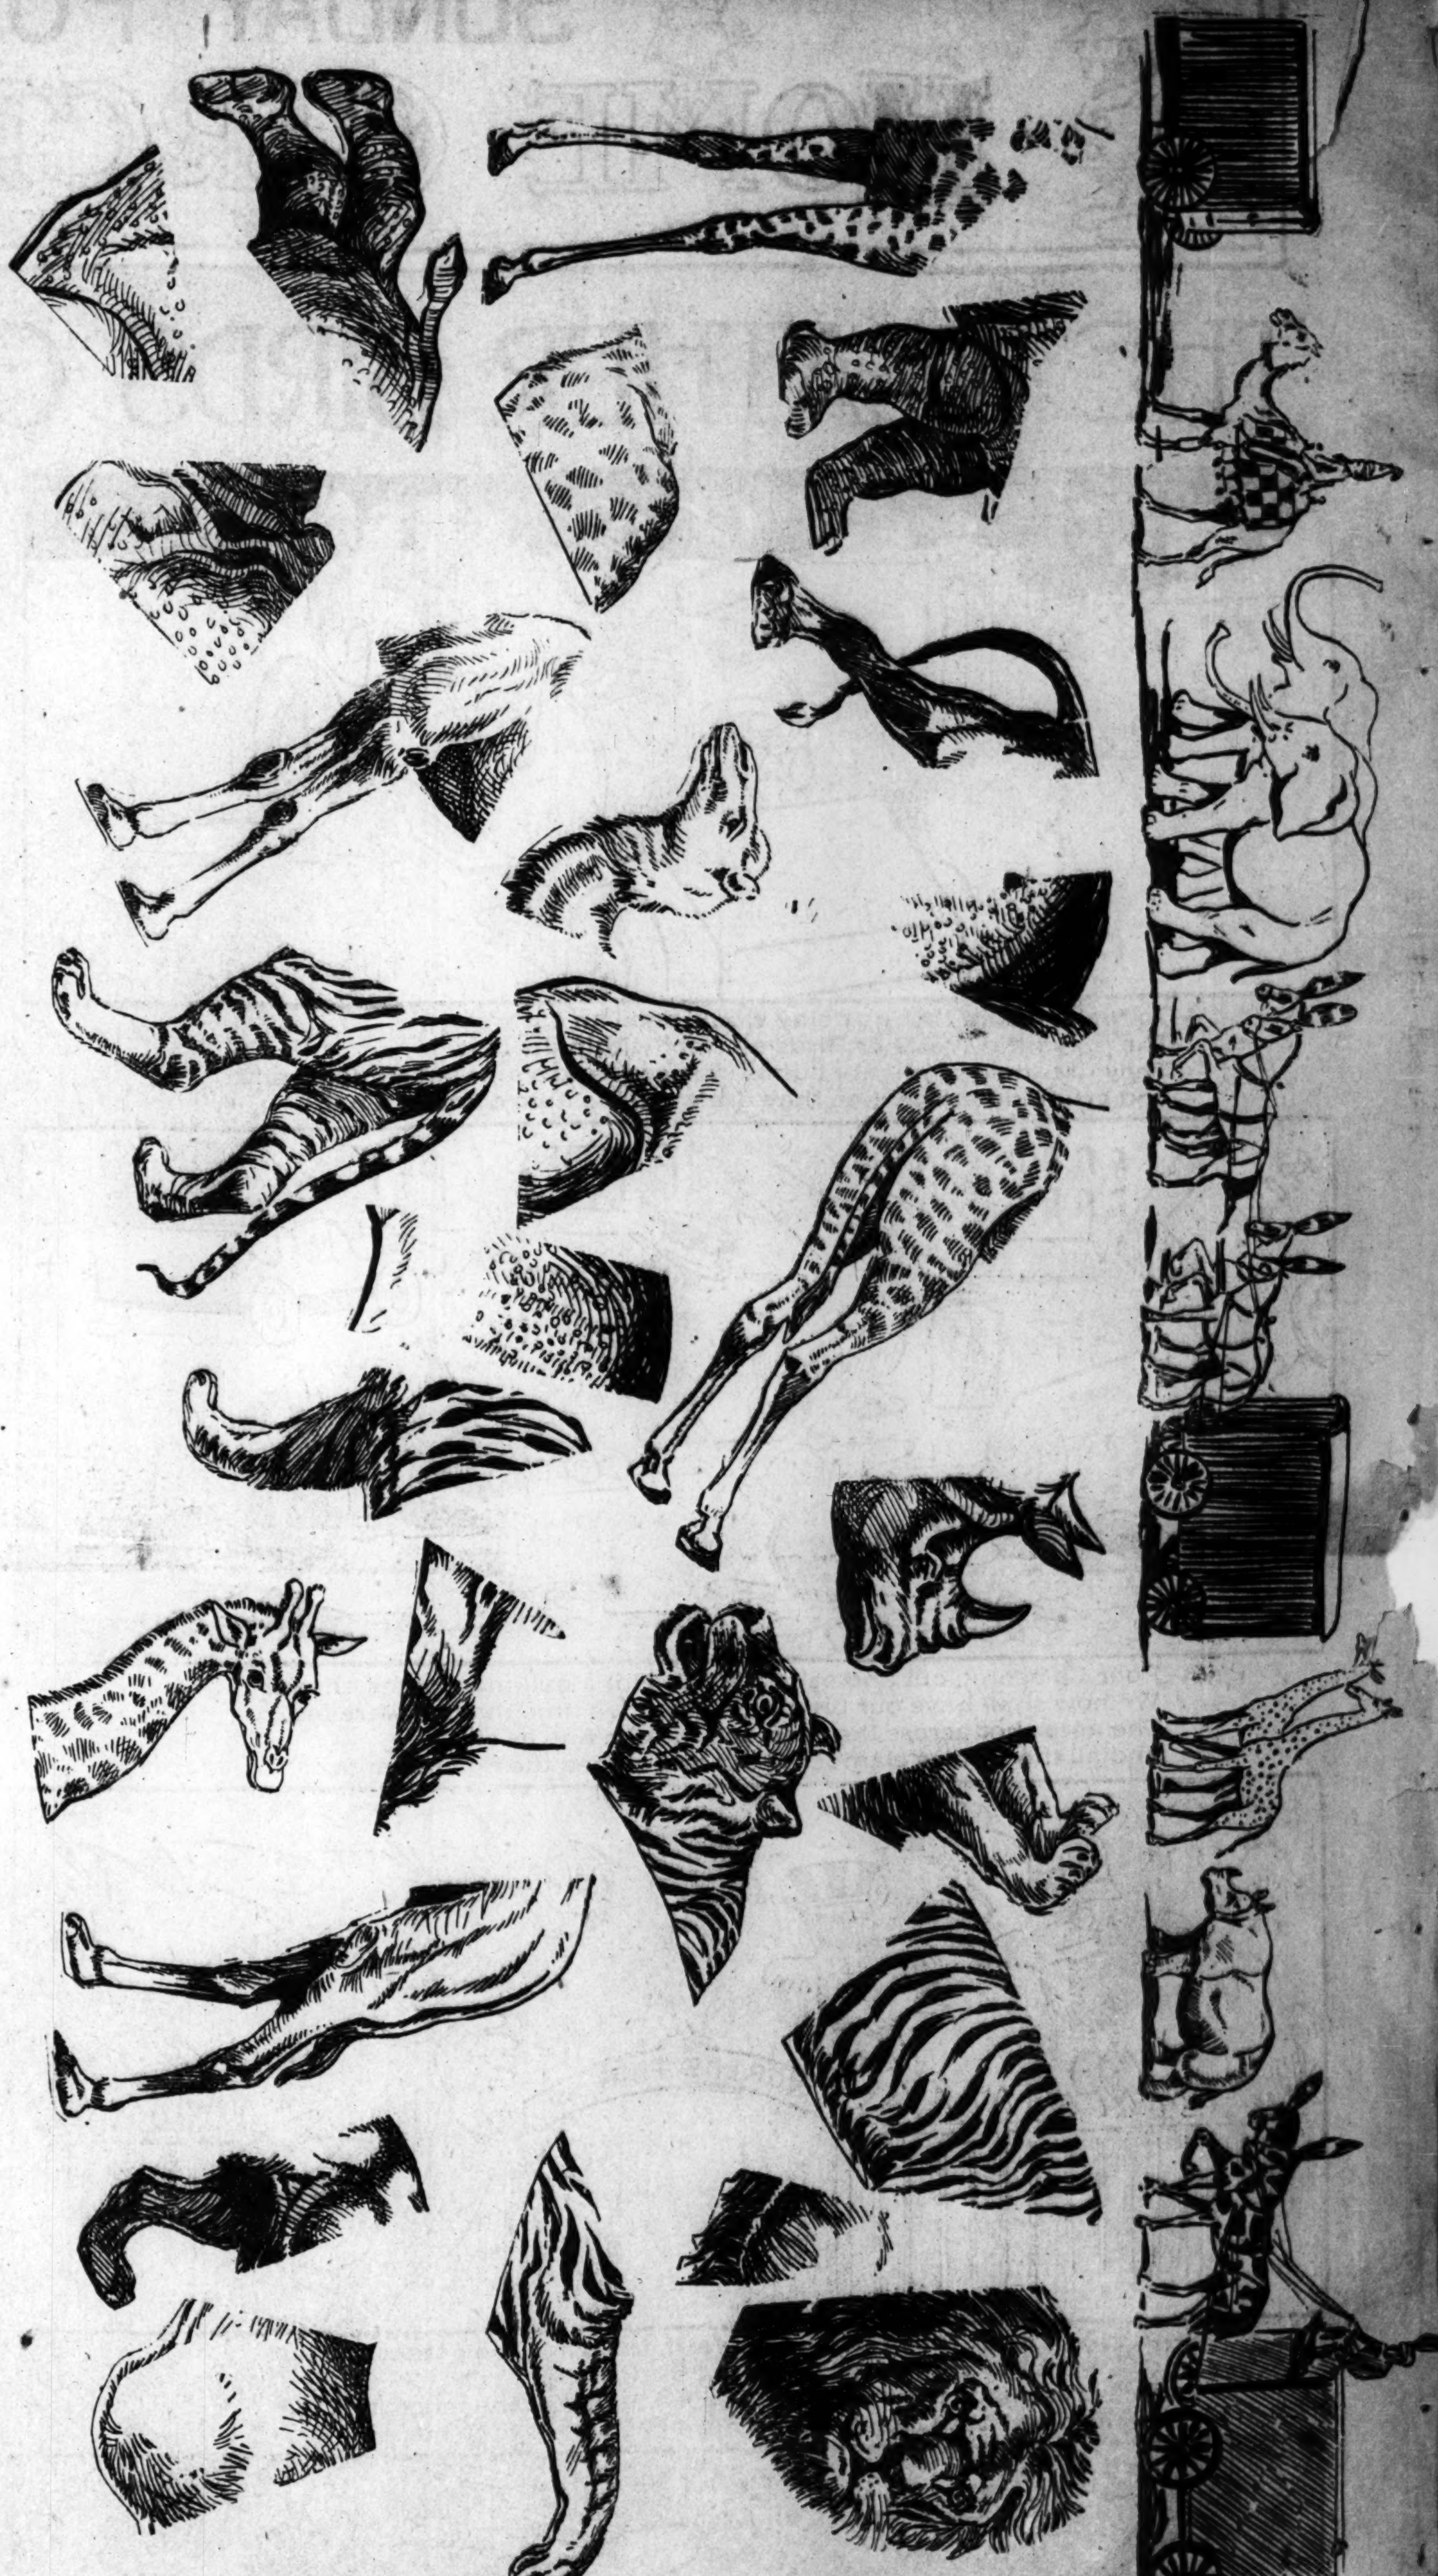
The circus parade going up the side of this page has been badly broken up by the over-enthusiasm accident which happened a boy who was wat[illegible]ing it pass. Can you put the parade together again?



SAID Master Ebenezer Krupp
Unto his pa: "I'll just blow up
If some arrangement isn't made
For me to see the big parade."
Said Father Krupp: "I'll dare to say
You're bound to blow up either way."

So Master Ebenezer and
His father hastened hand in hand
To hear the band;
To see the amply-necked giraffe:
The funny clowns, bedecked; to laugh
And feel their happy hearts a-thump;
To marvel at the camel's hump;
To stand, at times, enraptured, dumb,
A-harkening the big bass drum.

The host that marched for Cesar when
He ruled the world; the countless men
Who thronged the roads to Waterloo
The famous legions, history through,
However great, however small,
Were never in the hunt at all
With that superb array which went
Behind the massive elephant,
While little Ebenezer Krupp,
Now almost ready to blow up,
Stood hypnotized, a-dreaming, dumb,
A-harkening the big bass drum.

The ties that bind the brotherhood
Of man himself, nor hoop of wood,
Nor iron bands, howe'er put up,
Could hold young Ebenezer Krupp
It more than filled his little cup
Of joyousness, and he blew [illegible]

A TRICK WITH FIGURES.

Here is a good mind-reading puzzle. Write a figure on a piece of paper and fold it up so that it is concealed. Ask a member of the home circle to keep this till you call for it. Then ask another member to write three separate figures on a piece while you are blindfolded or rem point where you cannot possibl figures.

The person writes, say 764. Te to reverse the figures thus, 467, him to subtract them thus, 297. ask him to reverse these figures

Then you ask him to add t 1089. If you write 1089 the answer then.

THE LITTLE NOTES WITH TAILS

BY MRS. EUGENE GASKINS.

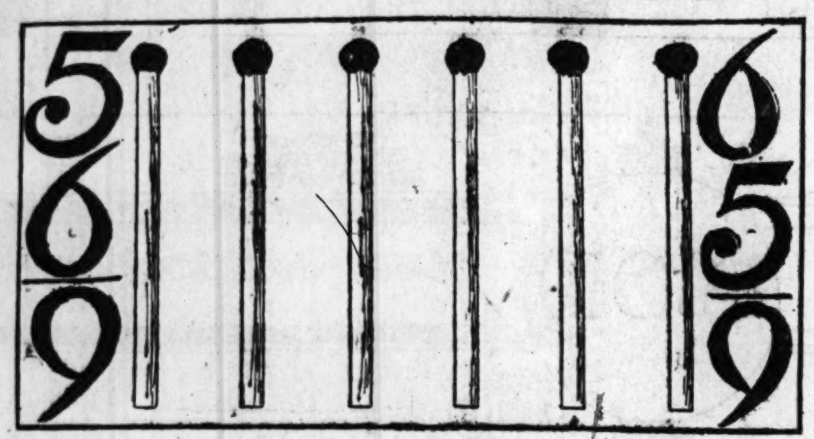
If I were but a little bird
I'd fly so far away
They'd call and look for me in vain
On music lesson day.

I hate those little notes with tails;
I won't count one, two, three.
The minor and chromatic scales
Will be the death of me.

I always sharp when I should flat,
I never finger right.
My teacher says I'm careless when
I try with all my might.

O, if I were a little bird,
For just one music day,
When teacher said: "Play all the scales,"
I'd smile and fly away.

HOW MANY MATCHES HERE?



ANYBODY knows that six matches and five matches do not make nine matches—and yet they can be made to do this very thing. The picture shows six matches. Go to the match box and get 11 matches. Lay six of them on the table and then place the other five in such a manner that they will make nine. You can fool all the members of the family with this trick. They will instantly say that six and five are 11, but you can show them how six and five, if properly placed together, are nine.

MAY WEDDINGS

It is an old, old superstition that May weddings are unpropitious, though of all the months there are none so beautiful as this one of May.

The marriage license records in the city of St. Louis never fail to show more marriages in June than in May, though there is no accounting for it beyond the old rhyme which runs:

Marry when the year is new,
Always loving, kind and true;
When February birds do mate
You may wed, nor dread your fate.
If you wed when March winds blow,
Joy and sorrow both you'll know.
Marry in April when you can,
Joy for maiden and for man;
Marry in the month of May,
You will surely rue the day;
Marry when June roses blow,
Over land and sea you'll go.
They who in July do wed
Must labor always for their bread;
Whoever wed in August be,
Many a change are sure to see.
Marry in September's shine,
Your living will be rich and fine.
If in October you do marry,
Love will come, but riches tarry;
If you wed in bleak November,
Only joy will come, remember;
When December's snows fall fast
Marry, and true love will last.

You may scoff at all this as utter nonsense, but it may surprise you to hear that the superstition that May is an unlucky month in which to get married is 1900 years old. Ovid, the poet of Rome, of the time of Christ, alludes to it.

The superstition has been handed down through the ages and in many countries.

In the north of England there is an old proverb:

Marry in May
And rue the day.

In Scotland they have very much the same saying:

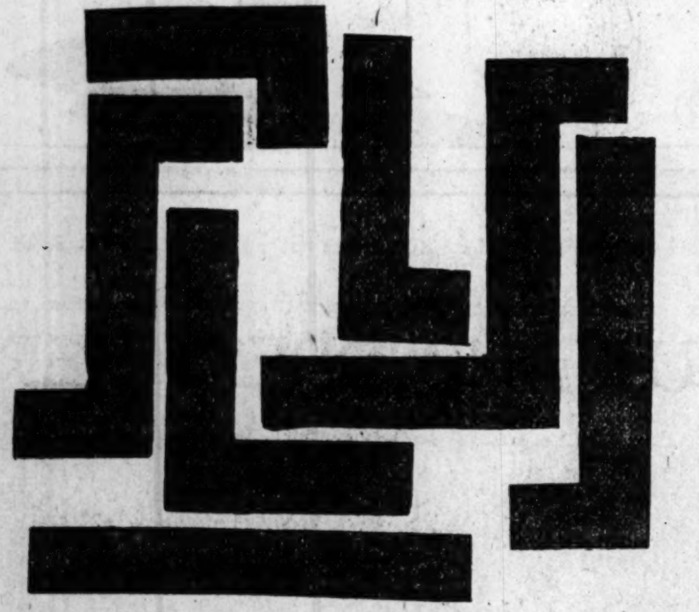
Marry in May,
Rue for aye.

An old Scotch minister warned his youthful hearers that "the girls are all stark mad what wed in May."

Truly heroic was the Scotch couple who would defy the declaration that

Married in May and kirked is green,
Baith bride and groom won't long be seen.

MAKE A CROSS OF THESE PIECES



A LITTLE BOY'S PRAYER.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

A little St. Louis boy became greatly interested one day in hearing his mother read a description of the River of Life from a child's history of the Bible. That night after repeating his accustomed "Now I lay me down to sleep" he added a little prayer of his own: O, Lord, bless dead papa and mamma, and take them to heaven when they die, and bless dear grandpa and take him to heaven when he dies, for there are golden streets there and trees and flowers and there's a beautiful river there, you bet! Amen.

TRY THIS ONE.

HOW many brothers have you living? Take the number and double it. Add 3. Multiply the result by 5. How many living sisters have you? Add this number to your last result. Now multiply your whole by 10. How many brothers and sisters are dead? Add this number to your last result. Now subtract 150 from the resulting number and you will find this to be true:

1. The left hand figure of the result will give the number of your living brothers.
2. The middle figure will show the number of your living sisters.
3. The right hand figure will show the number of dead brothers and sisters.

HA-GOO, A FUNNY CHILDREN'S GAME.

A GAME popular among the Tlinkits, a tribe of Indians in southern Alaska, is called Ha-goo.

The children range themselves in two parallel lines. In the center of one line is a player who holds aloft a pole with a brightly colored piece of cloth floating from it. Then, from the opposite line, advances a little girl who holds out her hand for the decorated stick, while all her companions make faces, say funny things and "cut capers" to make her laugh.

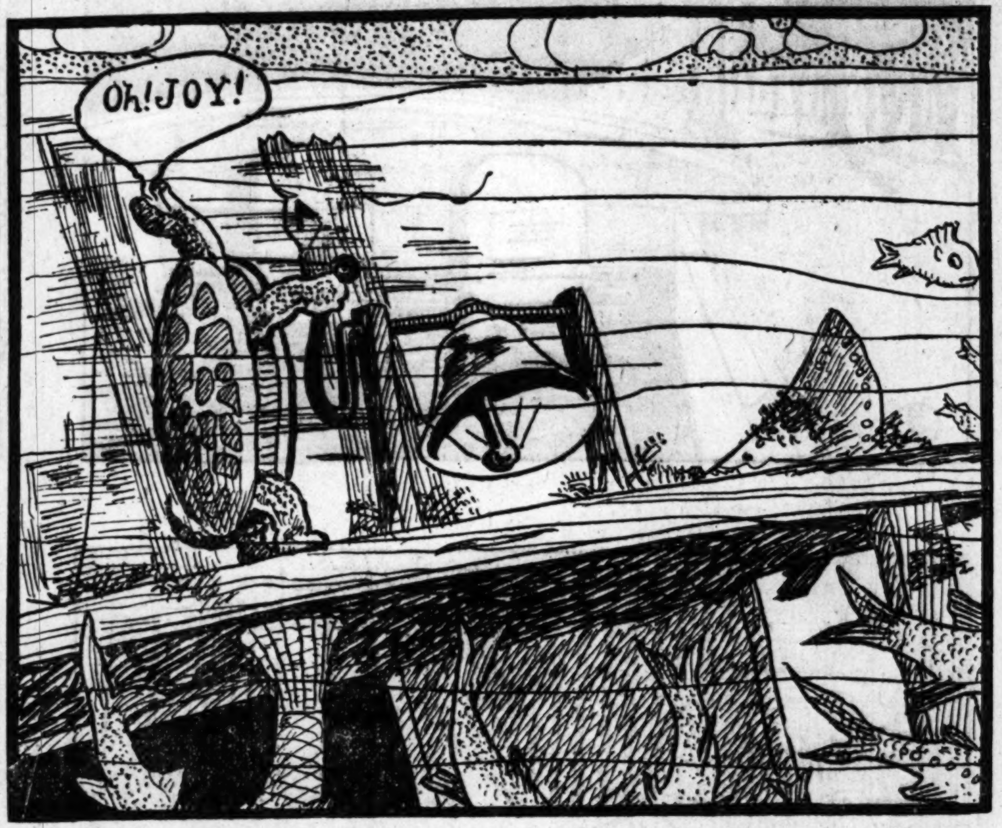
If she smiles, ever so slightly, she is out of the game; but if she can keep a solemn face she takes the stick and goes back to her own line while one of the opposing players moves across the open space and tries in turn to keep a straight face.

This goes on until there remains only one player who has not smiled, and this one wins the game for the side.

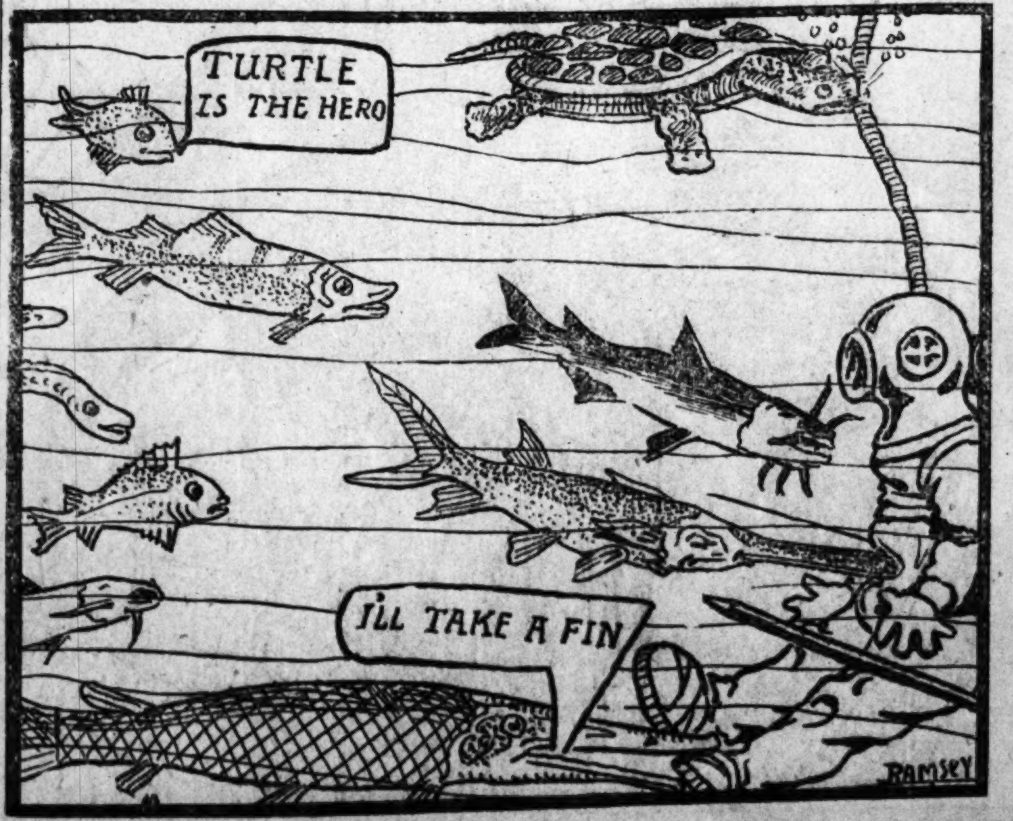
THE H2O CLUB EXPLORES A WRECK

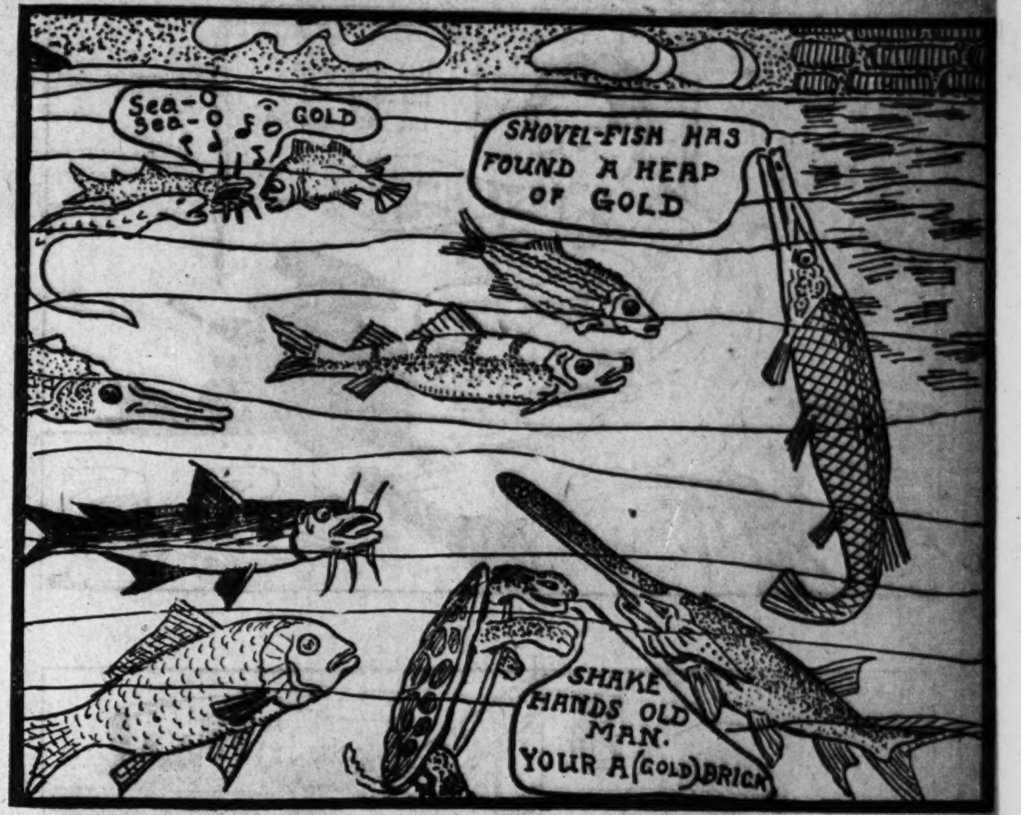
A Ballad of Adventure Among the Fishes.

WHEN next the H2O Club met, the Alligator Gar
Arose and said, "Good morning, fish, today we travel far;
The Shovel Fish has found a wreck, and in the steamer's hold,
He saw the thing we long have sought—a heap of yellow gold."
On hearing this the Buffalo began to roll and bellow,
The Turtle sought the Shovel Fish, and called him noble fellow;
The Eel, the Perch and Channel Cat made up a vocal trio,
And sang that good old pirate song, "There's Gold Down in the Sea, O."



The Turtle laughed so long and loud the fish all saw the trick,
And he was turned upon his back, and languished there to kick.
The Alligator Gar went in and found the pile of gold,
And straightway ev'ry fish of them was working in the hold.
They made a raft and heaped it on, and, pushing hard behind,
Were just about to get away with their enriching find,
When in their very midst appeared a diver big and bold,
Demanding, "Who are you who seek to carry off my gold?"





Sea-O Sea-O GOLD
SHOVEL-FISH HAS FOUND A HEAP OF GOLD
SHAKE HANDS OLD MAN. YOUR A (GOLD) BRICK

The wreck was near the Chain of Rocks so long it had been lost,
That it was covered half with sand, and all the wood was mossed.
It looked so dark and ominous the Minnows were afraid;
It seemed to them a castle where some dreaded giant stayed.
The Shovel Fish encouraged them. He said, "You timid lambs, There's not a creature in the wreck but Water Dogs and Clams."
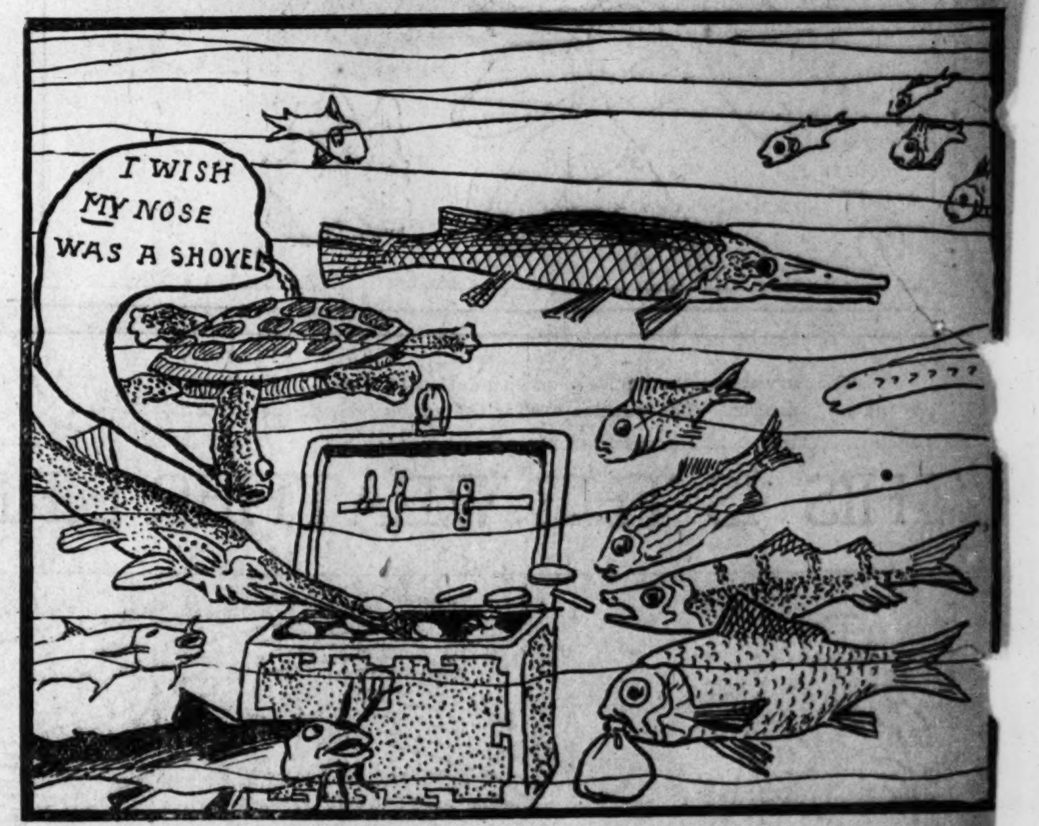
The Turtle thought to have a joke, and slipping to the bell,
He rang it boom! and all the fish went ev'ry way, pell mell.



I WISH MY NOSE WAS A SHOVEL

The giant Gar and Shovel Fish conducte the defense;
They rushed the diver right and left, and filled his suit with dents.
"Stay with him, fish," the Turtle cried, "We ne'er have known defeat!"
For which the diver raised his foot and kicked him on his feet.
The Turtle rushed and bit the tube tha gave the diver air,
And he was forced to quit the wreck a leave the treasure there.
Which caused the fish to dance and si within the steamer's hold,
And then swim homeward joyously arour the raft of gold.
